Mr. Singer: Oh, oh!

An hon. member: We are talking about livestock services.

Mr. Gaunt: We want to talk on livestock services—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): A challenge.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the committee rise and report progress and ask for leave to sit again.

Mr. Chairman: Will the motion carry?

All right, let us clarify this. Did the hon. Minister of Labour wish to speak on livestock services?

Hon. Mr. Carton: I was going to make the same motion.

Mr. Singer: The minister has been demoted.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report progress and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I would ask for unanimous consent to revert to statements, the purpose being that a similar statement to the one that I have is being made in the legislative assembly in Quebec at this time.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the House would agree to a reversion to oral statements by the ministry.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): How long is it going to take the minister to speak?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Be patient. This is in regard to security tax regulations and amendments thereto.

For some time, The Department of Revenue in the Province of Ontario has been aware that the security transfer tax was being applied on certain short-term money transactions, which was resulting in an abnormally high ratio of transfer tax to the profit of such transactions, especially if the transaction was for a relatively short period of time.

This matter has been discussed with our counterparts in the Province of Quebec and it has been agreed that, effective May 1, 1971, by regulation, our respective jurisdictions will not apply the security transfer tax on the sale of short-term money transactions having an original term of repayment of one year or less, in the case of Ontario, or less than one year, in the case of Quebec.

In addition, our two jurisdictions have been concerned about the duplication of security transfer tax which prevailed, when an order was placed by an Ontario resident to sell a security which would be sold through a stock exchange or broker in the Province of Quebec. Both jurisdictions were claiming the tax, and I am happy to announce that effective May 1, 1971, in accordance with the reciprocal provision of our Acts, our respective jurisdictions will arrange for the security transfer tax to be paid when the transaction is placed through the stock exchange or the office of a broker located in our province. If the seller is located in the Province of Quebec, no tax will be levied by that province. Similar tax treatment would prevail in the event of a reversal of conditions.

Personally, I am very pleased that we have been able to work out these arrangements mutually with The Department of Revenue of the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 20th order, House in committee of supply; Mr. A. E. Reuter in the chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND FOOD

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1971

The House resumed at 8 o'clock, p.m.

On vote 102, item 7:

Mr. Chairman: When we recessed at the supper hour the hon. member for Grey-Bruce was—

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): On a point of order, might I ask the House Leader whether the announcement made by the Minister of Tourism and Information, the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Guindon) about a fall election was accurate or not? On the CBC news at 6:30 the hon. member for Stormont was quoted in French as saying there is a fall election coming up. I wonder whether it is accurate or not?

Mr. Chairman: It is hardly a point of order.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): I think it is hardly a point of order, Mr. Chairman, and I do not follow the CBC in the dinner hour. I did not hear it.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. L. M. Reilly (Eglinton): Before the hon. member for Grey-Bruce starts I wonder if he would permit an intervention. There are some friends and members and officers from the Progressive Conservative Association from Eglinton riding that I would like you, along with the members of the House, to welcome.

Mr. Young: There are that many Tories in Eglinton?

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Most of them look like Liberals.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Yes, I think there are a lot of Liberals there.

Mr. Chairman: Now the hon. member for Grey-Bruce on item 7 of vote 102.

Mr. Sargent: On vote 102, Mr. Chairman. Before I ask the minister a few questions,

I would like to repeat the question put by the hon. member for Yorkview. If that was a matter of record, I think we have a right to know as a matter of personal privilege.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member is out of order. We are dealing with item 7 of vote 102.

Mr. B. Newman: But it is an important question.

Mr. Sargent: The chairman would like to know himself.

Mr. Chairman: It is the incorrect time to ask such a question. When the member finds out, let me know.

Mr. Sargent: I will. But do not get too rough here now.

Mr. Chairman, the auditor's report probably has been mentioned by my colleague, our agricultural critic, in reference to the situation of junior farmer loans. The amount that the minister is asking for in this vote is $1.76 million, and the Provincial Auditor is concerned about the fact that net advances of $3.9 million are necessary to retire the outstanding amounts. I understand the loans were cut off in 1969. The junior farmer loans were set up in 1952 and for 17 years we had a total—well there are 5,667 loans still outstanding, as I understand it.

Could the minister first of all advise, Mr. Chairman, the amount of moneys in accumulated loans still outstanding—the amount of the moneys outstanding?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): The total amount as of January 31, 1971, was $98,727,257.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you. We then have $98 million recoverable. What is the experience? The revenues fall far short of the moneys needed to clear this amount. Is that not right?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes. The interest rate, the hon. member will understand, is four per cent on some of the loans and five per cent on the remainder of the loans—that is, when they were made. There were 3,828 loans made at four per cent and 1,228 loans are still out at four per cent with a value of almost $4 million. The remainder out are at five per cent—$94,785,000 at five per cent—that is, 4,288 at five per cent are still out. We pay the going rate of interest; so that what we get in, we have to make up the difference. That is where that money comes from.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you. The auditor says that no confirmation of the mortgage principle was obtained from the debtors concerned. Is the minister concerned about the ability to pay off these mortgages?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well I am concerned about the ability of anyone to pay off a mortgage. But the history of the repayment has been very good.

Mr. Sargent: These loans were cut off in 1969. Why were they cut off?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this is somewhat redundant.

Mr. Sargent: Why?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We have been into this before—we have gone into it on every occasion. Our estimates have been up since that time.

We withdrew the junior farmer loan programme and concentrated the money we were putting out in that in expanding our extension service and farm management programme. We were in direct competition with the Farm Credit Corporation loan which was at a standard rate of interest. We were offering a very slight subsidized interest at that time and still would be if we were in the field at that rate of interest. We simply withdrew from the junior farmer loan field and the federal government has been carrying it all since then.

Mr. Sargent: First of all, Mr. Chairman, I would like to remind the minister that nothing is redundant in this Legislature. I would not ask him if I knew the answer to it and I have the right, for my people, to know the answers. The fact is, there are farm credit loans available in the Province of Quebec—is that right?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No.

Mr. Sargent: They are not?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, they are available. They pay a subsidy on the interest supplied by the Farm Credit Corporation.

Mr. Sargent: Are the junior farmer loans available to the Quebec farmers?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not to my knowledge. They pay a subsidy on the interest rate on Farm Credit Corporation loans.

Mr. Sargent: My information is that the junior farmer loan programme in the Province of Quebec is subsidized by the government to an amount of five per cent. The net cost is 2.5 per cent of the money there.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is quite right, but it is not a provincial government loan. It is a federal loan subsidized by the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Sargent: Does the minister not think that this puts the farmers in Ontario at a disadvantage then, when they can borrow money five per cent cheaper than we can here?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Certainly, in that respect it does.

Mr. Sargent: So what gives the minister the right to think that our farmers do not deserve the same treatment they do? They are competing in the same market.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not necessarily.

Mr. Sargent: The minister says my questions are redundant. Has he explained to the rest of the House why our farmers do not have the same treatment then?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, many times.

Mr. Sargent: Would he please tell me why they should not have the same treatment?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: For the information of the hon. member, we feel there are so many advantages that our farmers do have regarding climate, soil and quality, generally speaking, in comparison with farmers in—

Mr. Sargent: That is a lot of nonsense. We are talking money, we are not talking soil.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We simply do not think that the subsidized interest rate which was provided under the junior farmer loan programme was really a great advantage to the farmers involved.

My hon. friend was a business man and he knows the intricacies of the business world far better even than I attempt to know. He knows full well that you can pay a great deal more per acre for a farm if you are buying that farm at five per cent or four per cent than if you are buying it, at say, eight or nine per cent. The farm organizations in this province made no secret of the fact that there was no real benefit being provided to the farmers of Ontario through a highly subsidized interest loan paid out of the pocket of the taxpayers of this province because the real problem was that the land values escalated to such an extent that the farmer was paying far more in total per acre for land than he is today at a much less subsidized interest rate for farm loans.

I do not think that there has been anything that has taken the heat off the land market quite the same as the fact that there is not a subsidized loan available for farm purchase purposes. There is nothing else that I know of that has had that effect.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): That is the justification.

Mr. Sargent: Nothing has taken the heat off.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is one of the reasons, my hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition says.

Mr. Nixon: That is a very thin justification for revoking the junior farmer loan programme.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is one of the reasons. My hon. friends can argue about it, it is a good political talking point.

Mr. Sargent: You bet your boots it is.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, that is fine and I gather that is why you are stressing the point. Of course, it is. There is no other reason for your suggesting it, because it has been debated in this House every time since we withdrew the loan.

Mr. Sargent: And it always will be.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, that is fine. You can carry right on doing it, but I am taking the advice of farm advisers that we have across this province through the farm organizations, and that is what they have told us.

Mr. Sargent: It all depends who is wearing—

Mr. Nixon: The minister has a different justification every year.

Mr. Sargent: It all depends who is wearing the hat and looking after the farmer. We have justifications by everyone of your caucus to give forgiveness loans to industry right across the board. There are hundreds of millions of dollars to industry, to foreign industry.

Mr. G. W. Innes (Oxford): Foreigners, Americans!

Mr. Sargent: But he says to us that the farmers are not justified in getting forgiveness loans. They do not get forgiveness loans—never. You cannot even subsidize their loans.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, let me bring to my hon. friend's attention the capital grants programme that we have out today—over $6 million a year in total absolute grants.

Mr. Nixon: To help cut down elm trees.

Mr. Sargent: Six million dollars.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not repayable but total grants payable out—that is what we have been paying; it is available to farmers.

Mr. Sargent: I do not see it in there.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We dealt with it the other night. If the member had been here, he would have heard about it. Is it right there in the estimates.

Mr. Sargent: I was here.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is right there in the estimates. Now there it is. Forty per cent up to a maximum of $3,000 per farmer in this province is available in capital grants.

Mr. Sargent: Is that not a big deal? The government loans millions to Americans, though—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: To each farmer.

Mr. Sargent: Three thousand dollars. Is the minister not a big spender?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Total that up against the number of farm people there are in the Province of Ontario and you run into several millions of dollars a year. That is what has been paid out and what we will continue to pay out if the farmers want it. It is a 12-year programme and we are in the fifth year of it now.

My hon. friend did not even know that.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, we have pretty well established the fact that this minister feels it is okay to give loans to industry and every other part of the economy, but the farmer is not important in this regard. But the Quebec farmer has a five per cent premium over the Ontario farmer in this regard. Here we have in this budget an amount of $1,750,000 the minister is asking us for on this vote.

Mr. D. A. Evans (Simcoe Centre): The member is way out of line.

Mr Sargent: Mr. Chairman, it is costing us $131,000 to administer a defunct corporation. It is costing $131,000 in salaries and wages to administer a corporation that is broke; it is non-operative. In other words, the minister is paying out 10 per cent of the money he is asking to operate it. What the hell do they do to earn $131,000 a year for an operation that is dead?

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Did.

Mr. Sargent: How can the minister justify those kinds of salaries?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The junior farmer loan branch continues in operation for the simple reason that we have 5,500 loans out and they have to be serviced. We have to have someone there to collect the money, to look after the servicing of those loans. That is part of the reason. The lawyers who are in the junior farmer loan branch service all the loans that are brought through ARDA. The land evaluators work through the ARDA branch as well. It is charged up to this junior farmer loan board vote that we have here, but it is a joint effort.

Mr. Sargent: How many employees does the minister have?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There are 15. Two less than there were last year.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): What do the lawyers do?

Mr. Sargent: Fifteen employees? What do they do?

Mr. Bullbrook: What do those lawyers do? Write discharges?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not necessarily; some do, yes. But they also do all of the legal work for ARDA, or the land purchases under ARDA.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, this may not sound like a lot of money but it goes to show further the complete inefficiency. Here we have a loan setup that is already broke; they are defunct; they are not operative any more. They are not giving any more loans, but we are paying out $131,000 to operate an operation that is not operating any more.

Mr. Nixon: It is $160,000.

Mr. Sargent: Of course, that is to pick up the lack of recording of interest, that $160,000.

Mr. Nixon: No, $160,000 in costs in addition to that.

Mr. Sargent: My leader is right—$160,000 to supervise an operation that is dead.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): That is right, straighten him out.

Mr. Sargent: The logical conclusion, I would say as far as a businessmen is concerned, is that it should be part of the Treasury to collect receivables; no other way.

An hon. member: That is an idea.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Chairman, under this vote the minister has $100,000 set aside for rabies indemnities in the province. Has rabies increases or decreased or is rabies under control in this province?

Mr. Chairman: What item is that under?

Mr. Spence: I thought it was $100,000 here.

Mr. Chairman: It is not under this. We are dealing with item 7 which is the Ontario junior farmer loan.

Mr. Spence: I am sorry.

Mr. Sargent: It is on page 21.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further on item 7?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Yes, I wanted to ask—

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Oxford was on his feet first.

Mr. Singer: I will gladly give way to the hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: Mr. Chairman, the minister mentions there are 5,500 loans still in existence: How many of these are transferred? Suppose a young farmer under the age of 35 bought a farm today—one that is currently carrying a junior farmer loan, can he carry on that loan? Is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, it is transferable.

Mr. Innes: The hon. minister says he can do that if he happens to pick the right farm and finds that there is a junior farmer loan on currently?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mr. Innes: Has the public the availability of finding the list of farmers in the province who are currently carrying a junior farmer loan?

An hon. member: That is in the registry office, is it not?

Mr. Innes: If I were a junior farmer and said I would like to get a list of the farms in the Province of Ontario that have loans that are currently being carried under The Junior Farmer Loan Act—if I were a young farmer I think I might want to go out and buy one. Could I get a list of them?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That list is not available to the public.

Mr. Innes: Would it be available to me as a member of Parliament?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is not available to the public.

Mr. Bullbrook: It is public knowledge.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: No it is not. It is private business.

Mr. Bullbrook: Are the mortgages not registered?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mr. Bullbrook: Then it is public knowledge.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Sure it is.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well why does the hon. minister hide it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: If the hon. member wants to go to the registry office and look it up that is fine.

Mr. Bullbrook: Why put the onus on the individual?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not think my hon. friend from Sarnia would really want the Province of Ontario to publish a list of all those who held a mortgage from the junior farmer loan.

Mr. Sargent: Do not publish it, make it available.

Mr. Bullbrook: It is public knowledge. He is not asking the hon. minister to make a list. He is not asking the hon. minister to do that.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, it may be. But surely that is not the prerogative of the junior farmer. I am amazed at my hon. friend suggesting that.

Mr. Nixon: Oh come on!

Mr. Innes: Just on the weekend I had a farmer ask if he could get them. I said, "As far as I know, yes."

Mr. Evans: When did the hon. member pay his off?

Mr. Innes: Thank you.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further on this item?

Mr. Sargent: He can buy and sell all of you!

Mr. Chairman: The member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, of the 15 staff that the minister has in this branch, how many of them are lawyers?

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: Too many.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Two.

Mr. Singer: Two? And those are in addition to the three lawyers that he has in the legal branch?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is right.

Mr. Singer: What are the salaries of those two lawyers?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Sixteen or $17,000.

Mr. Singer: Each? And what do they do?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: As my hon. friend would have heard me explain, had he been here earlier—

Mr. Singer: I was at the hockey game. I am sorry. I just came in.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I explained that they not only do the legal work on these mortgages—

Mr. Nixon: All the legal work in a fund that has not issued a loan in three years?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —they also do the work that is done for ARDA—the purchase of land under ARDA. These same two lawyers do that.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, what legal work is there to do? It is my understanding that this fund has not loaned out any money in three years. He has a legal staff in his head office—three lawyers—and an expenditure of—

Mr. Sargent: One hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Mr. Singer: No, no—of $81,700 for the legal branch. Has it ever occurred to the minister that he could amalgamate these two things? It really does not take a great deal of time for a number of lawyers to draw up discharges. Why could he not put this branch into his head office, in the legal branch?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I suppose we could transfer those legal offices to the legal branch of the main office. I suppose there is no reason why we could not. They have got to be paid whether they are in that branch or in the other one, and as far as we are concerned—

Mr. Singer: But since they are not issuing any new loans what work is there to do? There are no titles to search anymore.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There are discharges. We have over 5,500 loans to service and there are those to discharge.

Mr. Singer: Yes, but surely lawyers are not needed to service loans. The minister needs bookkeepers—maybe an adding machine—perhaps an accountant. What does a lawyer do in servicing a mortgage loan?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have explained—

Mr. Singer: What does he do?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: He works on the discharge of the mortgages that are—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: All right—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Now just let me tell my hon. friend that as far as ARDA properties are concerned there were 650 individual properties purchased last year under ARDA—

Mr. Sargent: That is 12 a week—two a day.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —and our lawyers do those kind of things as well and all the legal work—the searching of titles and that kind of work. Now if there are too many lawyers the hon. member can take a look at it. I have no desire to keep a group of lawyers around—

Mr. Sargent: One and one-half a day.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —at public expense. If we have too many we will get rid of them. It is as simple as that.

Mr. Singer: Are they busy in administering mortgage loans? Is that first part of the minister's answer correct or has he withdrawn that now?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, it is not. They have to look after the work that is done in the junior farmer loan branch. It is the legal work of the junior farmer loan branch. They also have to look after the clearing of titles with 650—

Mr. Sargent: It is not the loan branch; it is the recovery programme you are on.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, that is true, but there are mortgages to discharge.

Mr. Sargent: There is no more loan branch then?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Maybe we have a misnomer on the title. We call it the junior farmer loans branch. Six hundred and fifty properties were purchased last year under ARDA and now we have those matters—

Mr. Singer: All right. Let us deal with the administering of the mortgages. I suggest to the minister that to look after a mortgage loan he does not need lawyers; he needs bookkeepers. So far as preparing discharges, I do not know if the minister is familiar with what the discharge of a mortgage is, but it is a simple one-page document that can be prepared by any legal clerk. The tariff of fees in the county of York for preparing one of these is $20. Now how much of their time is spent in preparing discharges of mortgages on the advice of the bookkeepers?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I cannot really answer that question, I have not got it at my fingertips.

Mr. Singer: Well I think you should. I think you should come prepared to discuss your estimates.

Now the second thing you talk about is the purchase of 650 properties under the ARDA scheme. All right: Who certifies the title, your lawyers or other lawyers; or do you hire outside lawyers?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am told that the certification of the titles is done by the legal agents, not only in our office, but in the county offices.

Mr. Singer: Oh I see. So you hire, I presume, 650 legal agents.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I would not think that.

Mr. Singer: Well, yes, I would think one for each title. Maybe you add a number together, so that one lawyer may certify a flock of them. So it may not be 650, but you pay 650 fees for the certification of those 650 ARDA titles, not through your legal branch but through outside lawyers. Is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It could be that a certain amount would be paid. I cannot tell you the exact figures.

Mr. Singer: All right. Well then, let me come back to your lawyers in this branch. What do they do?

An hon. member: Not enough to play bridge.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: My hon. friend does not think they do enough. We will have to get rid of them. Maybe there will be two extra lawyers on the market. Who knows?

Mr. Singer: Well, do I gather then that the minister has finally recognized that he has got far too much professional staff in here that really is not doing anything? Is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, it is not, I can assure you.

Mr. Singer: All right; that is fine.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, one further question: I would ask the minister to comment on the statement of the auditors. It says, in summary, no confirmation of mortgage loans principal was obtained from the debtors concerned. Is that not the function of the lawyers, the legal staff?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I would not imagine they would be confirming that many loans. I would think that the mortgage itself would be confirmation of the debt.

Mr. Sargent: But the Auditor General says it is not.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, that is his opinion and I am sure I am not disputing it at all.

Mr. Sargent: Oh! He is right then?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, he is obviously right that they have not been confirmed by personal contact.

Mr. Sargent: Then why do you not as minister get on top of these boys and say, "Get cracking and get this cleaned up here"?

Mr. Innes: Mr. Chairman, while we are on this same subject—and it is something that the hon. member for Huron-Bruce was speaking about—the credit situation as it applies to farmers and where to go to get the proper deal, so to speak, or the best interest rate possible: I think it was in the farm income report where they did mention about incorporating the junior farmer loans with the federal system in an overall system of new financing; is there any segment of your department that has given some study to ways and means whereby they could set up some type of an agricultural bank of some description that could, in all fairness, give this type of advice, without going to the loan sharks so to speak? Is the minister giving any study to this?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is the whole purpose of the farm management programme of which I spoke this afternoon. Our emphasis is entirely on farm management counselling and advice in helping farmers to make decisions on credit, sources of credit and all the rest of it. The government does not have a central credit bank, but we certainly do help to provide that information to farmers.

Mr. Innes: There must be one person who looks after this. Who is in charge of this particular area?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Of farm management?

Mr. Innes: Yes. Who is in charge of looking into the equitable way of financing a farm?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is an extension branch responsibility.

Mr. Innes: Who is in charge of it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Art Bennett is the director.

Mr. Innes: I beg the minister's pardon?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Arthur Bennett, A. G. Bennett is the director of extensions for the province on all of the—

Mr. Innes: He is trained in financial matters or accounting?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, not he necessarily, but there are people throughout the province who are. They are strategically located in regional offices right throughout the province. Each of our agricultural representatives has received special in-service training in farm management and credit management.

Mr. Innes: Okay. Who would be the man the farmers in my area would go to see? Who would be the contact man, other than the agriculture representative if, in fact, there is a special man?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. R. E. Heard in London. He is stationed in the Department of Agriculture's London office and he covers those counties in which the member's Oxford riding is located.

Mr. Chairman: Item 7?

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, as I think about what the minister has told me in response to the questions I posed earlier, the money paid for the searching of these 650 titles really is not disclosed in this vote, is it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, I do not think so.

Mr. Singer: It would be disclosed in the vote under 103? Under ARDA?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is right.

Mr. Singer: The next one. So that in this vote of $1,760,800 there is really nothing for the searching of the 650 titles the minister was talking about?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I was led to believe that was the reason they were engaged. I questioned this vote when my estimates were being prepared and I was advised—

Mr. Singer: Oh, yes?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —that this was the case. Now if this is not the case I can assure my hon. friend that there is going to be a thorough look taken at the administration of the junior farmer loan branch.

Mr. Singer: That is fair enough.

Could the minister advise me, or could he by the time we come to the next vote, of the amount of money that was paid to outside lawyers for searching these 650 titles? Perhaps the minister has not got the information now but by the time we get to the next vote, he may.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not know.

Mr. Singer: Secondly, could the minister advise me of the number of lawyers who were retained to provide these services and how much each lawyer was paid for providing these services? I would not expect the minister would necessarily have that information now, but I think it is most important because if he hired outside services for 650 separate jobs, I think the members should have a very careful look at how much was paid and who was retained and the reason for the retention of each one of these individual lawyers.

Mr. Chairman: Is there anything further on item 7?

Mr. Bullbrook: Yes. I want to make a comment, if I might.

I have sat back, Mr. Chairman, and listened to the examination of the perspective of the utilization, the continued utilization, of legal staff in connection with the junior farmer and the ARDA programme. I want to make comment in this respect.

Our party accepts what the minister has said, that he is going to make an investigation. But the fact comes to our attention, as lawyers sitting in this House, as follows: If there is a programme that is not instituting new loans, the minister does not really have any responsibility in connection with legal work, under the junior farmer programme, except eventually with the discharge of the mortgage. All the remainder of the dealing in connection with those mortgages is purely financial or administrative. A lawyer is not required.

In connection with the ARDA programme, as my colleague from Downsview has amply pointed out, the great bulk of the work is done on retention of individual solicitors in the location of the loan. The concern that we express is not an attempt to embarrass unduly this particular minister. We want to convey, Mr. Chairman, in this vote the fact that this is purely exemplary of things that go on in almost every department of government.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: No, no.

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister advises—let me tell the minister by way of example if you will permit. There are eight solicitors involved in the Ontario Housing Corporation and one of them search a title, none of them.

Mr. Singer: Or even know how to draft leases, as the minister well knows.

Mr. Bullbrook: The fact of the matter is that every time there is an involvement in connection with a senior citizens' housing project in the Province of Ontario, the proximate decisions have to be made here in Toronto; then they hire solicitors out in Sarnia, Sault Ste. Marie, here in Toronto, and elsewhere. One has to ask in good conscience why we are retaining these solicitors.

It gets back to the philosophy that we have expounded on this side of the House time and time again. It has been put forward by my colleague from Downsview, my colleague from Sudbury (Mr. Sopha) and others that the time has come when we have got to stop this wastefulness in connection with the retention of legal talent. There has to be a simple authority in this province responsible to the people of Ontario for retaining professional assistants.

That is the only reason I rise for a moment to take part in this debate. Because in the three and a half years that we have been in this Parliament, we have talked about it time and time again—in the estimates of The Department of the Attorney General, in the estimates of The Department of Education, in the estimates of The Department of Health, in the estimates of The Department of Municipal Affairs, in the estimates of The Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs, and now in the estimates of The Department of Energy and Resources Management.

Now because The Department of Energy and Resources Management has hired lawyers, that is why I say now, in connection with that department, we are going to be involved with that again, which we were not before.

An hon. member: The Department of Agriculture and Food.

Another hon. member: It is The Department of Agriculture and Food.

Mr. Bullbrook: All right, presently we discuss it in connection with The Department of Agriculture and Food. But we want to convey again, Mr. Chairman—and it is our obligation to convey during the course of every session of this Parliament—our concern in connection with the wastefulness relative to the hiring of legal talent. We know we who are lawyers here—and we do not hold ourselves out as having any more knowledge than anybody else, but we do have approximate involvement in connection with this—we happen to know what these men must be doing, as they know themselves, those who sit in the House and listen to us; they know the work that they must be doing from day to day. The work is basically nothing and it can be nothing and the—

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Oh nonsense!

Mr. Bullbrook: Well now the former Attorney General interjects, and I invite him to join the debate right now and tell me exactly what those lawyers are doing in connection with the junior farmer programme.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: I say this to the former Attorney General, now the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs: This is the only legal responsibility they have, the only one—and that is, eventually there has to be a discharge of the mortgage clause.

I am going to sit down and let us get it on the record; right now, without reservation or equivocation, what they do that cannot be done by an administrative clerk. I resume my seat for the minister to tell me what they do.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not—

Mr. Nixon: Like a trout!

Hon. Mr. Wishart: It was very good bait, you know!

I do not speak, of course, for the Minister of Agriculture and Food but I have interjected and I am prepared to interject further.

It is only a couple of days ago that the hon. member for Downsview was questioning at great length what effort had gone into a study of legislation which the Minister of Agriculture and Food had presented.

Mr. Singer: They have lots of lawyers over there.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I think he got a reply that the matter had been studied, had been considered from its legal point of view. It was very important legislation: there was case law in the Province of Manitoba; there was case law in the Province of Quebec; and there was a case that had gone to the Supreme Court of Canada, and I am—

Mr. Nixon: They have not looked at it.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: They asked me to reply, now they are going to get it.

Mr. O. F. Villeneuve (Glengarry): Yes, just listen.

Mr. B. Newman: The minister was ahead before he started.

Mr. Singer: Now comes the red herring technique.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I am quite certain, in fact I know from my discussions with the minister in connection with that legislation, that the lawyers in his department were consulted on that matter. For instance, I am sure that from day to day in The Department of Agriculture and Food, which deals with land all across this province, there are many questions arising from time to time that need legal examination, legal advice and legal consideration, as I will account for the lawyers in my department, from day to day when I come to my estimates.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, can I reply to my friend?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Sarnia.

Mr. Bullbrook: This is an invitation that I cannot resist, much as I would like to hear my colleague from Downsview.

Mr. Chairman, it is less than passing strange that in connection with this particular vote I invited the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs to tell us one thing that the lawyers did in connection with the junior farmer programme, other than perhaps drawing a discharge—which they do not do anyway.

He did not touch on that at all. He decided in the alternative that he would show the extreme responsibility of a legal department in connection with the analysis of the legislation involved in the department. This, of course, gets right back to the fundamental question that you beg every year, year in and year out, and the question that you beg is—whether you need an array of talent of eight lawyers with the housing corporation to analyse what is done by your Minister of Trade and Development.

The fact of the matter is you do not need them. And the fact of the matter is that this minister knows that the people of this province would be better served by the development of an elite corps of counsel in this province, knowledgeable in connection with provincial constitutional responsibility and the legislation concurrent therewith. And the minister knows further, Mr. Chairman, that every time there is a problem of significant technique, your own lawyers do not decide it anyway. You go downtown to Bay Street and pay $1,000 a day for somebody else.

And that is the fact of the matter. This type of subterfuge, this type of murky, does not fool the people of Ontario—and it will not continue to fool the people of Ontario.

Mr. Sargent: You know it is true.

Mr. Bullbrook: I hate to quote the great conservative, Barry Goldwater, but: "In your heart you know it's right."

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Chairman, you know what the reply to Mr. Goldwater was: "In your guts you know he is nuts."

How many times do we have to reiterate these things in this House over a period of four years? It has been said over and over again: The shambles of central purchasing, which was brought to light the other day in the Legislature; the inability to cohere your own programmes; and your admitted great talents with respect to lip service to the very things that are brought forward by this government itself. We have repeated, following McRuer, who is the chief thorn in the cloven hoof of the Minister of Agriculture—

Mr. Nixon: Thorn in the cloven hoof?

Mr. Lawlor: Thorn in the cloven hoof of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. McRuer lives with him; thrown up in his teeth daily; he has to batten down in the evening with McRuer, but he does not have much compatibility.

And the point there is that he has advised and said over again, and the Attorney General last session said that the allocation into a central unit of the legal talent of this province was a mandatory prerequisite. Nevertheless, in face of those recommendations—which I say you yourself accepted to all intents and purposes—you go on perpetuating the present system.

Take the two lawyers inside the branch who apparently are preoccupied in discharging mortgages—

Mr. Singer: What do they do?

Mr. Lawlor: —which, in the normal legal office a girl does. It is a simple routine to do that. When these 650 titles come back into your hands do you review them? Do these lawyers, preoccupied in a review of the titles, make their own determination as to the validity or do they simply accept the certificate of title that is coming from the outside solicitor, bow their heads and leave it at that?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is their job. Part of their job is to look after those 650 titles that I mentioned, and it is their job to finalize them here in our office.

Mr. Lawlor: Do outside lawyers send you a certificate of guarantee to those titles?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I could not answer that. I do not know. I am not a lawyer and I am not working in the branch every day.

Mr. Lawlor: Well you are in charge of the branch. Do your advisers not give you some indication of what they do?

Mr. Singer: When we have a look at the fees we will be able to tell him.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: I cannot resist exchanging a remark or two with the former Attorney General. The old smoothy was at his best tonight. He talked all around the subject and never came to deal with the issues. He neglected to note the debate that we had earlier about the legal branch of The Department of Agriculture and Food separate and apart.

The Minister of Agriculture and Food was justifying the other day what they had to do, particularly in relation to Bill 10. I would have thought the former Attorney General would have been very concerned that no opinion was ever sought from the law officers of the Crown. That was admitted by his colleague, the Minister of Agriculture and Food.

But we left that apart and what we were talking about tonight before the sweeping whitewash was another legal branch. Did you know, for instance, I say to the former Attorney General, that there were two legal branches in The Department of Agriculture and Food?

Mr. Nixon: At least two!

Mr. Singer: Yes, at least two; and maybe when we get on to further votes we will find a few more.

Mr. Nixon: ARDA has two or three lawyers.

Mr. Singer: Yes. I would have thought, Mr. Chairman, that the former Attorney General should have located at least by number and position and duty all of the lawyers in government service. Obviously he has not.

Does the former Attorney General know of his own knowledge, other than in this grandiose language that he hurled at us a few minutes ago, what these two fellows do in the junior farmer loans branch?

Mr. Nixon: They play bridge.

Mr. Singer: Do they do anything more than the Minister of Agriculture and Food has told us? They look at discharges and maybe prepare a few, and they hire people to search 650 titles. I will bet you the people who search the 650 titles charge full tariff fee of their local county loan association, and provide the certificates of title. What then does a lawyer in the junior farmer loans branch do with those? Does he search the title that has already been searched or does he certify the certification that has already been made? I am surprised, really, because the former Attorney General knows better, and had he looked at The Department of Agriculture and Food—and I suspect looked closely at other departments—he would have found much more went on in the name of the legal profession than he ever imagined in his wildest dreams. My advice to the former Attorney General, now that he has left the responsibility of that office, is that he should just be quiet and perhaps we will not notice the fact that he was not all the law to all the people of Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I will not take that advice.

Mr. Chairman: Is item 7 carried?

Mr. Innes: Just one more comment, please. I mentioned about the number of junior farmer loans. How many junior farmer loans were transferred to another junior farmer last year?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There were 49.

Mr. Innes: Forty-nine?

Vote 102, item 7 agreed to.

On item 8, soils and crops:

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Welland South.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): I would like to ask the minister a few questions on weed control. I see it is $72,000. Just what does this cover? Just along the roadsides in municipalities?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, it is the subsidy we pay to each municipal weed inspector.

Mr. Haggerty: This goes to county weed inspectors?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mr. Haggerty: Local municipality weed inspectors?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Haggerty: What do they do? Do they go on large vacant areas of farmland and control the weeds in this particular area?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes. That is the job of the municipal weed inspectors, to enforce The Weed Control Act in the municipalities. We pay half their salary plus half their expenses.

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Chairman, do they do the job? The point I raise is that I know a municipality where under local bylaws they can go in and control a small lot. They can go in and cut it down and charge the property owner. But what happens when you get 30, 40, 50, 100 acres of land that lie idle, with weeds this high? I am sure the minister has had a number of requests from municipalities asking for some form or type of legislation to control this.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is the local municipal weed inspectors' job in the municipality, and he simply enforces The Weed Control Act of that municipality. There is a variance, I believe, from one municipality to another. But that is the job of the local weed inspector. He is not directed from Toronto, he is directed by the local municipality and we pay half his salary.

Mr. Haggerty: That might be quite right, Mr. Chairman, but the point I raise is that I think he does control it on small lots. I am talking about lots, say, 60 by 100 or something like that. What happens when you get 100 acres that lie idle year after year with brush, grass and thistles and everything else that high? He has no control over that.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Of course he has—the same control over that as he has over small lots if he wants to enforce The Weed Control Act in that municipality. That is his job and if he is not enforcing it, then somebody should speak to the council about it because he is employed by the local council and the job is to enforce The Weed Control Act.

I certainly know of municipalities where weed inspectors have enforced the Act and large areas have had to be cleaned up. Now if it happens to be otherwise in your municipality, then it must be something to do with the relationship between the local council and the inspector. I cannot understand any of the reasons. There is no reason they should not enforce the Act.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Middlesex South was attempting to gain the floor previously.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): I am happy to yield to my colleague.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): I want to ask the minister, under organization and special projects, about the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association. Exactly what is happening at this point in this field? I am not sure if this is the exact organization, but I know that there was an investigation conducted a number of years ago in terms of soil testing in the peninsula and other parts of the province. I wonder if the minister might be able to tell us what is happening in this particular instance with the $57,000?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well I will try. These are local county soil and crop improvement projects within each particular county or district. They make their decisions as to what they want to demonstrate in that particular county and we pay a grant toward it from the department.

Mr. Deans: I see. Is there some particular reason why the two sums are not incorporated into one vote? One is shown as a demonstration project vote and one as a general subsidy.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Is the member referring to the $57,500?

Mr. Deans: I am talking about the $57,500, but I notice that there also is an additional $5,000 shown here that goes to the same association and I am curious to know why.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The $5,000 is to the parent organization, the Ontario executive, to carry on their particular function. The $57,500 is for the special projects of the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association as related to their various county and district organizations.

Mr. Deans: Fine. I wonder if the minister could tell me what is being done at the present moment to determine suitable replacement areas for the growth of soft fruit and the like in the Province of Ontario, in terms of the soil content? Are there projects under way at the moment in the province that will enable us to determine in which areas of the province we might expect to see a soft fruit development take place in the next 10 or 15 years to replace that which is being slowly eliminated in other parts of the province?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: As a matter of fact, there has not been that great a drop in the Niagara fruit acreage.

Mr. Deans: I want to talk about that later.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The Vineland station does a considerable amount of research work, but the Simcoe station also does a good deal of work along this line as well, and of course there are also soft fruits grown in the Essex county area. So I do not think there is any great danger of running out of land where peaches can be grown for that matter—grapes might be a different story.

Mr. Deans: Well, this is really what I was after. I was curious to know whether the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association was conducting tests in other areas in regard not only to soil, which is one factor, but in terms of the possibility of expanding the soft fruit industry in other parts of southern Ontario to replace those areas that are presently going out of business for reasons which we will discuss on the next vote I hope.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am told that grapes are being grown on research plots at Harrow, down in Essex county; we are trying to find out what the story is down there as well. But through the Ontario branch of the Canadian Horticultural Council and the Vineland research station—which is a separate entity to this, having to do with fruits and vegetables—and through the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association, there are relationships and work going on along the line that the member suggests.

Mr. Chairman: Shall item 8 carry?

Mr. Innes: In the soils and crop department, I was wondering how many soil testing stations are in the province, other than Guelph? Are there individual soil testing areas in areas other than Guelph?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Just the one at Guelph.

Mr. Innes: As the minister knows there has been quite a bit of concern, and a pamphlet came out recently on fertilizer use and environmental control. Some of the farmers, of course, always want to make sure they have got enough fertilizer on, and there are others who do not even use soil tests. But the conclusions in the summary that has been published in the fertilizer use and environmental quality control publication coming out of Guelph indicate certain conclusions, such as:

The contribution of nitrogen to underground waters increases rapidly when fertilizer in excess of that required for most typical crop yields is added. It is therefore important that precise methods of establishing the nitrogen requirements in specific fields be developed.

And it goes on along the same line. I think the minister's people should be concerned about the extra amounts that are going on in some areas and the fact that it is contributing to the so-called pollution of our waterways. They indicate that if the proper amounts are put on there is little or no concern. What do the minister's individual ag rep offices and soil specialists indicate to the farmers in the various areas in respect to this? Has there been any concentration of effort to try to get them to use proper amounts rather than, as in most cases, using too much?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We have, I believe, 60,000 or something like that individual soil samples taken or at least tested at the University of Guelph, the Ontario Agriculture College, on an annual basis. The results of those soil tests are submitted back to the agricultural office in the counties and the agricultural representative with his professional training interprets those results related to the field or the farm, with the soil or the crop conditions all being taken into consideration.

It is certainly their purpose and intent not to recommend the overuse of fertilizers, including nitrogens. We take the viewpoint—and I make no apologies for this—that it is quite unwise for any farmer to use more than the necessary amount of fertilizer. He is not only contributing to a needless expense, but he could be contributing to a pollution factor. I think it is imperative that we took a good look at all of this. There are schools on fertilizers and plant—

Mr. Chairman: Order please!

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—nutrients being held in many areas, to have farmers schooled to fertilize on the basis of soil tests, not only from the standpoint of economics but also from the standpoint of protecting the environment.

Mr. Innes: There are 60,000 samples, the minister tells me here. What proportion of the farmers does he feel that this covers? I know it is very small. And what capacity could the research department handle? What is their capacity? Currently the minister says it is 60,000 samples. How many more could they handle?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am told that that represents roughly one-third of the farms of Ontario and that we could handle double that amount if it were available.

Vote 102, item 8, agreed to.

Vote 102 agreed to.

On vote 103, item 1, agricultural rehabilitation and development:

Mr. Sargent: The member for Kent was first, I guess.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Kent.

Mr. Spence: On the rural development programme, I see by the minister's estimates that he is going to spend about $14,560,000 this coming year; about the same amount of money he spent in 1970-1971.

You might say that rural development is a big field in the Province of Ontario. I might say, Mr. Chairman, on the ARDA programme, for community pastures, farm enlargements, maple syrup, man-training programme, we have not heard too many complaints. They seem to be working very well.

But, Mr. Chairman, we were very disappointed, and it was a great loss to southwestern Ontario, when the minister signed this new agreement with Ottawa for $60 million to be spent on ARDA projects in Ontario over the next five years. When we lost that one-third grant for the construction of municipal drains it was brought to my attention many times that the farmers did miss this one-third grant.

However, on the agreement—maybe Ottawa would not agree with the minister. I do not know what great effort he put into it, but it was, I will say, a loss.

I might say on rural development in Ontario that we find many of our towns and villages deteriorating in and across the province. If we look back over the past, we find that rural areas produced the food and the fibre and, Mr. Chairman, we supplied a great number of our educated young people to the cities. I have nothing against the cities, but we see the cities across the Province of Ontario thriving at a great pace while in rural Ontario many of our towns and villages are standing still, if not going backwards.

I would like to say that our towns and villages have been depending on our agricultural industry, but the net return from agriculture is going down; it is at a very low ebb. The purchasing power of the farmer is going down; he cannot purchase and this is affecting both our rural areas and our villages and our towns.

And today, when pollution is of great concern to rural Ontario, we find our towns and villages have to put in sewerage—their taxes are going to be raised $120 for sewerage. Many of our towns have to bring in water from our lakes, which is another $100, so about $230 more in taxes will be required of the less well-off of our towns and villages.

Of course when the budget was brought down here by the hon. provincial Treasurer (Mr. McKeough), he said that the Province of Ontario was going to pay 55 per cent of the cost of education. I must say that it was a great disappointment to those in rural Ontario that the government was not going to pick up more of the tab of education, because sewerage, water and education cause great worry and great concern that rural towns and villages are going to deteriorate even more. I might say, Mr. Chairman, something has to be done.

In the past the young people, in rural Ontario, as I said before, have been migrating to the cities. And, of course, in rural Ontario we have to ship out all our products. Today, transportation is one of the biggest factors. We have reached a great production. A great credit is due to the agricultural colleges across this province. We have reached a very high production. But today the farmers have to compete in the markets. I think that transportation is the next part of our economy in which we have to make a study.

A few weeks ago I wrote a letter to the minister asking him to make a study of port facilities in southwestern Ontario, so that we could put our products in the markets where other countries are putting the same products and could compete on an even keel. As a layman, I feel that we could transport many of our products that we have to export out of southwestern Ontario by ship. We could put them into the markets by water cheaper than by rail.

I would like to ask the minister if he could give consideration to making a study of transportation of our agricultural products. I think the time has come when we have become very efficient in production. We are increasing our production each and every year, but nothing is done about transportation. I am telling the minister that the agricultural industry is facing serious problems at the present time and have to look at all facets in connection with agriculture.

I hope the minister will give this consideration because it has been discussed back and forth and we must be able to compete if we are going to sell our products.

I brought to the attention of the minister the other day that we in Canada bought $39 million worth of agricultural products more than we exported. The minister said to me: "This is an affluent society in which we live. Of course, a lot of Australian beef has come in here and then was re-exported to the United States."

This is a quandary to me. It looks to me that other countries can put their products in here cheaper than we can put them in markets, for example like Montreal. I would like to ask the minister to make a study of this to see if there can be a saving, or if we can compete. Because if we do not compete, the agricultural industry will certainly have to have supply management.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, the ARDA programme was a programme, I would suspect, inherited from the federal government. I do not think that it was the brain-child of this government, of this minister—

Mr. Nixon: It was Dief.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It was developed by the hon. Alvin Hamilton when he was Minister of Agriculture in the Diefenbaker government.

Mr. Sargent: God bless him!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: God bless him!

Mr. Sargent: The thing is, I understand that $6 million came from the federal government and that this government put $6 million into the pot, so we have a budget of probably $12 million or $14 million at this point.

How much of this budget was left over from last year? Did the Minister of Agriculture and Food spend it all last year?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There is about $2 million unspent. It is carried over into this year because there are projects going on that are uncompleted and we have to pick them up.

Mr. Sargent: That is how the minister is arriving at the figure of $14 million?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, but not entirely. Any moneys that come back in from the ARDA agreement are added each year—that is revenue from the ARDA agreement.

Mr. Sargent: Oh, I see.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is added to the amount and reinvested.

Mr. Sargent: But the minister did spend all the money that he had available?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, that is right, except it has not been paid out yet. It is budgeted for but not paid out.

Mr. Sargent: But it is within the minister's ambit to spend all the moneys in the pot? Receivables and—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The government tries to do that.

Mr. G. Bukator (Niagara Falls): The minister does not have any problem there now, does he?

Mr. Sargent: My only point is that—and this must become boring to the minister—we go through this every year but things are not getting any better in farming. I feel that, progressively, the $12 million is not doing the job.

It seems to me I have a figure some place along the line that the hon. minister has, in total, about 1,200 or 1,300 farm units to date as part of the operation in Ontario. Would that be a correct figure?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Under ARDA?

Mr. Sargent: Under ARDA.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Fourteen hundred and eighty farms have been enlarged. The acquisition of 225,000 acres.

Mr. Sargent: How many acres?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Two hundred and twenty five thousand acres. The farms that have been retired out of agriculture to forestry or recreation involve about 45,000 acres.

Mr. Sargent: We have in total 1,400 economic units in operation in possibly four years of operation and we are talking possibly of a total budget of possibly $30 million to acquire or to produce 1,400 plants in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not entirely, that is just that section of the programme, the farm enlargement section.

Mr. Sargent: To better agriculture—that is the end motivation of the ARDA deal.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, not entirely.

Mr. Sargent: Not entirely? But that is—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is just one of the projects.

Mr. Sargent: That is the minister's target.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The objectives of the recent ARDA agreement are much broader than that. First of all, the research for the development of new programmes and to determine the impact of the existing programmes—that is a research project. It is not very important.

Second, the farm consolidation and enlargement; third, the retaining and rehabilitation assistance; fourth, provision of a well-trained field counselling service—this is to help farmers make decisions.

These are not really the commercial farmers that are involved in the extension branch programme, these are the farmers that are living on land where they just simply cannot make a living, and they are probably working at some off-the-farm job just to make ends meet.

Fifth, the development and reallocation of land and water resources. This is what we are talking about as well.

Sixth, the development of alternative opportunities of employment. That to me is quite significant, because here we are trying to establish industries in areas where we can assist the local economy by not only providing job opportunities but by providing industry that will assist the viable farm units in the area.

That really is what the ARDA programme is all about.

Mr. Sargent: I do thank the minister for that, but I would suggest to him that the only thing we can measure very much as a physical or concrete thing is the 1,400 economic units.

Insofar as the minister is talking about creating job opportunities could he tell us how many jobs he has created through ARDA?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: About 1,525 jobs have been created by the alternative opportunities programme to date.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you. That is important. I appreciate that. But out of eight million people we have 1,500 people employed and we have got down to 1,400 plants that have been put into operation through ARDA.

In other words I think the minister is just going through the motions of taking moneys available to the minister from Ottawa, and the minister is not being very objective when we see the papers full every day with farms for sale.

It would seem to me that if we are going to do a meaningful job in this area that he should go after more money to acquire these lands and make them productive units. Is there any plan of farms that are on the market on the minister's across-Ontario board with all his pinpoints. Has he any projection of what farms are coming up for sale? Has he any way he can put these into meaningful 400-acre units?

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): Is the member looking for a farm?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, this year we have the ARDA counsellors and the ARDA fieldmen working throughout the various counties and districts of Ontario where the ARDA programme is applicable. They are working with local people all the time. We have 600 farms now that are in the process of being turned over to ARDA and another 200 that are exploring the possibilities.

Mr. Sargent: And the $40,000?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is for this coming year.

Mr. Sargent: For the 400-acre unit?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Pardon?

Mr. Sargent: For the 400-acre deal. Is that still the package?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, not the 400-acre deal. I do not know what the member is talking about. The 400-acre deal? What does he mean by the 400-acre deal?

Mr. Sargent: Buying four 100-acre farms together for a package.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, it could have been used as an illustration, but it does not really apply in this particular instance, though it might apply in some situations.

Mr. Sargent: All right. Would the minister define what he means by economic units.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: An economic unit is a unit which provides a viable standard of living for the farmer and his family. Now there can be a difference between one area of Ontario and another, believe me. But based on the investment in the land—and ARDA owns the land—they provide a five-year lease to the farmer who leases the land—

Mr. Sargent: A leaseback?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: A leaseback!

Mr. Sargent: Agreement!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: He takes the land on by lease for five years with the option to renew the lease at the end of five years or to purchase the land at what ARDA, that is the federal and provincial government, has in the land. I do not think there is a better kind of a lease. But you see it allows the farmer to use his working capital to develop his farm operation. He does not put that capital in land.

Mr. Sargent: Can he buy it back?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: He can buy the land within the terms of the lease. He has the first right of refusal; that is what the programme is.

The size of those farms vary. Maybe a farmer wants one farm, maybe he wants two or three or whatever is available to him in that area. Some of them get much more than that.

Mr. Sargent: Then would the minister say that a figure of 76 per cent of the farms in Ontario gross less than $2,000 a year?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Those would not be considered commercial farms at all. I have no idea where the member got that figure, but they would not be considered commercial farms. Many of those people might have gotten that much out of farming, but I am sure they were likely getting a good deal more out of jobs that they had off the farm.

So their net income might have been much greater than the gross income as related to the figure the member has. I have no idea where that figure came from.

Mr. Sargent: Would the minister suggest to me what is going to happen to those 76 per cent making less than $2,000 a year.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not know what 76 per cent the member is talking about, because I have no idea where the figure came from. I do not know whether it is a valid figure or whether it is an estimate from somebody else.

Mr. Sargent: All right. Supposing the figure is not correct, supposing it is 66 per cent, what is going to happen to that 66 per cent?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Supposing it is 26 per cent.

Mr. Sargent: I got the figure out of Hansard.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I see.

Mr. Nixon: It ought to be right then.

Mr. Sargent: I would like to know what does the minister think is going to happen to those people?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: A good many of them are working through ARDA in the consolidation programme.

Mr. Sargent: No, we only had 1,400 to date who have got a contract with ARDA—1,400 in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We purchased 225,000 acres.

Mr. Sargent: The minister could buy a million acres. I am talking about 1,400 economic units.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: As well as the 45,000 acres that have gone into forestry work.

Mr. Sargent: Or pastures or whatever you want.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is right. You cannot force these people off the land, but you can talk to them about the opportunities that are provided in ARDA to purchase their land—to relieve them being locked into a situation in which they simply cannot make a living. But they can through this programme get rid of their land, and we will help to train them for some other type of job and try to find them another type of job.

Many of these people want to stay on in the farmhouse where they have been living. Maybe they get a job some place else and they augment their income. Some of them may be on pension or welfare or something like this. We help them somehow to improve their standard of living. I think we have to look at it from the standpoint of a people-oriented programme. That is really what ARDA is all about.

It may not be moving as fast as my hon. friend would like to see it move. But I think if he would refer to the article that is printed in this week's Farm and Country—"ARDA Programme Consolidates Farms Into Paying Units"—that is an excellent item. I direct his attention to it. It explains the ARDA programme, its history and what it has been able to do and the fact that it is accomplishing something for many people throughout rural Ontario.

Now it is not any grandiose scheme to shout about from the roof tops, but go and talk to the people that are involved, as I have talked to them, and the member will find they are getting a very great deal out of the ARDA programme. But it is a programme that you just simply cannot force on people. You cannot go out and say: "We are going to buy your farm; move on." You just cannot do those kinds of things. You have to work quietly with those people and persuade them, if they want to be persuaded—

Mr. Sargent: I agree.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —here is the thing to do. Offer them those alternate opportunities. This is what we are trying to do through what I think is a very excellent group of field counsellors.

My hon. friend made a suggestion today—I think it was this afternoon—talking about farmers, some of whom are retired and for a variety of reasons may not be farming. We are using these people in many instances as ARDA counsellors because they talk the farmers' language. They have been through the mill. They understand the situation and they make excellent ARDA counsellors. I maintain we will never get anywhere by calling public meetings about ARDA. You have to go to a person's home, sit down with him around the kitchen table and talk to him about these things. That is where these counsellors really shine.

Mr. Sargent: I will not flog this any further. I just want to find out about what must be many, many thousands of people who are prime prospects for ARDA education. I would like to suggest that there are many, many thousands who have never been exposed to what ARDA can do for them. I would like to ask the minister, in finality, how many people does he have actually in the field selling his bill of goods?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We have six rural development officers, 23 rural development counsellors and five professionals working. Now that is in addition, of course, to our extension branch staff in the various counties where ARDA has application. They themselves, in many instances, discuss these things with the farmer and advise him to get in touch with the ARDA office, and in many cases they set up the appointment. They do the negotiating.

Mr. Sargent: So these people are empowered to make deals for ARDA?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh yes. These are the people who do the negotiating and the field work. The ag reps and our extension branch do a very great deal of that counselling themselves and they direct them into the ARDA channel. If they can be helped in another way in farm management, well that is where they help them. But it is a screening process.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Middlesex South.

Mr. Bolton: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister some questions about the transfer payments.

They seem to be grouped in rather odd ways. On page 21 the transfer payments are separated and the different amounts are indicated.

Here we have agricultural drainage, rural water supply, rehabilitation; and it is all lumped together. Could he separate for me the amount that is spent on the alternative employment opportunities out of this $7,570,000?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I can, Mr. Chairman. The transfer payments are as follows: Farm enlargement consolidation and adjustment, $650,000; rural water and resources development, $1,980,000; rehabilitation and retraining, $500,000; alternate employment opportunities, $2,390,000; special ARDA projects—now these are for Indian bands and this is recoverable from the federal government—$200,000; municipal drainage, eastern Ontario—this is what my friend from Kent was talking about, it does not apply any longer other than in the ARDA area—$700,000; special drainage and systems, $1,500,000—and this is carryover for western Ontario of drains that qualified prior to the cutoff and were not completed, but they are now in the process of development so that is the figure for them.

Mr. Bolton: Mr. Chairman, the minister has told us that we have spent $2,390,000 in providing alternative employment. Does this indicate—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is the budget for this year.

Mr. Bolton: That will be the budget?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes. That is right.

Mr. Bolton: How does it compare with last year's? Roughly!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh golly! Last year we spent $1,100,000 on alternative employment opportunities; so it has doubled.

Mr. Bolton: Am I to assume then that the minister is expecting more and more people to look for alternative employment? Is this telling us that more and more people are going to leave the farm? And what is going to happen if this is so?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not necessarily. Alternative employment opportunities are to provide industry or assistance to industry to locate in areas of low employment. My hon. friend from Grey-Bruce mentioned a while ago figures regarding low income for rural people; this provides, we hope, opportunities, of employment in those areas where they can continue to live on the farm if they wish but work at these job opportunities that we hope to entice into those kind of areas. And we have been fairly successful in many instances.

Mr. Bolton: So they will be partially workers at local industries?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is a people-oriented programme.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Timiskaming.

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): Mr. Chairman, just to go a little farther on this, is the minister telling us that the money is being used to entice industry into these areas?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Into certain areas where the ARDA programme is applicable.

Mr. Jackson: Is this not an overlapping of the programme under EIO and the Ontario Development Corporation?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not suppose you could call it an overlapping programme, but it certainly is a programme where we can go into certain areas and do things that perhaps the ODC programme is not doing.

Mr. Jackson: Can the minister give us some indication of how many jobs have been created in the last year by the one-million-so-many-thousand dollars that have been spent; and how many are expected to be created by the $2,390,000 in the next year; and how this actually compares with the programme under EIO and under the Ontario Development Corporation?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well our programme last year resulted in an increase of 1,525 jobs.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Wentworth.

Mr. Jackson: Just one more question before I sit down: Would the minister table in this House at some later date the jobs that have been created, where they are and in what type of industry?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We will take that under consideration. I do not know whether all the lists are available or not. For industries that are started up it is hard to know who is working there now—the programme has been in effect for several years.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Chairman, the minister says it is very difficult to tell and yet one minute ago he said there were 1,525 jobs created.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: For one year. That was last year.

Mr. Jackson: It is very difficult to tell us what industry has been created by this plan, how can he tell us now that there are 1,525 jobs? Surely he can tell us one way or the other.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, we can certainly give the member a list of the industries, where they are and what they got. I do not have it here, but we can get that. But I cannot tell him how many men are working in an industry that may have been given a grant four or five years ago. I think it would be very difficult to do that today.

Mr. Jackson: Mr. Chairman, all I ask is whether he would table the industries that received grants last year and the number of jobs that came out of the grants last year.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, we will be glad to.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Wentworth.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Over the last three years the minister and I have discussed a number of times the problems that are facing the farmers in the Niagara Peninsula, particularly in regard to the need for rehabilitation and the need for particular recognition of their problem, as opposed to recognition of general farm problems. I want to try once again, and perhaps in a more friendly way, to talk to the minister.

I did last year engage the minister in a rather lengthy discussion and I must confess to him that perhaps I overstated the case somewhat. I do not often make these confessions but I make it this time. I went over what I said, and I am prepared to concede that in the situation as it then prevailed I may have overstated the problem to some extent. Because of that perhaps the minister took umbrage at what I said and we did not get down to the matter of dealing with what was going to be the ultimate problem.

The minister and I would both recognize, I am sure, that about four-fifths of the present soft fruit growing in Ontario is done in the Niagara Peninsula. Four-fifths of the total acreage is presently in the peninsula and, whether recognized today or not, much of that land is either under option to or is in the ownership of other than the people who are presently farming it.

The farmers in the peninsula are facing a very difficult situation, because what we are going to have happen over the next few years is that because of the rather exorbitant prices that are being paid to farmers in the speculative land market for properties which they presently own—properties which they may well have either optioned or sold to other individuals who are speculators during the process of reassessment—the effect on all of the adjoining farms will be that many of those farms will be assessed considerably higher, because of the market value assessment, than they are presently assessed. I hope we can agree on that. I think we can.

What is worrying me—it has worried me for some time—is that I view the peninsula as a special situation as opposed to a great proportion of the other farming that takes place in the province. I happen to think that not only has the peninsula contributed, and does still contribute, considerably to the economy of the Province of Ontario and in fact to the economy of the country, but that if we are going to maintain any semblance of a soft fruit industry, much of it will flow from that particular area of the province for a number of years to come. I think this is borne out by the fact that not too much of the growing has taken place anywhere outside of that particular section.

What we are faced with is this: When we talk about farmers in general and their needs and the problems that they are facing in regard to taxation—it is a problem, and no doubt a problem that can be resolved by a change in the tax structure—but when we talk of the peninsula, we are talking about farming taking place within an urban context and in many sections, in fact in practically all of the peninsula, when you talk about fruit farming you are talking of farming that is taking place almost within an urban setting. The farmers are facing, on a day to day basis, a very difficult situation in trying to raise sufficient moneys from the crops which they are able to raise to meet the ever-increasing burden of cost which is placed upon them by the planning functions that have taken place in the municipalities.

We have any number of farmers who are deriving very little more for their product today than they were deriving ten or 15 years ago. The minister agreed with me last year on that point—that in many instances the produce that is put on the market is not bringing back in constant dollars any more than it was ten years ago, and yet the burden of cost to the farmer in those areas is considerably higher. I think if I recall the quotation correctly—it may not be exactly word for word—but the minister indicated last year when I spoke that it sounded very much like a speech that he had made back when he first got elected to the Legislature.

Well maybe in those days he was wiser, I do not know. But it seems to me that we are going to have to recognize the unusual situation of the peninsula, its worth and the fact that the farmers of the peninsula are facing very grave problems, both by urban sprawl and by increased taxation. If you believe, as I believe, that the people of the peninsula and the farmers of the peninsula who have worked pretty dammed hard over the last umpteen years to produce a crop that has contributed significantly to the economy of this province; if you believe, as I believe, that it is necessary for them to have an opportunity to maintain their operation, then as a government you are going to have to pay particular attention to their difficulties.

Last year I quoted a gentleman who made some statements which may or may not have been true. I am not going to argue them, but his name was Jerry Utter and the minister said he knew him. He pointed out a number of problems that were occurring in the peninsula. Since that time I have taken the trouble to check them out, because at that point the minister indicated to me that he was not satisfied that what Gerry Utter had said and what I was then saying was true.

I want to talk with the minister rationally, hopefully, about what is really happening. Throughout the area that I represent farms are being taken away by the acre on a day to day basis. If they are not going out of production immediately they are certainly going to go out of production in the foreseeable future. The chance of maintaining the farm industry in the peninsula as it is presently set up is not very good unless we are prepared to recognize the problems that they face.

Throughout the peninsula, from Hamilton to Niagara Falls, there have been any number of purchases made of farm properties by speculators, and in a number of instances those farmers have been permitted to continue to operate—but over a short period. The minister knows as well as I do that as the re-evaluation of property takes place, the reassessment takes place, the market value of the properties surrounding the properties which have been purchased by the speculators will be drastically affected by the changes that have occurred because of the excessive prices that have been paid.

I do not want to deprive the farmer of a chance to make enough money off his property in order that he can live a reasonable existence. But I think it is important for the overall economy of the province that we maintain and sustain a viable fruit marketing and a viable fruit-growing farming situation in the Niagara Peninsula. I do not think it is going to happen. I have a notion that in 20 years—and I pick that figure arbitrarily; it may not be that long, it may be longer—but my guess is if we permit what is now occurring to continue we will have no farm community to speak of.

The reason I asked the minister in the previous vote what was being done in the way of soil testing to determine suitable areas to replace the farms which were going to go out of existence, was because I was concerned that some day in the not too distant future we are going to be faced in this country and in this province with the undesirable situation that in order to acquire fresh fruit we are going to have to import it.

I see no evidence, and the minister said there was evidence, but I see no evidence in the numbers of acres that are being utilized in the province—other than those acres in the peninsula—I see no evidence at all that there is a sufficient emphasis being placed on the production of soft fruit in other parts of the province to take up the slack which will ultimately occur because of the urban encroachment.

The minister might say there is nothing we can do about it. I do not agree with that. I conducted a poll among the people in my riding and my guess is they are probably 30 per cent of the total peninsula. Eighty-seven per cent of the people who returned the questionnaire said to me that it was their desire, their wish, that the peninsula be maintained (a) as a green belt; (b) for fruit farming purposes if possible.

They said in that questionnaire that they were prepared to see taken whatever steps had to be taken in order to ensure the viability of the future growth of fruit in the Niagara Peninsula.

It is world famous. Other parts of the world are working to preserve the things that we have there. We appear to be prepared to allow those kinds of things to be taken over by urban and industrial and speculative encroachment, without any consideration for the value that particular area has to the overall province.

I will concede to the minister that it is possible to grow the fruit that we need somewhere else in the province—that may well be so. I have no proof that it is not so, and therefore I will concede it may well be. But I happen to believe, as I look throughout the world, that there are many other countries and many other sectors of the world which would give their right arms to have an area so suited to the growth of fruit as is the Niagara Peninsula and that they would take the necessary steps to protect it. Unfortunately, we are not doing that.

I say this. One of the major growers in my own riding—not in terms of production—who is a prominent citizen, sold out and closed down. They built a warehouse, or they are about to build a warehouse, to store Dofasco products on land which previously grew fruit and which even at that point was still capable of growing fruit.

All the way down the peninsula this is happening. Now it is the gateway to Ontario for much of the eastern United States. It is an area that provides for Ontario—not only in terms of farming, but in terms of recreation and green belt potential—perhaps the single, greatest potential of any area in the province.

Aside from the parochialism involved, I speak of it only because I live there, we will regret, when we look back in years to come, the fact that we did not take the necessary steps today or five years ago to protect that area for future generations. It is unfortunate we seem to be motivated by the profit factor in everything that we do.

I recognize the farmer in the area owns the land. I recognize his right to receive fair compensation, but I think as a government we have an obligation not only to the generations here to protect them against the kinds of impositions that will occur by virtue of not having any homegrown fruit, I think we have an obligation to ensure that future generations will have access to that area, because it is without question one of the finest areas in Ontario in terms of producing recreation, agriculture—just simply playtime, if nothing else.

Now we are in the process of trying to safeguard the Niagara Escarpment. We are talking every day of protecting the escarpment and it would seem to me that when you discuss the protection of the escarpment you must surely discuss the protection of the entire peninsula to ensure that at some point when your children, my children, or perhaps our grandchildren, grow up there—

Mr. Sargent: Time!

Mr. Deans: No time, because I listened to the hon. member and I could speak all night because it happens to be important to me.

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): Well, why does the hon. member not say something?

Mr. Deans: I listened to the talk on artificial insemination of cows, I listened to the member for Grey-Bruce talk about things he was groping on, and what I want to say to the minister—

Mr. Sargent: Say something intelligent. The member is making a speech.

Mr. Deans: I am making a speech.

An hon. member: Do not let them get to you.

Mr. Deans: I want to say this to the minister. There will be a time—and I predict it—whether I am here or not there will be a time when in this House all hell will be raised over the fact that protective measures were not taken.

I am saying to the minister now that there are farmers in the peninsula who are working like the devil to try to maintain a prosperous farming community. They are doing it very well. But if we do not take steps now to ensure that the urban and industrial encroachment and the speculation that is now beginning to take hold of the peninsula is stopped, there will not be a peninsula and there will not be any farming community and there will not be any recreational area and we will regret it.

Now the minister can do with it as he pleases. I have said it every year and I will say it every year for as long as I am here.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): That will not be much longer.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, somewhat on the same theme since I am here, the land development people speak, as do those who are knowledgeable in the ways of planning, in the ways of laying out property particularly, they spoke with respect to land-use control of all kinds. I think the minister knows, when he is setting up a scheme of land-use control throughout the province, particularly in southwestern Ontario, that in the area which was just placed under question, there are two phases on which it would be beneficial to designate. One would be prime agricultural lands on one side of the fence and on the other obvious recreational areas.

Starting with that base then, the government can develop its whole picture as to what uses should be made of land and some kind of mandatory safeguard would have to be placed upon that.

This government is not averse to doing that. The Toronto-centred region plan is precisely a plan dedicated to such a proposition.

When I hear these men talk, who are supposed to be experts in the field—by the way I find them very amorphous and very ambiguous people to listen to. They say—and I wonder if the minister agrees with them—“It does not matter.” The market garden, the small farm, the fruitlands, the vineries. "It does not matter. With the use of fertilizers and phosphates the land may be used for whatever use one wants to put it to"—industrial, factories, residential, high-rise, what you will. To try to preserve land which is alluvial, very fertile by a natural gift, is neither here nor there.

It seems to me, listening to these people, they are very wrong. Lands which, let us say as God's gift, emerged as useful for a particular purpose, produce food of a particular vintage, succulence and what not, ought to be preserved in that very use.

Mr. Deans: Everyone else in the world is doing it.

Mr. Lawlor: If the Okanagan was turned into an asphalt jungle, if the Annapolis Valley was so turned I think we would all be concerned. Not just through romantic aspirations either, nor through some kind of throw-back to a Thoreau life-in-the-woods sort of thing, not because of those sort of things but because we have a kind of a natural sense that certain dispositions of nature are there and ought to be utilized and maintained in that particular line.

When this country finally emerges into some form of independence where we can call our soul our own—that day under the present regime may be somewhat distant—the erosion of our fertile lands and food sources will have been completed because of the government's blind dedication to a particular philosophy or ideology in the free enterprise way that whatever the market sources happen to dictate in a particular context that is the way things must be, instead of intervening for the protection of these soils.

When we finally achieve our independence we may no longer have any fruit to eat in this country.

Mr. Deans: The people will not be able to buy it.

Mr. Lawlor: That would be one of the terrible penalties and sacrifices this people would have to make in order to achieve such an independence. I would like to know the minister's opinion as to whether potash is a substitute for hardpan, and whether he thinks—

Mr. Deans: That is common sense.

Mr. Lawlor: —the cherry orchards, peach orchards and what not of this province could be placed in some other alternative site such as man disposes in this particular regard.

Mr. Sargent: When does the member's book come out?

Mr. Deans: Listen to the member; this party will take over.

Mr. Sargent: I am listening.

Mr. Lawlor: And so what would the minister think, having all the access to the knowledge in this particular field, in this regard?

So, I suppose, while the minister is in office, shall it be. His decision on that sort of thing will make the final determination as to just what the layout of the province is going to be; partially in terms of regional government because how the agricultural lands and recreational lands are used will be partly disposed by how the government will set up its contour lines for that kind of government.

The minister indicated he did not have any great case for the preservation of fruitlands. I do not think we have to worry very much about the vinelands. They are sufficiently viable, sufficiently economically staple, and therefore the commercial value remains at a high enough level to maintain them against the encroachment of more mercenary forces.

Has the taxation committee driven through that particular portion of the countryside? Even the Conservative members on the bus pointed out the signs along the roadway: "For sale." Everything lying; nothing growing! It is a sort of desecration—and it was admitted to be so by all members of all parties passing through that territory at that time. I shall not forget it and I think the attitude of the minister on these things will be crucial to our future.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin.

Mr. S. Farquhar (Algoma-Manitoulin): Mr. Chairman, I do want to ask one or two very quick questions because if we are talking about land acquisition under the ARDA branch, I just want to know where it is in these estimates. If the total $15 million was used for land acquisition without any of the other programmes it would not go anywhere in terms of the Niagara Escarpment. I do not know what we are talking about.

If there is some possibility of finding an item in here for land acquisition for properties bought to be held in perpetuity, I want to talk about it and I want to stake out a claim for it right now. But I do not see it here. That is what I want to know—if it is here or if we are talking about something that does not exist in these estimates.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin, I think, has summed it up very neatly. It certainly does not exist in these estimates, because what my hon. friend from Wentworth has said, while it might have wide emotional appeal, and I think to some degree factual appeal, there is certainly no provision made in the ARDA agreement for the acquisition of land at the price of that particular land. The limit is $150 an acre in the new ARDA agreement.

The matters he raised are of concern to all of us, of course. He referred to something that I said many years ago in this House—and I recall it very well—when I made a similar speech. I am sure it was not nearly as eloquent as his was tonight, but perhaps with less emotion, and I got a series of letters from all over the province indicating that I had better keep my nose out of the affairs of people who owned the land in the Niagara Peninsula. It was their land; they were paying the taxes on it and if they could make more money selling it than they could in growing fruit, they were going to sell it. It was as simple as that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There is no reason in the world why the local municipalities, to which my hon. friend refers, cannot zone the land for agricultural purposes. I live in a municipality where the land is zoned agricultural and the council makes it stick. It is as simple as that—and that is the way it is.

Mr. Deans: May I raise a point?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, I listened to the member and I said nothing. I think I was fair to him.

Under The Planning Act the municipalities—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Under The Planning Act the municipalities have the right to zone the land as they see fit, and they have not seen fit to do what my hon. friend suggests should be done—that is to zone the land in perpetuity for agricultural use.

Mr. Lawlor: That is because this government's taxation system forces their hand. Only the province can do that.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, I agree. That is the next point I want to come to.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The point I want to come to is that, in my opinion, if the land is going to be retained in agricultural use, I as a farmer would be ready to accept the fact that my land was zoned for agricultural use in perpetuity, providing the assessment on that land was based on the productive capacity of that land in the climate zone in which it was located. That to me is the crux of the whole thing!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: My hon. friend from Wentworth suggested, if my—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): That yahoo couple in the back would clap at anything.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): We would clap for the member if we could.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend suggested urban farming. He suggested the land was owned by someone else and I took it for granted that many of these fruit farmers to whom he referred had sold their land and were carrying on under a leaseback basis. Did I understand him correctly?

Mr. Deans: No.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That was what I took down in my notes. I may have been wrong.

Mr. Deans: What I said was that the farmers in the peninsula were being forced to farm within an urban community. That is a different thing.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Have many of them sold their farms?

Mr. Deans: And I said that there were instances where options had been taken or sale had been made of farms that were going to be going out of production within the next few years. That was what I said. If the hon. minister can answer that, then go to it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I think that we could resolve the matter through, I suppose, land-use planning, but I think that land-use planning has to be accompanied by appropriate assessment value based on that land.

Mr. Deans: I agree.

Mr. Lawlor: Why does the minister not do that sometime?

Mr. Deans: I tell the minister that I will support it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is good to know, but when the hon. member supports something I am very suspicious of it; I have to say that.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lawlor: The hon. minister is beginning to sound a little rational.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We are greatly concerned about the loss of acreage of fruitland in the Niagara Peninsula. When you drive down the QEW you do see that a lot of land is not growing fruit. It is lying there empty in many areas.

An hon. member: Is the hon. minister concerned?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: When one looks at the number of acres that are in fruit acreage in the peninsula—9,000 acres of peach, 22,000 acres of grapes, 4,500 acres of cherries, 2,000 of pears, 2,000 acres of plums—this is just an illustration of what is there.

I believe that in a survey, if memory serves me correctly, done over the last 10 years, the fruit acreage in the Niagara Peninsula had declined only by five per cent.

Mr. Deans: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: And the total tonnage of fruit produced had increased by much more than that, because of new agricultural practices and what have you.

Mr. Deans: It does not show it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: While the Niagara Peninsula and its climate is more adaptable to the production of soft fruits than any other part of the Province of Ontario, grapes can be grown in other areas.

Mr. Deans: Okay.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is being explored and exploited at the moment.

Frankly, I think this whole matter of land-use planning—and I do not know really, Mr.

Chairman, whether this comes under ARDA, but I suppose it is a factor of rehabilitation—

Mr. Deans: That is right. The minister hit it right on the nose.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It may be that is where it is. I must confess I have to stretch my mind just a bit to see where this debate would fit in—

Mr. Deans: It will do it no harm.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: But I think this matter of land-use planning is something that has to be dealt with. The municipalities have the right to do it. I think that if they want to go ahead they can accomplish just as much as anybody else can, but it is their determination to do it. That local municipal government is made up of elected representatives from the very farm community to which my hon. friend refers.

He referred to a consumer survey—and I assume there were many urban consumers involved in that survey coming from the area which he represents. I have to ask myself whether or not those same consumers, who said to him: "Preserve the Niagara fruitlands. Let us save them to continue to grow fruit for the rest of eternity!"—are those same consumers willing to put their hand in their pocket and pay the price that is necessary for that farmer to maintain the standard of living to which we think he is entitled? Or are those people ready to run and buy Australian fruits at every opportunity when it comes into this country?

This is the question I think we have to ask ourselves, and I am not accusing my hon. friend of misleading anybody. I think he would agree that there is real concern in that regard. I have a feeling that some of these people would be inclined to be price-conscious when they went to the supermarket if there were two price levels established.

There has been an average increase in the price of fruit negotiated by the marketing boards affecting fruit produced in the Niagara Peninsula, and for that matter in other parts of the province, of about five per cent a year over the last several years.

Mr. Peacock: How does the hon. minister expect them to hang on?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is a five per cent increase on top of prices that all along I thought were reasonable prices. Those farmers are getting reasonable prices, but the problem is their costs are escalating so very fast.

Mr. Deans: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is the problem. One of the great problems of course is the taxation in that particular area. This is something that, as I say, must be dealt with, and I think members will be agreeably surprised with action that will be taken by this government in that regard.

Mr. Peacock: The hon. minister told us that last night.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, it is very difficult, because I was unable to keep notes on everything the minister said.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Do not make too much noise; the hon. member will wake the boys up.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): The hon. member himself has not said anything for a while.

Mr. Deans: I want to point out that he ended up as I began.

I point out to him, as I did previously, that the major problem confronting the farmer is that in spite of the marginal increase in the price of his commodity, the cost of production has outstripped it; and that much of the cost of production is a result of taxation, which is the result of having to farm within an urban community and that we have to treat the farmers of the peninsula in a different way. We have got to recognize that particular problem.

Anyway, I want to ask the minister a question. I want to ask if he is prepared to indicate to the House what recommendations were contained in the second report prepared by Professor Gertler on the fruit industry in the Niagara Peninsula. That was, I understand, prepared and given to the cabinet some months ago, and as I understand it contains some very pertinent and important recommendations that would be to the benefit of most of the farmers in the peninsula and the operations that are going on there. What can the minister tell us about this report?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have nothing to say about it, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Deans: Can I ask whether or not this report is likely to be made public in the foreseeable future in order that we in the Legislature and the farmers over whom it has such great jurisdiction, might have an opportunity to understand what is being planned for their future? I mean, it is very much to the point in this rehabilitation; we are losing—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, this is completely out of order.

Mr. Deans: Well, will the minister answer?

Mr. Chairman: I am trying to relate how the debate has to do with the ARDA programme.

Mr. Deans: I am almost finished, so you will not have to worry about —

Mr. Chairman: Whether the hon. member is almost finished or whether he anticipates speaking for an hour, I want to relate it to the ARDA programme if I can.

Mr. Deans: What I am really talking about is the rehabilitation of the Niagara Peninsula, some of which may well be done within the ARDA programme and some may not.

Mr. Chairman: Rehabilitation of the Niagara Peninsula and the ARDA programme, I believe, are two different things.

Mr. Deans: I am not at all sure that is so. It says the rehabilitation and resource development to improve employment opportunities and income. Now if you can tell where anything that I have said is not aimed at improving employment opportunities and income rehabilitation, then of course I will sit down.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. minister have any comments on the remarks made by the member for Wentworth?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, Mr. Chairman, I thought I dealt with the matter regarding the Niagara fruitlands in reply to the first question. I have no further comments to make.

Mr. Deans: Just one final point then. I want to say to the minister, if he wants to find out if the peninsula farmers are prepared to pay a little more in order to preserve their future, in order to safeguard themselves against the day when they will be forced to live within the price structure established outside of this country, then ask them. Ask them! I am convinced that they are prepared.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: What about the other 7.5 million people in Ontario? What about them?

Mr. Deans: Well speak to them, too, because they will suffer—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have, I have!

Mr. Deans: —just as much by the lack of action by the minister as will the people in the peninsula. The problem, my friend, is that the minister is too damned pig-headed to recognize the problem.

Mr. Chairman: Order, order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order! The hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin.

Mr. Farquhar: I would just like to see if I cannot find myself talking somewhere on a question that might be related to these estimates. I would like to direct the minister's attention back to the question of land acquisition if I can.

I recognize that the funds for land acquisition come, as far as I know, through The Department of Lands and Forests; and we also know that in connection with some of the things that The Department of Lands and Forests would like to do, the funds are not within their budget. All I want to ask the minister is whether in fact for community pasture purposes or any other purposes, there are funds within his department that could be used to assist The Department of Lands and Forests to acquire certain important pieces of property.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Can I ask the minister why he will not discuss the additional Gertler report on the Niagara area?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am not familiar with the report, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lewis: Well, by way of—I am not in the question period; I do not have to ask a supplementary. I gather that after Professor Gertler submitted his initial report to cabinet in the middle of 1968—it was released in October, 1969, if memory serves me—subsequent to that there was a report following on the heels of the assessment of the Niagara Escarpment which dealt particularly with the problems of fruit growing in the peninsula area. Is the minister aware of that report? Is he familiar with it? Was it brought to his attention?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, I must confess I read the report but I am not familiar with it at the moment and I am in no position to discuss it. I cannot remember the details of it at all. It is a long time ago.

Mr. Farquhar: Oh wonderful!

Mr. Lewis: But it is correct that there was a report specifically in this area which at some point in time crossed the minister's desk?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not have any further comment to make, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Farquhar: Can we get back on the estimates? Could I ask the minister if, at some point in the near future, he could discuss with the Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Brunelle) and his director the possibility of finding funds, within his estimates or wherever, for the purpose of assisting a project of land acquisition on Manitoulin Island? I do not have to get into the details of the negotiations that are proceeding and I do not intend to because they do not belong in these estimates at the moment.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: As the hon. member is well aware, discussions are going on now on the particular project to which he refers.

Mr. Farquhar: I have no intention of discussing those negotiations at all of course, and I am aware of them. I only want to try to make an effort to persuade the department that there might be ARDA funds to assist in these negotiations.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I said, yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Will item 1 carry?

Mr. Spence: Mr. Chairman!

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Kent.

Mr. Spence: I wonder if the minister could answer in regard to the study of transportation for the benefit of agriculture in the province.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes Mr. Chairman, the hon. member mentioned that earlier. I received his letter. We are looking into those possibilities.

There are many ramifications to it. There are some who share his support for this project; there are others who do not. It is a matter that I think we have to take a real good look at. There is no question that water transportation appears to be much less than rail transportation. If we are going to move grain from southwestern Ontario into export markets it would be very useful to have some type of port facilities.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: Mr. Chairman, the minister mentioned there are about 240,000 acres in the ARDA programme at the moment. What proportion of these are in a trade programme, in reforestation? Also, how large a tract of land does a farmer have to have to apply to reforest a particular area? How large an acreage?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We do not deal with that. That comes under The Department of Lands and Forests. The lands that we have acquired and have been turned over to forestry—I gave a figure of 45,000, I should have read that as 75,000 acres—have been acquired and turned over for forest reclamation purposes, which is under the direction of The Department of Lands and Forests. I believe that there are 225,000 acres that have been leased to farmers under the farm enlargement programme for agricultural purposes.

Mr. Innes: Now the community pastures programme, who owns that land?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: ARDA owns the land.

Mr. Innes: ARDA owns the land and manages it?

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under item 1?

The hon. member for Essex-Kent.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Mr. Chairman, I had an inquiry of the past-president of the Soya-bean Growers' Marketing Board, and I think I asked a question of the minister the other day with regard to this under co-op loans: Has the Soya-bean Marketing Board made any representation to the department to see if it could obtain any assistance for building a storage area?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is not in this vote, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: This will be vote 104.

Mr. Ruston: Okay.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under item 1 of 103?

Mr. Stokes: One brief question.

Mr. Chairman: Item 1, agricultural rehabilitation development.

Mr. Stokes: I do not profess to know anything about farming, but I had occasion to speak on several Indian reserves, and I think I brought one instance to the attention of the minister whereby we were trying to establish a community pasture arrangement on a reserve in my riding.

Apparently the minister investigated the thing and he came back and he said that the soil and climate and many other factors mitigated against the setting up of a community pasture. The chief of that reserve was so infuriated that he went and he planted a bunch of potatoes, and last fall when I visited he made me pose with a bunch of potatoes, about that size, that he grew on the reserve. And he said, "Now take that back to the Minister of Agriculture and tell him he is wrong." Unfortunately I have not got the pictures.

Mr. T. P. Reid: How could one tell the difference?

Mr. W. Hodgson: Sandy ground will grow potatoes, but it will not grow pasture.

Mr. Nixon: You can grow good alfalfa up there.

Mr. Stokes: I am wondering, on what basis did the minister's department make the determination and is there any way in which we—

Mr. Nixon: Roots 20 feet long.

Mr. Stokes:—might set up something that this reserve might qualify for the kind of thing that is covered in this vote?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not know which reserve my hon. friend is talking about.

Mr. Stokes: Heron Bay! Pic Reserve, Heron Bay; north shore of Lake Superior.

An hon. member: I did not think they had a farm up there.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs): Northwestern Ontario?

Mr. Stokes: Yes.

Mr. Lawlor: Let me tell the members that any land that will grow potatoes will grow pasture.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Where is the member for Thunder Bay's number?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Without casting any reflections upon the people who have the reserve at all, when the property was examined it was not determined that it was suitable for a community pasture project. I think my hon. friend will agree that one can grow potatoes on land—

Mr. Stokes: I really do not know; I am asking.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —in areas that would not be quite suitable for a community pasture. There are many Indian reserves that are being used for community pastures. I think there are two on Manitoulin Island as a matter of fact. But this particular one did not seem to have the qualification, and I do not believe there were cattle available to put on the land in the second place.

Mr. Chairman: Shall item one carry?

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): No!

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: There are two items with which I wanted to deal. The first has to do with the Bruce county community pasture. That is an excellent project; it provides a very real service to the farmers in the county. I am wondering a little bit about the philosophy, if it is the intention of the local committee at the direction of the ARDA branch to ultimately make the pasture farm operate on a break-even basis.

I know, at least I am pretty sure that it is not designed to show any sort of profit and be a profit-making enterprise. I am just wondering if there is any scheme and any plan whereby in the next few years that particular programme will be a break-even project?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, the Bruce community pasture is a break-even project now. It is paying all its expenses for the operation of the pasture. It is not intended that it pay back the capital investment in the property, but it is a break-even proposition right now.

Mr. Gaunt: In the calculation of that matter, are any of the buildings—well I guess they have not got any buildings. They have some chutes and some corral areas, but as far as actual buildings are concerned, if I recall correctly—and I have been up there a number of times—they do not have actual buildings on the site.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Only the weigh scale is covered.

Mr. Gaunt: Yes, but I am talking about more elaborate buildings. In the computations that are done, it is just the operating cost of that pasture programme for one year as against the revenues that it brings in through the charge to the farmers who pasture cattle on it. That is the sort of balancing done, is it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: And the municipal tax system carries that too.

Mr. Gaunt: Yes, right.

Now I am wondering in addition, and I move over to another matter having to do with the municipal taxes on the ARDA-owned properties as it relates to the farm reduction tax programme, I have had one or two cases where the lessee of an ARDA farm called about his tax reduction payment and he said: "I did not get my tax reduction money on the farm which I am leasing from ARDA and I understand that I am entitled to it." In talking with some of the ARDA people I understand that the money is paid to the ARDA branch and they in turn forward the cheque to the farmer. Now then, the catch comes in the business where there is an improper coding, as there has been with so many of these, where the assessment department has made a mistake. Is the onus on the farmer to get the correction made by the assessment department, or will the ARDA branch actually pursue it with the department and the department in turn will take it up with the assessment office in a given area?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, the answer to the question is this: Cheques are submitted to the ARDA directorate and they have all been paid out except those where there is a delinquent account and they have retained the cheque in the ARDA branch to offset the delinquency in the account.

Mr. Gaunt: Yes, I understand that, but where there is an improper coding, is the minister telling me that those have all been corrected and the moneys all paid out in those cases?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We are not aware of any improper coding in the ARDA accounts. There may have been but we are not aware of it.

Mr. Gaunt: There has been one to my knowledge and I would have to check—there may have been two, but certainly there is one up in Bruce county. I drew it to the attention—

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Treasurer): Great Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: Pardon me?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Great Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: No, no, in Bruce county.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): He did not say Grey-Bruce. He said great Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: Yes, of course, the great Bruce, the Treasurer says—

Mr. Nixon: Any delegates from up there?

Mr. Gaunt: —the great Bruce and I would certainly concur with that.

Mr. Nixon: They have one from Waterloo South.

Mr. Gaunt: I am wondering what the procedure will be. I am telling the minister, through you, Mr. Chairman, that there was a case where an ARDA farm was not coded as farm property. I am not sure what it was coded as; whether it was coded as residential or whether it was coded as commercial. I am not sure but it was improperly coded and the payment was not made to ARDA.

I am wondering, as a matter of clarification, because when I go home on the weekend my phone is going to be ringing no doubt and the farmer in question is going to be asking me where his cheque is. I want to have it absolutely clear as to the procedure that is involved. If he assumes the responsibility to get the assessing department, the assessment office in Owen Sound, to make that correction, then that is fine. I will inform him accordingly.

If, on the other hand, the ARDA branch will do it on his behalf and then forward the cheque to him, then that is fine, too. I will be able to pass that along to him, but I just want to have it absolutely clear as to what the procedure will be in this situation.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, I will relieve my hon. friend's concern for the weekend if he would tell my friend Mr. Crown, who is at the table here, after the House adjourns tonight, the name of the farmer. I do not want him to mention it here. Give him the name of the farmer, the lot and concession, and we will check it out.

We are not aware that this has happened, but as I say it could easily happen and there may be other cases, we do not know. We do know there have been some cases. But as I explained the other day, it has been corrected now so that we will be able to look after those farmers who were improperly coded. We will check it out through ARDA and see that the man is looked after.

Mr. Stokes: The member for Huron-Bruce should ask the minister if he will let him deliver the cheque?

Mr. Chairman: Shall item 1 carry? The hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: The minister said that delinquent people who owed ARDA had their rebate cheques held. Is that true?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes. Because we paid the taxes to the municipality.

Mr. Innes: And yet in the municipalities across Ontario where there were many land owners who had not paid their tax arrears for three years, the department returned it right to the owners and let the municipalities go look for it, and yet—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I said to my hon. friend the other day we did not know whether those taxes were being withheld purposely or whether—

Mr. Innes: Oh no? Well, the minister could have found out.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We had no way to know, so we paid everybody.

Mr. Innes: Oh yes there is.

Mr. Chairman: Is there anything further on item 1?

Item 1 agreed to.

On item 2:

Mr. Chairman: Grants under The Community Centres Act. Any discussion on item 2?

Item 2 agreed to.

On item 3:

Mr. Chairman: The Ontario Telephone Service. The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, I am wondering if the matter of consolidations of small rural telephone service companies across the province is actually continuing at an accelerated rate. For a few years the amalgamations were becoming quite frequent. I know the minister introduced a bill, I believe it was last year, with my full support certainly, allowing these companies to go into various other areas of investment in order to sort of supplement their operation and to put it on a more sound basis.

I know there are still quite a large number of small rural companies and I know they have trouble competing in the market against Bell Telephone with all its capital and its resources and the fact that it can instal new equipment—it is pretty hard for small rural telephone companies to compete, and yet the Ontario Telephone Service requires that they maintain certain standards and meet certain requirements in order to provide a minimum standard of service to the telephoning public which they serve.

Could the minister first of all give me the remaining number of small rural telephone companies in the province and the number of amalgamations that have taken place in the past year?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I can tell the hon. member that there are 51 left, and 10 of those are making arrangements over the next three years to phase out. So that it looks as though we will end up with about 40 strong, smaller, independent companies. About nine have amalgamated in the last year, so I am told.

Mr. Gaunt: Have any of those nine been taken over by Bell or have they amalgamated among themselves?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There has been some of both. We do not have the exact breakdown here. Those figures are obtainable but we do not have them exactly. I just cannot answer that.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: In this vote of $96,100—this is under the rehabilitation to help the outlying parts of the province basically. We have an area up our way where we have a dentist—we had a hell of a time getting him but finally we did get a dentist—and now he cannot get a telephone. We cannot give him telephone service because we have not got the money and the telephone company will not extend it to him because of the fact that it is an economically impossible line for them. Could the minister give us $2,000 or $3,000 for that?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I would like to, but I would be doubtful.

Mr. Sargent: The minister is doubtful?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes. Who has the franchise in the area? Does the member know?

Mr. Sargent: It is up Lion's Head way, near Tobermory. I can get the name of the service.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Maybe the member would be good enough to provide that information to us and we will follow up on that and explore the possibility.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Simcoe East.

Mr. G. E. Smith: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister a question or two. I am well aware of the counselling that the Ontario Telephone Service Commission gives to some of the smaller independent exchanges or companies—I have at least two in my area who are enterprising, still trying to operate as a viable unit—and I am wondering if this service, in addition to the financial counselling or business administration counselling advice, gives any advice from an engineering standpoint to assist these smaller exchanges?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, we do. We provide expert engineering service to all of them. We cannot do them all at once, but we certainly have that service available. It has helped a great many of these independent telephone companies to make the adjustments that modernization has required.

Mr. Chairman: Shall item 3 carry?

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, there is one other matter I want to deal with in this vote. It has to do with the billing procedures of some of the smaller telephone companies.

I think there has been some movement in the Ontario Telephone Service Commission to encourage these companies to adopt a uniform billing system; whether it be every month or every second month, I think the point is that it should be done on a regular basis.

There is one telephone company of which I am aware—maybe there are more—that does its billing by way of an addition to the tax notice. This is done once a year. If the municipality is switching to a twice-yearly system, then of course it will be done twice a year.

But in one particular case, the farmer was not living on the farm and he leased out the house; the person who was living in the house went on using the telephone and he ultimately moved out but he would not pay the bill. So the farmer was stuck with the bill and he really had no legal recourse, as I understand it. It was a case of the farmer having to locate the person who was renting the home and to actually sue him or put a judgement against him or garnishee his wages in some fashion in order to recover that.

Now it seems to me that this type of thing should not happen. I think that all telephone companies—regardless of whether it is Bell or the small rural companies—should do their billing monthly. I see no reason why they could not do that other than the fact that it might be somewhat more costly, not a great deal, but somewhat more costly because they have the mailing and the stamps and so on.

If that had been the case in this instance, this would not have happened. Presumably if the person who was living in the house had run on for two or three months, maybe even two months, his phone would have been cut off and at least the farmer, if he had to ultimately pay the bill, would not have been faced with one so high—I think it was $162 or something of that nature. It would maybe have been only $20 or $30, but it certainly would not have reached the amount at which it ended up.

Now is the service in a position to do this, other than on a suggested basis, other than to go to the company and say: "Look now, we think it is in the best interests of your patrons and users that you do this"? If it is on a suggested basis, I wonder would the commission entertain this idea? If they have perhaps a little more leverage to insist that the telephone companies do this, I am wondering if they will do so. I think that it could prevent this kind of thing happening. I would be interested in hearing the minister's comments.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There are one or two things that—there is a slight distraction here on my right, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gaunt: Is the Minister of Trade and Development giving the minister trouble? Is he giving the minister trouble?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: First of all, the farmer would actually be the subscriber and he would have the equity in that system. Certainly in the case of that phone he had an arrangement with his tenant that probably left something to be desired. But nevertheless this is an isolated situation that has come to our attention.

I am on one of these independent systems. We are billed every three months and I think it is a reasonably good way to do it. I would hate to see the telephone commission go to our telephone system up there in the great counties of Perth or Huron and say to them: "You bill every month."

I tell you I just would not want to be a part of that kind of a decision. I think these people—

Mr. Nixon: Are they one of the systems that are selling out?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No sir, they are one of the better systems in Ontario.

Mr. Innes: That is not what I heard last night.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well it may not be what the member heard last night, but just give that system time and it will work that situation out over there too. I do not think they would want to be told to bill every month.

I am advised by Mr. Bennett, assistant deputy minister, who is also on the telephone services commission, that where there is a complaint launched—

Mr. Nixon: Is he on the telephone commission too?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —by someone concerning this matter of billing, they will discuss this with the directors of the company, but they have never yet forced anybody to go to a different system of billing. They do explain to them the advantages that can accrue to that type of billing, but by the same token I think we must recognize that these are local rural telephone systems and I would like to see the local rural people run them. They are the people who own them and I think they are the people who should make the decisions themselves.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gaunt: All right, I agree in part with the minister. I think he makes a point. I am wondering about the number of companies that actually bill irregularly or perhaps only bill once or twice a year. Would the minister have any idea of the number of companies which have a billing procedure other than once a month?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No I do not have it.

Mr. Gaunt: Could the minister find out that information?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We could find it out, but I really do not think it is a very important issue, Mr. Chairman, quite frankly. I just do not think so.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, on this issue, can the minister tell me whether the telephone commission retains some power to control the service after a small rural telephone company sells out or joins the Bell network? Do they, in fact, have any continuing responsibility to see that the service is at least maintained as well and as extensively as it was before?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, the agreement of sale or transfer has to be considered by the commission and then the commission sees that the terms of that agreement are carried out by the purchasing system. That is the continuing relationship.

Mr. Nixon: Does the commission have any responsibility to deal with complaints after the sale when a company with a federal charter, such as Bell, in fact has the operating responsibility?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, if the complaint pertains to the agreement then the commission has some authority. But if it is a complaint unrelated to the terms of the agreement that were enunciated at the time of takeover, the commission does not have any authority. Does the member follow me?

Mr. Nixon: I suppose the agreement that is accepted by the commission basically would maintain at least as good service as before, let us say in the toll-free calling range. Certainly complaints have been sent on to me as a local member from certain areas where, when Bell has taken over, there have been complaints that the toll-free calling range has been inadequate compared with other Bell toll-free ranges, although perhaps not restricted from what it was before.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Was it the same now as it was when it was taken over? Was there any change?

Mr. Nixon: I know it is considered inadequate now.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It may be considered inadequate, but was it the same as it was when it was taken over?

Mr. Nixon: Well, it is inadequate now.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is a different matter.

Mr. Chairman: Does item 3 carry?

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Chairman, I—

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. member have very much more to say?

Mr. Gaunt: I am not a very fast talker. It may run on for a few minutes.

Mr. Chairman: I am very disappointed. I had it ticked off.

Mr. Nixon: Can you un-initial it?

Mr. Chairman: I can un-initial it!

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves that the committee of supply rise and report that it has come to a certain resolution, and begs for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply reports that it has come to a certain resolution and begs for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I perhaps might indicate to the members something of what the business of the House is expected to be for the next few days. Tomorrow I anticipate we will continue with the estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): No second readings?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I think not tomorrow!

On Monday we will perhaps seek to do some second readings, and whether these estimates presently before the committee are disposed of or not the minister will not be available Monday. We will proceed with the estimates of The Department of Lands and Forests on Monday, and perhaps then some second readings, depending on the exigencies of the situation.

In the committee on estimates on Monday, The Department of Energy and Resources Management. That will be followed in due course by Public Works; and in the House Lands and Forests and Agriculture and Food probably will be followed by the Provincial Secretary's estimates.

I understand that the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Lewis) will be speaking, I believe, at 4:30 on Tuesday—I believe it is 4:30 to some hour—and we may get some second readings done on that day.

Mr. Speaker: I presume that the private members' hour, in accordance—

Hon. Mr. Wishart: There will be private members' hour as usual. I anticipate night sittings as usual on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Before we move adjournment, Mr. Speaker, what committee is going to be hearing the estimates of Energy and Resources? Will it be the standing committee on natural resources or an estimates committee?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: An estimates committee on natural resources.

Mr. Nixon: Well on that point, Mr. Speaker, surely it is the estimates committee where there is the availability of substitution so that a variety of members can take part not only in the debate but in the votes.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I did not take time to look at the record.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Come on; somebody must know what is going on.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: It is on the record. When the committees were set up, the estimates for each department were designated there. I could check it, Mr. Speaker. I will have it for the members in due course.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): Do not worry about us.

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Treasurer): I think we should debate Kieran's resignation. That would be more interesting.

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): Mr. Speaker, I understand from our whip today that the estimates of The Department of Energy and Resources Management would be referred to the estimates committee.

Mr. Nixon: Oh good!

Mr. T. P. Reid: Who is running the show?

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the adjournment of the House.

The House adjourned at 10:35 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, APRIL 30, 1971

The House met at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: This morning our guests in the west gallery are students from Queen Elizabeth High School, Sioux Lookout, and in both galleries students from Downsview Secondary School in Downsview and Richard W. Scott School in Toronto.

Later today there will be students with us from King Edward School, Windsor; St. Ambrose Separate School, Toronto; Lewis S. Beattie Secondary School, Willowdale, and Levack District High School in Levack.

Statements by the ministry.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): Mr. Speaker, an agreement has been reached between the federal government and the government of Ontario to participate in a rent supplement programme that will provide accommodation for 1,100 Ontario families.

An hon. member: It is about time.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: This is the first time the federal government has agreed to participate in a rent supplement scheme under which Ontario Housing Corporation will lease accommodation from the private market for families on the waiting list. The subsidy involved will be shared 50 per cent by the federal government, 42.5 per cent by the province, and 7.5 per cent by the municipality involved. The reaching of this agreement will greatly facilitate our efforts in this field and reduce the time involved between the offering of units and the time they can be filled. So long as the units offered fall within the general guidelines worked out by the two governments, the corporation can directly enter into the lease without referral of the individual units to Ottawa for specific approval. The time involved in such referral had a serious effect on our pilot rent supplement project in Metropolitan Toronto.

In Metropolitan Toronto, a total of 500 units in two-, three-, four- and five-bedroom sizes will be leased from private housing stock. OHC has already issued a proposal call for these units and, at the present time, corporation officials are assessing something in excess of 400 units which have been offered to date.

The remaining 600 units will be located in 19 communities, and calls will be issued after necessary discussions are held with participating municipalities. The first such call has already been issued in Kitchener where the resolution passed by city council allows the use of this technique.

Ontario is very pleased that the federal government has joined with the province in this programme. We see it as a useful supplement to our construction programme and, hopefully, a means to obtain larger bedroom units which are in short supply.

Families accommodated under this programme will pay rent based on the geared-to-income rental scale with the three levels of government subsidizing the difference between that and the actual rent of the units.

Mr. Speaker, the programme is similar to the rent certificate programme operated by this government in 1960. Before it was phased out in 1964, the plan at its peak provided rental assistance for 240 families. Lack of financial participation from the federal and Metropolitan Toronto governments, and the fact that landlords demanded higher rents when the short-term leases came up for renewal, resulted in it being dropped. Now, of course, under this new plan we will be able to lease for as long as 10 years.

A decision to proceed with the leasing of further units over and above the 1,100 referred to under this new programme will depend upon OHC's success in leasing suitable accommodation and, ultimately, on market conditions.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RENT SUPPLEMENT PROGRAMME

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, further to the minister's statement, I wonder if he could explain why it is necessary to involve the municipalities directly on a cost-sharing basis when the responsibility for finding the accommodations and the decisions on who gets them will essentially be a provincial decision?

My second question is what information has gone out to the municipalities already which would enable the city of Kitchener to be prepared to take part in this programme at this stage?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, in respect to the first question, this is an arrangement made between the officials of the two governments. I cannot advise the hon. member as to what circumstances or what motivation entered into the final decision. Presumably, this was felt to be the only way it was advisable to go into it. I do not know sufficient of the background to be able to give the hon. member any further information. If I do get that information, of course, I will provide him with it.

I cannot recall the second question.

Mr. Nixon: How come Kitchener is ready to go ahead when the minister just made the announcement? I think it is very odd.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Because the municipality passed a resolution and this is required. We intend to go ahead and consider other municipalities and they will be so advised. I think they pretty well all know what the circumstances are and how they qualify for this.

Presently those areas being considered outside of Metropolitan Toronto are Kitchener, London, Hamilton, Kingston, Peterborough, Thunder Bay, Brampton, Brantford, Galt, Guelph, Mississauga, Oshawa, Belleville, Sarnia, Windsor, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, St. Catharines, and Ottawa, and presumably any other municipality which might qualify.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question: Surely the minister cannot say that it is officials that decide what levels of financial participation are entered into by the three levels of government. I would say—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has asked his question. Now he is about to make a statement and that is not part of a question.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Nixon: Well, I have asked a question. I would like an answer.

Mr. Speaker: That is entirely up to the minister. He may or may not answer as he sees fit.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I have not heard the question.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker said there was a question, so there must have been one.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member asked the question. Perhaps he would ask it again.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if I may rephrase my question, sir, for the convenience of yourself and the minister—

Mr. Peacock: Statements by the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. Leader of the Opposition is too experienced a politician and a member of this House to think that when he says, "I will say," he is asking a question, and I would ask him that in the future he would phrase a question as a question.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, thank you for your guidance and assistance.

I have a supplementary question to the minister. Why can he say that officials make the decision as to the financial contribution of the municipality when it is obviously his role as minister to make this policy decision?

Hon. J. White (Minister of University Affairs): How fierce!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I merely said that it was left to the officials of the two governments to come to some reasonable arrangement in respect of how this could be carried out. There may very well be considerations other than financial which led them to the conclusion that it would be better to have municipalities involved financially. Now as to what goes on at the moment, I am not in the position to say. The question is a good one. I will get the answer to it, of course.

In the final analysis, Ontario Housing Corporation, as well as the housing authorities representing the federal government, have to go to their respective governments, their respective treasury boards, their respective cabinets for approval of the policy. So, in the final analysis, it is the decision of the government because there are subsidies involved. I will get that information for the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor West.

Mr. Peacock: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Other than the participation of the federal government, how does this programme differ from the two earlier rent supplement programmes announced by the minister's predecessor between 1968 and 1970?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I thought that was explained at least in general terms in the original statement. In the first place, in the rent certificate programme there was no participation on the part of the federal government.

Mr. Peacock: Not the rent certificate programme; not the one that expired in 1964.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: All right. In the other one I was referring to, the federal government insisted, as I understand it, that every time there was an arrangement made where the landlord was prepared to rent his premises out, each individual case had to go to Ottawa to be processed; by the time that red tape was processed, the landlord got tired of waiting and just did not wait.

Mr. Peacock: That was in 1964.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There was a tremendous amount of red tape involved. Under the present arrangement the federal government leaves it entirely up to OHC to make its own arrangements locally and they will make an arrangement with the landlord, process the applications, and process the paper work.

Mr. Peacock: That was the 1964 programme.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: No! The 1964 programme fell down because of the reasons I explained in my statement.

Mr. Peacock: Right, but I am talking about the other two since then.

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. member wishes to ask a supplementary, he should do so properly.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member is talking about the other two since. I am talking about the other two. Under the temporary arrangement that was made at the time, we had to get this information for the federal government. It just took too long. Further, it was not possible to make the kind of a lease which a landlord was interested in; that is, something more than a very short-term lease.

Under the agreement with the federal government, we are now in a position apparently to make a lease between three and 10 years which, of course, a potential landlord would show a great deal more interest in than a short-term lease which may only last for two or three months.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor West has a further supplementary.

Mr. Peacock: In the rent supplement programmes announced since the collapse of the 1964 programme, can the minister tell the House how many units in fact were leased?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Pardon?

Mr. Peacock: Since the collapse of the 1964 rent supplement programme, can the minister tell the House how many units in fact were leased?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I do not think that I have that information.

Mr. Peacock: None.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): It would not take the hon. minister very long to compile it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I did not say it would.

Mr. Lewis: These rent supplement programmes have not saved housing in Ontario yet.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor-Walkerville was on his feet. Has he a supplementary?

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, if I may ask of the minister were consultations under way between both the municipalities and the federal government before this programme was implemented?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I should add that the difficulty in making a statement in respect to any arrangements of this nature with the federal government is that the announcements should be made simultaneously. As a matter of fact, because of that, I always make it a practice, as far as is humanly possible, to check every statement before I make it in this House and go over it thoroughly so I am completely familiar with the details. Unfortunately—

Mr. Nixon: What was that? What was that?

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): It is too early for that kind of put-on.

Mr. Lewis: It is Friday morning; do not put us on.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would not change anything in that statement if I had to do it all over again. There is nothing wrong with it; it is factual. Now I take it, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): The minister could inject a little truth into it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I take it, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. members would like to hear the balance of what I have to say in respect of the statement.

There is an arrangement between OHC and their counterparts in Ottawa that the federal minister will make a statement simultaneously with the statement made in the province, whichever province they are making these arrangements with. This was one of the problems—

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Assuming he does not resign in the meantime.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): What was that?

Mr. Makarchuk: Assuming he does not resign in the meantime.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh yes.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: This is one of the problems—somewhat like the red tape that was involved previously when we had to go to the federal government and give them all the details of the unit we were going to rent, or something of that nature. That has been cut down.

Apparently we have not been able to find a way to cut down on the red tape as between public statements arranged for simultaneous delivery by the two governments. This was handed to me last night. I got as much information as I could for the hon. members this morning, because the statement was made this morning, I think, at about 9 o'clock in the House of Commons.

So I have given the members all the information I could possibly get together between last night and now. Any questions that the hon. members are asking, or are prepared to ask, and for which I do not have the information, I have told them I will be very pleased to get it for them.

Mr. Lewis: Just tell us how many flats you intend to rent.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We always co-operate with the federal government.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville has a supplementary?

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, the hon. minister did not reply as to whether the municipalities were consulted before this programme was to be implemented. If they were consulted, would the minister care to reply as to whether he would ask Treasury Board for some type of grant to enable the municipalities to carry on with this programme, because as a result of it—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has asked his question; he is now making a statement.

Mr. B. Newman: Did he consult with the the municipalities?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The question was asked previously and I think I answered it as to whether municipalities had been advised.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister saying to the House that he, as the responsible person in the government, had nothing to do with these negotiations until the officials had an agreement which was then placed in his hands to be read here?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the negotiations have been going on for some time. The OHC comes to the government to ask for an allotment of funds to carry on a certain programme. OHC obviously had to come to the government to say, "We are entering into negotiations—with your permission—with the federal government. This will probably be what the subsidy will be." They ask for approval; obviously if we approve, if Treasury Board and cabinet approve of the subsidy, obviously we must be approving of the plan to go ahead and discuss with federal authorities.

Mr. Nixon: The minister does not know much about it.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary, does the minister know how much it is going to cost the municipalities in the current fiscal year?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, of course not, Mr. Speaker. It would depend upon the sort of an arrangement the municipality enters into in a particular case. If they have decided that they will enter into this programme, that they want to participate for 50 units, 100 units or even 10 units, it will depend upon that as to what amount they are prepared to go for.

Mr. Singer: The minister mentioned 1,100 units as a potential for the current year; if that full 1,100 units is taken up, how much is 7.5 per cent of the cost of subsidizing 1,100 units?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That information I have, Mr. Speaker. If the hon. member will wait until a little later, I will have the documents in about—

Mr. Peacock: Who is buried in Grant's tomb?

Mr. Singer: By way of further supplementary, does the minister know how municipalities that have already fixed their budget are going to be able to participate in this without redoing their whole budget scheme?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, no.

Mr. Singer: Another supplementary question: Does the minister know whether or not Ontario Municipal Board approval will be necessary for this kind of municipal expenditure, because apparently it is going to extend for a longer period than one year?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The answer to that, Mr. Speaker, is no, although it would be much more helpful if we could see a lot more alacrity by the opposition so that we are able to get more housing units. Everyone over there seems to be unhappy about it.

Mr. Nixon: Not at all.

Mr. Singer: We want to know how the minister is going to do it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Peacock: They have not rented a single unit.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Are members over there happy to see us arranging these units?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We will get the members all this information. Why do members opposite not give us their blessings?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): The minister made a better jailer than he did a tradesman.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That is not what the hon. member said when I was Minister of Correctional Services.

Mr. Speaker: Order, the Minister of Municipal Affairs advises me that he has a statement which is of interest and upon which there might be questions. Would the House agree to reverting to statements and then we will come back to the Leader of the Opposition and questions?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the assistance and co-operation of the members. I am pleased to announce the provisions for payments to designated mining municipalities for 1971 and future years, referred to by the provincial Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) in his budget statement of Monday, April 26. The formula which is the basis of the new scheme was developed in association with the mining municipalities and is presented as a long-term solution to a somewhat difficult problem. Any change of formula inevitably implies that there will be some change in the distribution pattern of the provincial assistance previously established, and this scheme is no exception.

If we need any reassurance that such a change is overdue, however, we need to look only at the comments of the Ontario committee on taxation and the select committee of the Legislature. Both were unanimous in their criticism of the formula which operated to the end of 1969. It was originally hoped to introduce a new formula in 1970, but this proved impossible due to a lack of information on the assessment of mines processing facilities in sufficient time.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): In time for the election though.

Hon. Mr. Bales: An interim programme was developed for 1970. The new formula draws some of its inspiration from the comments and suggestions of the members of both of the House committees to which I have referred. I considered them, and the representations of the Association of Mining Municipalities have also been carefully considered.

I feel sure that the latter will agree that the new procedures will more adequately reflect the current requirements.

The mining revenue payment will continue to fill the role of a taxation deficiency grant but, in future, the province will measure the deficiency attributable to each designated municipality by comparing the actual per capita assessment to a predetermined standard. In effect, this programme will mark a first step toward a grant system based on the needs and resources of municipalities. Each mining municipality will receive a payment which is related to its assumed fiscal impairment. The predetermined standard assessment—

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): That is our tax foundation grant.

Hon. Mr. Bales:—which will remain fixed has been set at $10,000 of provincially equalized assessment per head of assessed population. The actual per capita equalized assessment for each municipality will be deducted from this standard in order to determine the deficiency. When the scheme becomes fully operable, the province will, in effect, make a payment in lieu of taxes on this assessment deficiency.

For example, we are dealing with a municipality which has a per capita equalized assessment of $8,000. Since the standard assessment is $10,000 per capita, the province will contribute the difference. Thus, the basic payment to the municipality would be 20 per cent of the approved municipal expenditures.

The payment to those municipalities which are not deemed to be fully dependent on the mining industry will be modified. Municipalities in which 10 per cent or more of the population is composed of resident miners, will be deemed to be fully dependent on the mining industry.

For those municipalities in which the ratio of resident miners to total population is less than 10 per cent the payment will be reduced in proportion. For example, a municipality with only nine per cent resident miners would receive 90 per cent of the payment under the basic formula.

To facilitate the changeover and to prevent undue fluctuations in tax burdens, the implementation will be phased in over three years so that the new basis will not be fully functional until 1973.

Perhaps inevitably there are still a few unknown quantities and the government will be keeping a close watch over the situation to ensure that the new system operates satisfactorily. We are satisfied that the new system is a substantial improvement, but we are prepared to consider any adjustments that may become necessary as experience is developed.

Mining revenue payments have become a very complex topic and we propose to introduce a number of associated reforms aiming at simplifying the system. I will briefly mention only two of them.

Firstly, in future, mining revenue payments will be made exclusively for the benefit of the municipal general fund. There will be no apportionment of the payment to other purposes or bodies. In 1970, $2.5 million of the payment was allocated to boards of education and these apportionments operated to reduce the grants to the school boards. In 1971, this will not apply and we anticipate that, as a result, the school board grants will be substantially increased.

We expect that, although the provision for mining revenue payments has been reduced by $700,000 this year, education grants will increase by approximately $1,100,000. Thus, the taxpayers in mining areas will benefit to the extent of some $400,000.

Mr. Nixon: We will have to have the Minister of Trade explain this.

Hon. Mr. Bales: It is our intention to ensure that no taxpayers suffer by reason of any net deficiency in the amount paid to municipalities.

Secondly, in the future, no municipality will be designated as a mining municipality unless it has at least 2.5 per cent of its population represented by resident miners. This will not, however, affect any municipality previously designated. By the time the new scheme is fully implemented in 1973, I estimate the programme will be assisting the mining municipalities to the extent of about $11 million annually or some $3 million more than they received in 1970.

The new regulations governing the new payment system will be issued shortly. I shall be advising the designated municipalities of the amount they may expect to receive for 1971 as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker: We now revert to the question period. The Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

MINING REVENUE PAYMENTS

Mr. Nixon: Further to the statement that the minister has just completed and which I think will have to be examined rather carefully—

Mr. Singer: By the Minister of Trade.

Mr. Nixon: Is it to be understood that the mining revenue payments in fact will be reduced this year?

Hon. Mr. Bales: They will not be reduced in the net amount. In the actual amount, yes.

Mr. Nixon: They will be reduced this year?

Mr. Singer: Not in the net amount, but in the actual amount. That is a very clear distinction, that one.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, in previous years part of the mining revenue payment was allocated to school boards. This year none of the mining revenue payment goes to school boards. All of it remains with the municipality for municipal purposes.

Mr. Nixon: Why would it be reduced?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Because last year part of it was paid to the school boards in lieu of grants. This year the grants are paid direct to the school boards.

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister without Portfolio): Can the hon. Leader of the Opposition not understand that? It is pretty clear I would say.

Hon. Mr. Bales: In the result there is an increase of an estimated $400,000, but to ensure that no municipal taxpayer receives less than he did last year, we will make up any net deficiency that actually develops.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Thunder Bay has a supplementary?

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What does the increase announced in the budget by way of mining revenue payments mean to municipalities which qualify on a per capita basis?

Secondly, will the amount that accrues to mining municipalities be taken into consideration in cost-sharing programmes, such as district homes for the aged and other cost-sharing programmes?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I will take the last one first. This is a direct payment to the municipality and there is no money deducted from it for those other purposes. It is a straight payment, dependent, of course, on the fact that we have to have their final budgets before we can actually calculate payment.

Mr. Stokes: Would the minister answer the first question on a per capita basis?

Hon. Mr. Bales: We use the per capita data to obtain the assessment basis and that is how we figure out what the deficiency is.

Mr. Stokes: Has the minister calculated what the increase will mean to mining municipalities on a per capita basis for the forthcoming fiscal year?

Hon. Mr. Bales: No. We will do it on a municipality basis. We do not do it on a per capita basis.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Rainy River has a supplementary?

Mr. T. P. Reid: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, can the minister indicate what, if any, across-the-board increase there will be in the revenues that each municipality will receive under this new tax system?

Hon. Mr. Bales: For an individual municipality?

Mr. T. P. Reid: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, Mr. Speaker, I cannot do that. We have to have the actual or final budgets for the individual municipalities before we can actually calculate the amount. But I think the important point is that the municipalities should understand that they will not be receiving less than they received in 1970.

Mr. T. P. Reid: But not necessarily more?

Hon. Mr. Bales: They will be receiving more, we have estimated, by about $400,000 overall.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Spread over all the municipalities?

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough West has a supplementary?

Mr. Lewis: When, Mr. Speaker, will the schedule be published to show what each mining municipality receives? When will the hon. minister have that?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, we have to have the actual budget from the municipalities before the final amounts can be calculated. As soon as we receive that information we can then calculate the amounts and they would be advised directly.

In the meantime we give the assurance that they will receive no less than they received in 1970.

Mr. Lewis: I understand that, but the hon. minister has already indicated in the budget that he anticipates an increase of $400,000 overall. That anticipated increase must already be broken down by his department in order to arrive at the figure. Is there no way of indicating to the House which mining municipalities are affected?

Hon. Mr. Bales: The basis on which it was done was to take their preliminary budgets for last year and then calculate it on that basis and make some allowance for increases.

Mr. MacDonald: The hon. minister means it is a ballpark figure.

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, it is not a ballpark figure.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York South.

Mr. Lewis: By way of further supplementary: Has the minister done that on the basis of his new formula or the old formula?

Hon. Mr. Bales: We took the preliminary budget of last year and applied the new formula to it so as to obtain some reasonable estimates of what it would be.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre has a supplementary?

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): A supplementary question: Would the town of Goderich, which as I remember, was one of the very highest beneficiaries of the mining tax on a per capita basis, also continue to get the same amount as it has previously, even though it would seem to be far out of line with other mining municipalities in the province? Would there be an adjustment downward over a period of years to bring it in line?

Hon. Mr. Bales: There was an arrangement made in reference to Goderich because of the salt mines there, and there is a special regulation that pertains to that. I think it is scaled down over a period. This I cannot be positive of—the rate—but I know that at the moment they will receive the same benefit as they did last year.

Normally they would receive a lesser payment but they will be protected under this for the phase-in period.

Mr. Deacon: A further supplementary: Is it planned to adjust the $10,000 assessment base if inflation or other factors cause this level of assessment to lose its relevance as a basis of measurement?

Hon. Mr. Bales: For example, we have used the figure of $10,000 now, which is higher than the average per capita assessment across the province. If that increases we would certainly want to look at it to make changes in the future.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Grey-Bruce has a supplementary?

Mr. Sargent: No, sir, my question is answered.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Timiskaming has a supplementary?

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): Would the minister clarify one point for me? He has guaranteed that there will be no drop in payment for 1971? Does that extend into 1972 and 1973?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Right through to 2000.

Hon. Mr. Bales: No. We anticipate that there will be an increase in each year, but when you are introducing a new system and a new type of calculation there are bound to be some municipalities that might receive less. We are guaranteeing against a net loss for this year. Then, when we look at the actual figures at the end of this year, we will be in a position to see whether we need to make that kind of adjustment in future. If we do, I will certainly give it careful consideration.

Mr. Jackson: One further question, Mr. Speaker: On the basis of a town that is now dependent—10 per cent or greater—on this mine revenue payment, if in the future the mining population declines—

Hon. Mr. Bales: Could the hon. member repeat the first part of his question? I did not quite hear it.

Mr. Jackson: Taking the example of a town that is dependent on mining at this moment, where the mining population declines, would the mine revenue payment decline at the same rate?

Hon. Mr. Bales: If the number of miners in the municipality decreased below 10 per cent, then there would be an adjustment because they are not as dependent upon the mining industry as they were previously. But that has to be worked out carefully.

Now, on one point I think I may have misled the House. I said 1971 budgets—those will not come until next year. What we will have to use is the budget of 1970 and those final figures or expenditures are not available until well on in the summer of 1971.

Mr. Speaker: The Leader of the Opposition.

PROVINCIAL ELECTION DATE

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Tourism: Can he provide the House with a translation of his comments on the French network yesterday in which he, as a minister of the Crown, indicated that the election date would be somewhat postponed?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Tourism and Information): Mr. Speaker, it is quite—

Mr. Lewis: Try saying it in French.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, I do not want to embarrass the hon. member.

I was asked to comment on the budget by the French network of the CBC the day before yesterday, I believe. I wish to assure the Leader of the Opposition that my comments were very favourable about the budget and then I was asked—

Mr. MacDonald: Then the minister violated cabinet secrecy.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: There is not any secret there—but I think I was asked whether this would be the last budget before the election and I said, "Well, I would think so." That is all I said and my guess is just as good as the hon. member's. Thank you.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It might even be better.

OLD FORT WILLIAM EXPENDITURES

Mr. Nixon: I have another question of the Minister of Tourism. Can he tell the House what the decision is in the expenditure of $5 million in the establishment of Old Fort William in the Thunder Bay city area as a major tourist attraction, which was announced some weeks ago by the former Premier and is supposed to go forward immediately?

Mr. Lewis: And has just lost the seat for the member for Fort William (Mr. Jessiman) over there.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member, I think you will find in the budget that we have an item for $1 million for 1971.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question of the minister: Can he explain why it was decided that the original site of the fort could not be usable and in fact it had to be located some five miles from that original site?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: No, Mr. Speaker. This factor is still not quite definite. We are meeting with the vice-president of CPR on Monday next, and as you know there have been disputes in Thunder Bay about the original site and the site which the department had possibly preferred.

The Minister of Public Works and myself spent two days listening to groups of people, the historical societies, who were opposed to the new site, the Point de Meuron. Following this we said that we would approach the president of the CPR and even the federal government, we might need their help, to see if the original site was available because we did get a letter from the CPR telling us that it was not. This matter should be resolved by Monday.

Mr. Nixon: By way of supplementary, is it possible that the original location—that is, the one announced by the former Premier—will not be where the actual construction takes place?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, the big problem is that the original site is not available now. It is owned by the CPR—I mean the tracks—and that is what we have to resolve shortly.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, the minister was in Thunder Bay not very long ago making a categorical announcement that the old fort will be built on the new site despite the evidence of widespread public opposition. Why has the policy been changed?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, there has been no change of policy at all. I spent two days in Thunder Bay to hear groups of people who were against the Point de Meuron and we said from there that we would discuss it with CPR. We have tried time and again to get the president of CPR on the phone in the last two weeks. We are finally getting his assistant on Tuesday next.

Mr. Lewis: The minister got him on the phone?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: On the phone. We have been trying to get appointments to see him, and we are seeing his vice-president on Monday.

Mr. Lewis: You should tell him you are a cabinet minister in Ontario.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the hon. Minister of Energy and Resources Management—

Mr. Lewis: Have you ever phoned the CN?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Oh, shut up.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Scarborough West will have his turn in due course.

JAMES BAY HYDRO PROJECTS

Mr. Nixon: There will not be any time left. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister can tell us if there have been any negotiations with Hydro-Quebec on the development of the substantial James Bay hydro projects which have been announced, or are to be announced, that might include Ontario development in the same location?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Speaker, there have been the usual discussions with Hydro-Quebec about their power capacity. This would include Churchill Falls in Labrador, for example, as well as a potential at James Bay.

Mr. Sargent: What about Hydro?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: There is always the possibility of course that we may purchase power from a source such as Hydro-Quebec in that area.

Mr. Nixon: There is a substantial possibility!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: If our needs develop in that way, depending of course when that development would take place and when power would be available. But there has been no definite contractual arrangement regarding the development of James Bay between Ontario Hydro and Hydro-Quebec.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question: Is there potential for a similar development on our side of the provincial border?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: It is my understanding, Mr. Speaker, that we do not have the falls or the water power within our boundaries that is available in Quebec. Our streams do not have the falls, for example, and therefore do not have the potential to develop hydro power on our side as exists in Quebec.

MANPOWER RETRAINING

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the hon. Minister of Education: Is he aware that the Premier has undertaken to investigate the reasons why the teaching capacity at some of the community colleges in regard to manpower retraining has been downgraded because of federal fund deficiency? Is the Minister of Education interesting himself in this substantial problem, particularly at Mohawk College where some of the finest teachers have been laid off and the classes are assuming very large and inefficient proportions?

Hon. R. Welch (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, the answer to both questions is yes.

Mr. Nixon: Well, a supplementary question: I wonder if a statement could be made in the near future about this. The students themselves are suffering substantially—

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Mr. Nixon: —and will the statement be forthcoming in the next day or two because I have put it to the Premier for the last two or three weeks?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I hope to have it soon.

Mr. Speaker: Any further supplementaries?

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): Mr. Speaker, in relation to that problem, when the community colleges will be going on formula financing, does the minister realize that some of the staff in these community colleges do not know whether they will be teaching next year because of the lack of a decision in this area?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I think the government policy in this matter will become quite clear. You will recall that the Speech from the Throne said the government would announce its intentions to transfer the community colleges to The Department of University Affairs under a new departmental name. No doubt at that time we would be in a position to provide further information with respect to the question which the hon. member has raised.

Mr. Pitman: By way of a further supplementary, will the individual colleges be given some indication of exactly what their revenues will be next year for staff and for operation?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, the estimates have been tabled now—

Mr. Sargent: There is lack of efficiency in the whole operation.

Hon. Mr. Welch: —so that as far as the current fiscal year is concerned, they would know on that basis.

Mr. Pitman: Estimates do not divide into colleges.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton Mountain.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): A supplementary question of the hon. Minister of Education. Would the minister also include in his report the conditions at the Saltfleet campus of Mohawk College as well as the Braneida campus in Brantford as they affect the cutbacks in the manpower retraining programme?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, does the minister realize that besides the manpower retraining students who are being hurt, other students who have paid their tuition to attend these colleges are only getting between eight and 12 minutes of education per hour because of the cutbacks, and because of that it is an urgent matter?

Mr. Speaker: The Leader of the Opposition has completed? The member for Scarborough West.

NIAGARA PENINSULA REPORTS

Mr. Lewis: A question of the Minister of Lands and Forests, Mr. Speaker: Was there a second report dealing with any aspect of the Niagara Escarpment or Niagara Peninsula which came from Professor Gertler or via Professor Gertler after the original Gertler report?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of another report. The only one I am familiar with is the Gertler report.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: Is the Premier aware of any further substantive document on the Niagara Escarpment or Niagara Peninsula that came by way of Professor Gertler beyond the original document?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am certainly not aware of it in the last couple of months. I shall see if there has been any further material supplied by Professor Gertler. I do not know of it, but I will certainly have a look.

Mr. Nixon: Somebody phoned the NDP.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Obviously the member for Scarborough West knows there is, or feels there is.

Mr. Lewis: I am not certain but I would like to know.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No?

LAW SCHOOL ADMISSIONS TEST

Mr. Lewis: May I ask a question of the Minister of University Affairs, Mr. Speaker— if you will forgive my morning chauvinism— does the minister think that there is any possibility that the law schools of Toronto, Osgoode Hall, Windsor, Western and Queen's, might use something other than the Princeton law school admissions test by way of evaluating analytic capacity for admissions procedure?

Hon. Mr. White: I should think that would be possible, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, might the minister enter into discussion with these various law schools to see whether or not we are capable in Ontario of formulating our own admissions test on which to judge Ontario students?

An hon. member: Do you think we could rise to it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I did not even have to take a test.

Hon. Mr. White: I am quite prepared to discuss this and other matters, although quite frankly I am not entirely sure that this is my responsibility. However, I will ponder the matter over the weekend and form a conclusion Monday or Tuesday.

LIST OF IBM SHARES

Mr. Lewis: I always ask the minister questions on Friday to give him the weekend.

May I ask a question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs? At the recent annual meeting of IBM, I think it was the president of IBM, who when queried about listing on the Toronto Stock Exchange, said, "We do not think it would be in the interests of stockholders to change unless it becomes a matter of law or good business." Does the government intend to ask IBM to list on the exchange?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I shall take the question as notice so that I can get some more information than the question affords and give the hon. member an answer.

Mr. Lewis: I am referring to the listing of the shares of IBM Canada and subsidiaries.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Right. I understand.

MOOSONEE AND MOOSE FACTORY TRANSPORTATION STUDY

Mr. Lewis: Can I ask the Minister of Lands and Forests a question, Mr. Speaker, about Moosonee and Moose Factory? What has happened to the study of transportation between the two communities which the minister indicated would be undertaken when he visited those communities at the end of last year?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I attended the meeting in Moose Factory in February, and at that time I said one of the problems that should be resolved was the question of transportation from Moose Factory island to Moosonee for social, economic, cultural and many reasons. I would like to tell the hon. member that Moose Factory is in the mouth of the Moose River, in tidal waters—

Mr. Singer: Is it still there?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle:—and that the federal government has quite a responsibility in this matter of transportation. I have been in communication with the federal member for that area and I have suggested that there should be a task force or a committee comprised of federal and provincial representatives as well as local people.

This matter of transportation was discussed as recently again as two weeks ago, by the NOR committee, the Northern Ontario Transportation Committee, and it will be discussed at a future meeting. So there is considerable discussion under way. Again I do feel that the federal government has a very large responsibility in this area and that they also should be part of the study.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, since the lives of two communities are in some sense dependent on the building of either a causeway or providing some kind of transportation link, has the minister any idea of when this might occur? We have been years now in the process of discussing—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member has asked the question.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I would like to say to the hon. member that again there has been a lot of work done. This winter I asked that local contractors give us an estimate of the cost of building a causeway from Moose Factory Island to Butler Island. We are also looking into another possibility: Many feel, and I feel, that there should be a ferry service from Moosonee to either Moose Factory or to Butler Island. Again I must repeat this has to be a federal-provincial arrangement.

Mr. Lewis: By way of final supplementary, what is the minister's estimated cost, given all these studies, of, let us say, a ferry service at breakup or prior to freezing?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, when the member says the "estimated cost," we had costs five years ago. The Department of Highways had a very extensive study at that time as a result of the large columbium deposits located about 30 miles southeast of Moosonee.

Those studies looked into the various modes of transportation, cable cars, tunnels, bridges, hovercraft, helicopters, every means of transportation. However the projected figures were exceedingly high and that is why today we think there should be some means of transportation using a ferry and the causeway, or a combination of both. These studies are proceeding.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT LOGO

Mr. Lewis: One last question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker. When the Ontario government intercity telephone network was put out—the new listing—the logo that was used was in the form of an elephant, and now the information kit for the civil service has come out and again the logo used is in the form of an elephant. Does the government intend to adopt the elephant as its official logo form?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I do not think we intend to adopt it on all documents.

Mr. Pitman: Slow moving, rather dull.

Mr. Lewis: I thought there were certain analogies that could be drawn, like long memories.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Tourism and Information has the reply to a question asked the other day.

TOURISM STUDY IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

On April 27 the hon. member for Rainy River asked a question in two parts. The first part: Is there a study on tourism in northern Ontario? The answer is yes, there is a study on the development of tourism in northern Ontario.

The second part: Is the 1968 study redundant? The answer is no. Many of the recommendations have been or are currently in the process of being followed up by our department.

Mr. T. P. Reid: As a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, can the minister indicate what the purpose of this new study is and how much it is costing? It is being done by Proctor and Redfern, I believe.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, of course, the purpose is to develop tourism in northern Ontario. We call it the DOTNO study. The cost of the present study will be $34,000 of which $18,000 has been paid to date.

Mr. T. P. Reid: By way of supplementary, can the minister explain what purpose this report is going to prove that the report which came out in 1968 did not prove? And, incidentally, how much did that report of 1968 cost?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The study of 1968, I am informed, cost $25,000, but was financed by ARDA.

The present study is to formulate planning concepts and functional guidelines to be used in aiding the department's field staff in administering their respective areas and advising prospective or present entrepreneurs in the tourist industry. The study will also serve as a short-term interim measure until another more comprehensive study called "Tourism and Auto Recreation Planning Study" is made operational.

Mr. T. P. Reid: By way of further supplementary, the government is studying us to death up there—

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member will ask a question.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Does the minister think—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. T. P. Reid: If the government would hire people from the north to do these studies it would do something for the employment situation.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. T. P. Reid: Does the minister think that a firm can come into a community in northwestern Ontario and in a two-hour meeting with some of the local people be able to come back to Toronto and write a report that is going to have any application to tourism in northwestern Ontario?

An hon. member: That is a good question.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I shall be glad to look into this in the studies that are going on. I want to assure the hon. member that this government wants to serve his area so well, that this is why we are having these studies made.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Grey-Bruce.

MEMBERS' COCKTAIL LOUNGE

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Prime Minister: In view of the misleading budget of the Treasurer—

Mr. Speaker: Order, Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Withdraw.

Mr. Sargent:—and his desire for economy and all that nonsense, can the Prime Minister tell me how, in this multi-point question, he can justify the fact that—

Hon. Mr. Davis: One at a time.

Mr. Sargent:—we have in the dungeon, in the basement down there, the most lavish cocktail lounge in the Province of Ontario with two staffed employees sitting there for a month, who have not had one customer? How can the minister justify in the name of economy spending $100,000 on a lounge that is non-operative—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What was the customer doing there?

Mr. Sargent: There were not any customers, but the people are there in their red jackets to serve the members if they are thirsty.

Mr. Nixon: The government did not get the Minister of Trade and Development to apply for the licence.

Mr. Sargent: How can the Premier kid the people of Ontario that he is going to save money when he can spend money like that?

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member has asked his question.

Mr. Sargent: Can the Premier solve the problem?

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member has asked his question. He will now allow the Prime Minister to answer it.

Mr. Sargent: Well, it sounds pretty good.

Mr. Speaker: No, no.

Mr. Sargent: Okay, how does the Premier justify it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will answer the first part of the multi-point question.

First, I recognize the member for Grey-Bruce has great expertise when it comes to the management of cocktail lounges. The point, I think, must be made that to my knowledge, there is no cocktail lounge in the north wing of the Parliament Buildings in this province.

Mr. Sargent: If the Premier wants to walk, in five minutes I will take him down there.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: They have to get a licence.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a further supplementary question: How does the Premier hope to kid the people? Is he going to hide the bar? What is he going to do?

Mr. Speaker: Order! That is not a supplementary. The member for High Park has the floor.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Did the member for High Park have a question? The member for Sandwich-Riverside.

INDUSTRIAL POLLUTANT INVENTORY

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management.

Mr. Sargent: It is the Bill Davis bottle club.

Mr. Burr: Has the minister asked industries for an inventory of all the pollutants and possible pollutants being used in their manufacturing processes?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, certain industries, by the very nature of their operation, use certain types of chemicals and substances that we feel may affect the environment in some way. They have been asked for information on those particular substances from time to time. There has not been a blanket request to my knowledge, Mr. Speaker, to all industries for such an inventory as envisaged by the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: The question period as extended has now expired.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, before moving to the other orders, it is a great pleasure to introduce to the members of this House, the hon. Mr. Colborne who is the Minister of Municipal Affairs from our sister Province of Alberta.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. Villeneuve presented the report of the standing committee on human resources and moved its adoption as follows:

The committee begs to report that it has met and requests of the House permission to hear from Miss Barbara Chisholm, former director of the Victoria day nursery, and other interested parties at the discretion of the chairman on the subject of day care.

Mr. Nixon: Just before the motion is put, Mr. Speaker, might I just bring to your attention, sir, that this report asks permission of the House to invite a lady, Miss Barbara Chisholm to attend the committee to give her views on day care centres.

Am I to understand, sir, that this is going to be a standard procedure from now on, that before the committee on human resources can ask Miss Barbara Chisholm, or anybody else in the community, to come in and give their views they have to get the rubberstamp from the government?

Surely this is a ridiculous procedure and one that is completely unnecessary.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, having established the straitjacket two weeks ago, the government now has to live within it. It is as simple as that.

Mr. Lewis: By way of intervention, Mr. Speaker, all of us in this party know Barbara Chisholm well, and have worked—well, not all of us, but many of us—with her before on other matters and understand her competence in the field. We will vote against this motion on principle, Mr. Speaker, because we are not going to be bound by this that every single time we want to draw a citizen before the committee we have to gain the will of the government.

The fact is that the member in charge, the chairman of that committee, already carefully destroyed the research capacities of the committee by refusing to accept certain obvious motions for staff and support. This is an absurd procedure and I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the motion be withdrawn and that we not be subjected to this kind of scrutiny, school-mastering by the government. The committee is perfectly capable of deciding itself whom it will bring before it.

Mr. Speaker: I have been advised by the Clerk, who, I presume, has been advised by the clerk of that committee, that actually the motion was meant to enable the matter of day care to be referred to the committee, not necessarily to have the lady in question attend.

Mr. Lewis: Not individuals? That is not what the motion says.

Mr. Speaker: I realize that, but that is what has come to me through the administrative part of the committee. If that were so, then our discussion is beside the point but the motion is not properly worded.

Mr. Shulman: Then withdraw the motion.

Mr. Lewis: Let the motion go.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Withdraw the motion.

Mr. Speaker: I have no power to withdraw a motion.

Mr. Lewis: Well, let the motion be re-drafted.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps rather than putting the motion the House would agree that we adjourn the debate on this motion and by the first of the week either the motion can be redrafted or the debate can continue and be dealt with then. Would the chairman of the committee be agreeable to that and move the adjournment of the debate?

Mr. O. Villeneuve (Glengarry): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Villeneuve moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

TOWN OF ST. MARYS

Mr. Deacon, in the absence of Mr. Edgihoffer, moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act respecting the Town of St. Marys.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Peacock: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order before the orders of the day, the routine proceedings for motions have passed us without any motion from the government House leader that estimates be referred to the standing committee.

I understand it was the government's intention to refer Energy and Resources Management to a standing committee of the House on Monday next. Standing order 87—

Mr. Speaker: May I say that it is quite possible. I have had no information from the House leader but it is quite possible that this House could sit at 2 o'clock Monday and have such a motion and it would be referred to the committee later. I think the hon. member is premature in his point of order.

Mr. Peacock: Well, perhaps not, Mr. Speaker.

Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 20th order, House in committee of supply; Mr. A. E. Reuter in the chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF

Mr. Chairman: Estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food, page 22, item 3, vote 103. I believe the hon. member for Huron-Bruce had one or two more comments.

On vote 103, item 3:

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Chairman, I wanted some clarification with respect to the division of the various areas as between one telephone company and another telephone company. The problem seems to arise from time to time where a person is right on the boundary and he wants to become involved in one telephone system and he happens to be in the area of another telephone system and this means in many cases that he has to pay a toll charge to call to an area where he usually does his shopping and gets his supplies and so on. This means money out of his pocket and it means a great deal of inconvenience.

Does the Ontario Telephone Service Commission take any part, or is this solely the jurisdiction of each individual company to make these decisions and if an accommodation can be made between two companies then it is entirely up to them? Is this the stance of the commission?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Chairman, I well understand what my hon. friend is talking about. It is one of the most contentious problems to be right on the boundary of the telephone company's territory. There is no easy solution to it. However, the parties involved are urged by the Ontario Telephone Service Commission to try to work out the differences in a mutually satisfactory way. If they cannot do this, then the Telephone Service Commission then assumes the right to negotiate with the respective companies and tries to work it out. But it is not easy to resolve, because there are territorial areas that have been staked out on which debentures have been placed, based on the territories served and the individual telephone outlets in those areas. It is not just as simple as it looks to resolve these matters.

Of course, extended area service is the ultimate way to resolve it. I think you would recognize that, in the consolidation of telephone systems that has taken place in this province over the last 10 years and the proposed consolidations that are projected for the next three years, we are resolving these matters. But there are still a few isolated cases that do cause concern.

Mr. Gaunt: In my experience, the argument goes something like this: If we give "A" the right to go into another area, then his next-door neighbour would want the same right, and it just snowballs. So the argument goes, "Sorry we just cannot do it because it will have a serious effect on our company's revenue, because other people will want out."

I am wondering if the commission actually has the power to say to any company, "You take this new patron or the person in question stays with the system in the area in which he is located." Does it have that power? I am not quite sure of the powers of the commission, whether it is a body that negotiates or whether it is a body that actually has these powers. Now I recognize that, in most cases, the commission does do a lot of negotiating.

I think in other provinces, aside from this jurisdictional question or division of area, they do do great work. I know I have had occasion to bring problems before them and I have always got satisfaction. The division of areas is a different matter and I recognize that it is a tough problem. It is very touchy, but I just wonder what the powers of the commission really are.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The powers of the commission extend to telephone companies that are chartered under provincial jurisdiction. Bell, as you know, is not so chartered.

Mr. Gaunt: Yes, I know.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: They have a federal charter so the powers of the commission are somewhat limited. But, as I explained earlier, Mr. Chairman, I doubt if there is anything I can add, other than defining the powers of the commission in this regard.

Mr. Chairman: Item 3 carried?

The hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. G. W. Innes (Oxford): I just want to ask the minister about the particular areas that are not receiving the service that they had hoped. Has he looked into the possibility of some type of in-watt line or some emergency line in some of these areas that are having difficulty?

I am speaking, primarily, of the fact that some of these areas have difficulty obtaining a doctor, or obtaining the fire department. This was brought out the other evening at a meeting his deputy minister attended at one of the schools. One of the children was injured and one of the teachers tried to get a doctor and they could not get anybody so he decided he would take the person to the city. He did, and he was at the doctor's office before the call even got transferred to him, and he said, "The teacher told me." The principal said, "This could have been a fire. It could have been a catastrophe of some other nature in the lab or something." "Really," he said, "it really is a concern to us." And I said, "I appreciate that," and I promised I would bring it to his attention. The fire hazard is also there, but they cannot seem to get the lines.

I do understand that by reason of the new dial system this could be speeded up a little, but they are still going to be faced with this same problem. The minister might comment. I do not know whether the department of the Attorney General or the fire marshal's office has knowledge of these particular things, but I know that they would be very concerned if they knew that people could not get through to a fire department or a doctor. It must be a problem.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend refers to a situation that I think happened within the last two weeks in an area that he and I know pretty well. I can easily understand the concern expressed. One of the problems there is that one of them is on a crank system, the old manual system—

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Old crank on the wall.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —and it is hooked into a dial system. That is where the fire department was, anyway. I believe that by this fall the old manual system will be done away with and it will be dial, so that the two could be joined together and a normal long-distance service provided. However, extended area service, I am told, will be delayed a little while because Bell has to make certain arrangements in that particular part of the province with other than just the two companies that we are concerned about here.

I realize the problem, but it is not as easy to solve as it might look, because you have to work through the Bell in this particular case and I think Bell are honestly trying to do a job. We hope that we can get the date advanced a little bit from what might have been the target suggested the other night.

Mr. Chairman: Item 3 carried?

Mr. Gaunt: No. There is just one other matter that I want to bring to the attention of the minister, and it falls into much the same category as the problem mentioned by my friend from Oxford. It is a little different, but it is more or less on the same problem, and that concerns the number of people on one line and the difficulty of someone—particularly someone who is having an emergency situation, whether it be a fire or whether it be a doctor required or whatever—going to the telephone to make the call and there is someone on the line.

I know in one case with which I am familiar there were 14 people on one line and it was practically impossible to get that line. If a farmer wanted to call a veterinarian to come in at noon he might as well forget about it. It would be quicker to drive to town and bring the veterinarian out with him rather than wait for a clear line.

I know that this is a problem with Bell Telephone in rural areas, but it is not quite so pressing as it is with the small rural services in my area anyway. I cannot speak for other parts of the province, I am just speaking of my area. I do not know what the situation is in other parts but I can tell the hon. minister that in my particular part of the country Bell has a problem, but they have a system of phasing whereby they can split the lines and this seems to help.

In respect of the small rural telephone systems where they have up to 14 people on one line, it is just impossible to get that line, particularly on a stormy day in the wintertime when the women get on their gossiping. You might as well forget about it. Unless it is midnight it is hopeless.

I am wondering if there is any system whereby the commission could pursue this matter with the companies to see if there could not be some solution worked out. I have often thought in my more reflective moments that perhaps there should be some device on a telephone system whereby if any one party talked more than 15 minutes the line would cut off. In order to make a reconnection with the same person, he would have to redial. But I do not know. I would like to hear the minister's comments.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): We should have it in the House, too!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not think that we will send out the hon. member's quote to all the women's institute members in the Bruce Peninsula.

Mr. Gaunt: No, but they know there is a problem though, just the same.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, that is right. I can tell the hon. member it is not easy to resolve either. We have had some meetings with the Bell over this situation but it is a very costly thing to implement such a service.

I hesitate to boast about it, but again the Blanshard telephone system, I think, has provided a first in having only two parties on the line in the service which they provide in part of the area, which they cover in the new telephone system that was just opened about two years ago.

This is a major step forward. Bell is exploring this and I hope that some day we will be able to reduce that incredible number of people who are on those telephone lines. The telephone is an absolute necessity, as I see it, in rural Ontario—and anywhere else for that matter—but it is a great help in rural Ontario. The fact that one cannot get the line causes some real concern.

I really do not know if there is an easy answer to it, unless we simply say we have got to start over again and rebuild all these systems to not more than two-party-line systems. That involves an enormous expense today. Just so phenomenal an expense that when you look at the distances that have to be covered and the number of telephone companies that are involved, even today, it becomes quite an exercise.

I can assure my hon. friend that we are concerned, but we have not been able to find an easy answer that is not so expensive that it is practically prohibitive.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further on telephones? Shall item 3 carry?

Vote 103, item 3 agreed to.

Vote 103 agreed to.

On vote 104, item I:

Mr. Chairman: Vote 104, on page 24; item 1.

Mr. Innes: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Agricultural marketing programme, item 1, administration. The hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: This is vote 104, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Chairman: Vote 104.

Mr. Innes: We had the milk commission before us in the committee on physical and natural resources a week ago and mention was made about the concern of the members over the cheese industry and how it is going to reflect on the whole dairy industry, if something in fact is not forthcoming shortly. I know that I have had representations made to me by various people in the cheese industry in southwestern Ontario, claiming that they in fact do not get the amount of milk that they would like to go into the cheese industry.

I appreciate the fact that they are on a quota, that they can go out and buy it if they see fit, but they claim that at the particular time that they would like to have this milk, there are other areas that also want it and that they cannot obtain sufficient quantities.

The minister might inform the House how many cheese factories there were last year as compared to this year, and how many pounds of cheese were made as compared to comparable years.

What is the trouble, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Chairman: I am just wondering whether this should come under item 2, or if it is properly under administration?

Mr. Ruston: Take them all up.

Mr. Chairman: No, we take them item by item. We are dealing with administration, as I called item 1.

Mr. Innes: This is an administration feature.

Mr. Chairman: That is what I am wondering. Item 2 has to do with marketing. Is that not what the hon. member—

Mr. Innes: It is okay; I do not care.

Mr. Chairman: I do not wish to be restrictive, but we must observe some order here and have two specific items.

Mr. Innes: This has to be a policy coming from the minister. It has to be redirected in some way and it has to come out. It has to be from the minister.

Mr. Chairman: In connection with the marketing?

Mr. Innes: I would say so. It should be ministerial. If not—

Mr. Chairman: The whole programme is the agricultural marketing.

Mr. Innes: —I will only go through the procedure again.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. minister wish to deal with these remarks under administration?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Quite frankly, Mr. Chairman, I am a little concerned about your system here because I think you are quite right. I do not detect the grants to cheese factories under administration and that is the first point we are talking about.

Mr. Innes: I am not talking about grants. I am talking about the number of cheese factories and the amount of—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It does not seem to me that that would come under the administrative programme. I just do not think so. Now if we are going to move on past that, I am quite willing to discuss that point, but I would like to follow the order, the procedure, if we could.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): On a point of order, we do not have a quorum.

Mr. Chairman: I am sorry. I did not hear you.

Mr. Shulman: No quorum.

The chairman ordered that the bells be rung for four minutes.

Mr. Innes: Mr. Chairman, if you prefer I can refer to something in the first vote and let the minister answer the other when it comes to the next vote?

Mr. Chairman: I must say that I have no preference. I am just trying to go by the programme.

Mr. Innes: Could the minister tell the House what incentives have been carried out by his department in the export field re the great British market and foreign markets; and how have our exports increased to the other countries?

Mr. Chairman: Before the hon. minister replies, I presume item 1 has been carried. We are on marketing now.

Mr. Gaunt: No.

Mr. Chairman: Then we will keep the marketing discussion until we are finished administration on item 1.

Mr. Gaunt: There is just one matter under the administration part, item 1, Mr. Chairman. Under this particular vote, there is a $50,000 grant given to the Royal Winter Fair.

Last year I made some comment with respect to the possibility of the Royal Winter Fair and other agricultural fairs setting up exhibits having to do with rural education, that is to say having displays of one nature or another dealing with various farm products—

Mr. Ruston: Do you want to make a note that the hon. member for High Park left the chamber.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald: He was taken out by the hon. member for Ontario South (Mr. W. Newman).

Mr. Gaunt:—dealing with their origin at the farm and taking them right through to the retail level and setting out the various price spreads and so on. I am wondering if the minister, or any of his department officials, pursued that or made that suggestion either to the Royal Winter Fair board or any other fair board, the Ottawa Winter Fair or even to the smaller fairs?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, that applied in the exhibit section of the information branch, which was carried some days ago.

Mr. Gaunt: The department still gives a grant to them here.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We give a grant to the Royal Winter Fair, but that has nothing to do with the exhibits section.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Mr. Chairman, on the same point of the Royal Winter Fair; has the minister a list of the directors of the Royal Winter Fair handy? I tried to find them a moment ago, but I have not got them. Could the minister list them right now?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, Mr. Chairman, I cannot. I have not got a list.

Mr. Makarchuk: Would his deputy have them?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, he does not.

Mr. Makarchuk: Well, if I remember correctly, would the list contain some rather famous names in Ontario in business and industry? I notice that very few, in fact nobody on that particular list really is related to farming in any direct way. If the Royal Winter Fair is in any way going to be representative of the agricultural industry in Ontario the least the minister can do is ensure that some of the people—some of the directors on this institution are actually involved in farming, and not the so-called gentleman farmer, not members of the Ontario family compact or not people who seem to have been there for years and years and seem to remain there for the simple reason that they have been around for years. I would suggest that it is about time that you expanded that particular institution, and put people representing the Federation of Agriculture, the Farmers' Union and probably members from the marketing boards on the board of directors.

I realize the board of directors is a self-appointing institution, or a self-sustaining institution, but surely if the minister is going to hand them out $50,000 each year, perhaps he might make a few suggestions to them, that the board of directors should be expanded so that it would be representative of the farming community of Ontario and not what it really is, the corporate elite of Ontario. I would like to hear the minister's comments on this.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to comment on that. My hon. friend, I think, has been misinformed.

There are many practising farmers on the board of directors at the Royal Winter Fair. Names that come to mind are Glen Reicheld, Reford Gardhouse, George Rodanz who has just sold his farm, Jack Fraser at Streetsville. Those are four names that just come to mind whom I know. These are all prominent farmers in Ontario. There are a great many others as well.

Certainly the agricultural section and the board of directors are made up of practising farmers in this province. These are men who are purebred livestock breeders.

Mr. Makarchuk: On the same point, Mr. Chairman, I agree that these are people who by and large do not live off their farms; this is a gentleman farmer operation.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, it is not; and it is unfair to say that. It indicates the member's abysmal ignorance of what he is trying to talk about.

Mr. J. Jessiman (Fort William): He qualifies for that all right.

Mr. Makarchuk: It is unfortunate that I do not have the list of names, but the invitations that are issued to the members to attend the Royal Winter Fair functions have the names of various people, the head of Supertest Oil and so on, who really are not representative of the farming community of Ontario. Let us put some people on there who really have to deal with the nitty gritty of farming every day in the province, and not sort of the dilettante—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): He is right, 100 per cent right. Why is that?

Mr. Chairman: Order please.

Mr. Makarchuk: —farmers that we have on there. I think this is one of the problems with the Royal Winter Fair. It is really not the kind of fair that attracts that many farmers or is as popular as it could be, because it has become more of a social institution than really an institution where farmers can gain some knowledge and some advantage by attending.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce wishes to participate.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, he may be wrong, but it boils me to go down there and see all that soup and fish, the high hats and that stuff and they are not representative of the farming people of this province. I walk around that place and I feel out of place.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Attaboy!

Mr. Sargent: That is not my ball of wax. So he has a point; he has a point.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Go there in the daytime! My hon. friend, Mr. Chairman, is talking about the night horse show. Go there in the daytime when the place is jam-packed with farm people and youngsters from urban schools and rural schools all over this province. This is the show window of Canadian agriculture.

Mr. A. K. Meen (York East): That is right.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We are very fortunate to have it right here in the Province of Ontario. I think it is a disgrace for the opposition to say these things about the Royal Winter Fair.

Mr. Sargent: I do not say the minister is wrong, but talking about the horse show, we have a few horses and to get your horse in the Royal Winter Fair you have got to know somebody to get in the proper sequence of the jumping events. There is a lot of drag and society people at the top level who can get things done that the ordinary person cannot get done in the horse business, and you can put that in your pipe and smoke it if you want to.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: I am not any authority on—

Mr. Makarchuk: Take it off the floor then.

Mr. Sargent: —what I want to say. I should not have said what I said, because I forget what I wanted to say now.

The Walkerton Agricultural Society Christmas Fair is the biggest fair, I guess, in Ontario at that time of year. We give them $1,000. I think that is pitifully small. I think I gave nearly that much one year in buying beef or something for that. I think it is a chance for the minister to do something for that part of Ontario which very much needs help and a $5,000 grant would be the smallest he could give.

Mr. Chairman: Does the minister have any comments?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I appreciate the member's advice.

Vote 104, item 1 agreed to.

On item 2:

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was speaking about the dilemma of the cheese industry and the representations that have been made by various people throughout Ontario to members, particularly in south-western Ontario, to the effect that they are very fearful that the cheese industry is not keeping up with the demand and that they are not getting the amount of milk that should be going into the cheese industry.

Furthermore, they also indicate that the Milk Marketing Board indicates that this is not true, that there is enough cheese. But on the other hand, they tell us that they are dipping into the cheese that is currently in storage, and that the cheese that should be ageing is not going to get the ageing it would otherwise have had.

I know that members of the board are concerned about this, and under the particular quota system at the moment it is rather difficult to adjust it the way one would like. I do feel it is a type of an emergency situation, a situation that could dwindle back consistently unless some effort is made in a special arrangement—possibly a percentage of each producer's milk, just a little percentage extra which I think could be worked out into another pool or something.

Mention has been made that the cheese industry could be a different setup of its own, a different pricing system of its own.

Now I am not knowledgeable to that extent about the cheese industry. I know by reason of what has been expressed to me. It appears that it is a product that is saleable, for which we do have a market and that we should make sure we do everything in our power to sell and make sure the factories get the amount they require; and that we progress in a very systematic way.

As I mentioned before, I would not mind knowing the amount of cheese that was produced last year as compared to the year before, and the export figures in comparison if it is possible. If not we will get it again.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend has raised some points that are of great concern to me as well, because I well understand the situation faced by a good many cheddar cheese factory manufacturing plants in this province. They are just not able to get enough milk at the present time to meet the demand at this time for cheddar cheese. A year or so ago, the situation was somewhat different. Before the price of cheese advanced, there did not seem to be quite the enthusiasm to manufacture it. Fortunately, with the rise in price that was generated by the national dairy commission there has been a marked improvement in the spread in cheese prices and our cheese plants want to get more milk.

The Ontario milk board, as I understand it, is having difficulties determining just where the industrial milk supply should be directed and it has worked out a plant quota system. According to that plant quota system, it is difficult to take milk from an industrial plant that is manufacturing powder and butter and direct it to a cheese plant, even though we all know that there is an enormous demand for cheddar cheese today.

I understand that discussions have been held between the milk commission and the Milk Marketing Board regarding this very difficult and complex situation, but there does not seem to be any easy way to resolve it.

Perhaps there are those on the milk board who do not feel the situation is of as great concern as my hon. friend from Oxford does, and I must confess as I do. It may well be that it might be a useful gesture, Mr. Chairman, to suggest that the Milk Marketing Board be invited to meet with the committee on resources—I believe that is the new name, resources. The commission met there a while ago. I believe that if the Milk Marketing Board could come there as well, perhaps along with the commission, we might be able to learn just what their thinking is about this very complex matter. They, after all, are in charge of the marketing of milk in the Province of Ontario and I am sure they are—at least some of them—as concerned as we are. Perhaps that would be a useful way to bring all the facts out into the open.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister whether any farm missions went to Europe to The Department of Trade and Development offices?

We learn that the acreage cut for flue-cured tobacco will be down 50 per cent next year. Are we losing our markets in England? Are they going down?

I believe, if I remember correctly, the minister made a statement that we are selling some agricultural products to Japan. Have we Trade and Development offices in Japan or is there any consideration being given to that?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: With regard to the export sale of tobacco to the United Kingdom, I believe the mission has returned from the UK and has been assured that, not only will the UK continue to buy as much as they bought in the past but there will be a modest increase in what their future projections are.

The problem really arises, as I understand it, regarding further cuts in tobacco acreage this year, because there has been a very substantial increase in the tonnage of tobacco grown in the past year or so, much beyond the target objective. I believe it was something like 30 million pounds over last year, or 28 million pounds—something like that—over what was projected.

This is something the farmers have no control over. This is simply a matter of good weather. Growing and harvesting conditions turned out a very high quality crop with a very excellent yield.

Here are the yields, Mr. Chairman: The yield for 1967 is 196 million pounds; the year 1968, 201 million pounds; the year 1969, 226 million pounds, and the year 1970, 201 million pounds. But the increase in yield per acre is the thing that really is startling, because the difference between the year 1967 in yield per acre of 1,529 pounds and 1970 of 2,178 pounds is about 600 pounds more per acre. So you can easily understand how they could get into difficulty with an overproduction of tobacco.

However, while the sales are not as high per pound, or on the average as they had hoped they would be this year, the tobacco is moving and I venture to suggest that many farmers will end up with a sizable chunk of money with the increased poundage that they have to sell.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, I want to raise one or two points in connection with the current problem of inter-provincial trade, particularly between Quebec and Ontario. I do so without any desire or intention of reviewing much of the detail, which has already been dealt with in this House during the amendment to The Farm Products Marketing Act.

The thing that disturbs me, and which I want to raise with the minister, is that everybody involved, including the minister, the Minister of Agriculture in Quebec, and the appropriate ministers in Manitoba, all say that they do not want an escalation of the interprovincial trade warfare which is now developing.

It is a little sad that everybody is professing not to want an escalation of this trade warfare when, in fact, we all seem to be captured in a set of circumstances in which the escalation is taking place. In short, we seem to be the victim of these circumstances.

Two days ago I happened to hear the noon farm broadcast and I was rather taken aback by a report from Quebec City or Toronto on the CBC—I am sorry, Quebec City or Montreal—to the effect that senior officials of the Quebec Department of Agriculture said that they had no recent contact with the minister and The Department of Agriculture and Food here in the Province of Ontario, that prior to that there had been rather intimate and close consultation, but recently there had not been. In short, it seems—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: May I say this, and I know my hon. friend does not want to say anything that is not correct—

Mr. MacDonald: I wanted to ask the minister!

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—that is absolutely false. There have been continuing discussions—I was going to say on a daily basis, but certainly many times a week—with the deputy minister in the Province of Quebec and the minister's office. These discussions have been going on and, in fact they met just the day before yesterday.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay, I am glad to have that assurance and that report dispelled, but if the minister is continuing discussions, is the minister in a position to indicate on what products the Province of Quebec is contemplating retaliatory action vis-à-vis Ontario agricultural produce?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, I think we have that information. It will involve the legal marketing of eggs in the Province of Quebec through FEDCO. They are not trying to stop eggs going to Quebec but they are saying, as I interpret the information we have from the Province of Quebec, that they want those eggs marketed through their egg marketing agency. I really do not think there is anything wrong with that.

I believe as well that it may be applied to onions. There was a huge shipment of onions sent into the Montreal market from the Province of Ontario. I do not know who sent them in. I do not have that information, but I do know that they dropped in there.

There is no marketing board for onions in Ontario, as members know, and it just simply wrecked the Montreal market for onions for local producers of onions in Quebec.

They are stimulating their production of garden vegetables, onions particularly, in some of the marsh area lying east of Montreal, if I am not mistaken in the eastern townships. They hope to be able to control that kind of dumping. These are the only two products they have given any indication to us that they wish to in any way control.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, a danger in the situation is that both in the Quebec legislation and in our legislation here it is so drawn up that it applies across the board. Now while it applies across the board to all marketing boards in the Province of Ontario, it was obvious during the debates on the bill here in this Legislature that the minister was contemplating at the moment only one product, namely broilers.

Interestingly enough, in Quebec you have the same kind of situation with boobytraps, namely the legislation is drawn up so that it applies across the board, but the minister assures us that at the moment it is going to apply only to eggs and perhaps to onions.

You see the potential for escalation is really massive and I just want to raise once again—I do it not as an Ontarian, not as a member of this Legislature, but I do it as a Canadian—this nation is drifting toward dissolution, and indeed this government, in other areas that are not appropriate to this debate, is adding to the tensions and the threat to the unity of this nation. Within the context of these estimates we are adding to it in the field of agricultural produce.

My plea to the minister would be—and I put it to him as a question—is there going to be continuing consultation with the department to minimize the application of the massive powers that have been taken by both this Legislature and the Quebec National Assembly, at least until we get some resolution of the constitutional problem in the courts, or preferably until—if I may accept the minister at his own word—we have the federal marketing legislation, C-176, which he seemed to suggest was an alternative to coping with this problem?

His argument was that since we have no assurance as to when C-176 was going to become effective we had to move with these new powers within the jurisdiction of the Province of Ontario. In short my plea to the minister, and I ask for his comment on it, is let us cool it, let us not heat it up. It is all very fine to declare verbal and political warfare on Ottawa—both federal-provincial and interprovincial warfare, but having just gone through a convention in Ottawa where I had a chance to get an up-to-date picture of the feelings of people in various parts of this country, I am convinced we are drifting toward dissolution in this country.

There is a sort of psychological drift to separatism in Quebec, and a reverse separatism in the rest of the country, English-speaking separatism. Which to put it bluntly says: "Okay, if Quebec wants to go, let them go." That is all very fine, that maybe will give a little emotional release for the moment, but the net effect is a pretty serious threat to Canada. And as one who has a deep conviction that if Quebec goes, Canada as we have known it goes, I ask the minister: What is being done to cool it in this area which is a pretty important area of the interprovincial trade on food and agricultural products?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: Before the hon. minister replies I must point out that I realize it is very difficult to discuss marketing without reference to the bill that was passed very recently in this House. I was listening very carefully to the hon. member for York South. In my opinion he did not really infringe upon the rule of the House that forbids any reflection upon the bill itself. I just want to bring to the attention of the committee that we should not reflect upon a bill that has already been passed in this House and I say this for the guidance of the minister in his reply as well. The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I hope that I too can remain within the context of the rules of order as far as the estimate before us is concerned.

There are two or three things that my hon. friend from York South has asked. I specifically want to relieve my mind on the fact that he leaves the impression that it is only Ontario and Quebec that have this kind of broad legislation. Might I point out that the Province of British Columbia has had this kind of legislation for years. A section of their marketing Act contains precisely the same thing as we have.

The Province of New Brunswick has had it for, I do not know how many years, perhaps since the time their marketing Act was drawn. But it is a fact of life. The Province of Nova Scotia, on March 18 of this year, introduced exactly the same kind of legislation.

Mr. MacDonald: Then our problem is even greater than I had anticipated.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Exactly!

Mr. MacDonald: It has the net effect of what the minister is saying.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It spreads across these various provinces. The fact that it is there on the statutes as general legislation controlled by the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board in its application to the various commodity boards within Ontario is, I think, reassurance that the problem will not be escalated. Now it applies to broilers coming into this province. That is the only commodity to my knowledge that it does apply to under the Act. But it also applies to broilers in the other provinces as well. To my knowledge there is no other commodity that is under that type of control other than broilers or eggs.

I really do not think there is a great deal more that I can add to this debate other than to point out the generality of the legislation, and I think that therein lies some safety.

My hon. friend talks about the problems between Ottawa and Ontario and between Ontario and Quebec. There is the most amicable relationship that I can imagine between the Deputy Minister of Agriculture in Quebec, and his minister with me and my deputy in the Province of Ontario. There has never been the slightest hint of animosity in any way that I know of.

Mr. MacDonald: Has the minister ever heard of divorces in which the parties split amicably? The minister's point is not impressive. Sure if you are decent human beings you may be amicable, but our problem is we are drifting apart.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, we are not drifting apart, Mr. Chairman, we are not drifting apart at all. I respect the position that Quebec has taken as far as eggs are concerned. I am sure that the minister and his deputy in Quebec—and in fact the various marketing organizations in Quebec—respect the position that the Province of Ontario, and indeed other provinces have taken concerning broilers. There has to be some stability brought into this market situation as far as poultry products are concerned.

I went through this debate, Mr. Chairman, and I am hesitant to get into it again, but it is of concern to me that we have got to this place when we saw this coming years ago. We just could not get any action at federal level. Now I am not pointing blame at the federal government, because we asked them to bring in some type of a poultry products commission for marketing at the national level.

They saw fit to bring in general legislation. In their wisdom, perhaps that is the thing to have done, but it has generated a furor of complaint from those who want no part of a national marketing plan—usually from the same people who want no part of a provincial marketing plan. But that is their prerogative. We may differ with their reasons as to why they have taken this position, but in a democracy it is their right to take that position.

But I think we who have a responsibility to primary producers—be it any province in this country—as provincial legislators must accept that responsibility and we must try, in our opinion, to do the things that are necessary to protect them, but at the same time work with the federal government in bringing about what we think is the proper solution at national level—and that is why I support it.

I do not criticize the federal government on their national plan. I support the national plan even though there are many producers in Ontario who are opposed to it. I support it because I think it is the proper thing to do. But I have the assurance, and it is pointed out clearly—and I have a copy of the bill right here in my desk, Mr. Chairman—in section 7 and in section 17 that no commodity can be brought under the national legislation unless a majority of the producers across Canada is in favour of that legislation and of the action being taken.

Having said that, we have to recognize that the responsibility ultimately rests with the marketing boards in the respective provinces where that commodity is produced. The Farm Products Marketing Board in Ontario reports through The Department of Agriculture and Food to the Legislature of Ontario. Our position was clearly enunciated on some of these matters, particularly beef, as I answered my friend the other day. We have already excluded beef from marketing legislation in this province by that particular Act that was drafted in 1968 affecting that commodity.

As far as eggs are concerned, we have had two votes on eggs opposing quota marketing in this province because our producers, in my opinion, took the position that if they were to accept quota marketing of eggs in this province and leave the borders wide open, they would be in the same predicament as Ontario broiler growers.

Just as late as this morning, I had the opportunity perchance to meet the chairman of the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers Marketing Board who feels very keenly that if there is some hope of getting this national legislation through or getting some type of a national plan established, the egg producers of Ontario, despite the local opposition that has built up to their plan already, will pass such a plan. I have been assured by a good many very large egg producers in Ontario that this is the case.

I am hopeful that by supporting the federal government in its implementation of the national legislation, we can get it passed through the House of Commons and have it become effective, but only to apply to those commodities for which there appears to be a need today.

We already have it in the dairy commission of Canada. We already have dairy products under The National Dairy Commission Act. We have The Wheat Act covering feed grains and wheat. Surely it makes common sense to go the other step and try to strengthen the position of Canada's producers of these commodities that can be produced in such abundance and on such short notice and bring about some stability to the marketplace. That is my position, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, on the same point, I understand the minister said that when the case comes up before the Supreme Court of Canada on May 31, Ontario will be making representation at the court. Could the minister indicate what the theme will be. Will we oppose provincial marketing legislation which would restrict the transportation of produce from one province to the other or will we be there just as observers?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, we will make our decision as to what position we will take and it will be made known at the time of the hearing.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Essex-Kent.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Chairman, I want to talk about tomatoes—and I think this was mentioned briefly the other day with regard to the tomato paste industry. I think the minister had said that growers could not see their way clear to handle them because of the price differential, but I wonder if there has been any serious discussion on this matter.

As to potential business, it seems to me that one figure I heard mentioned was that possibly 10,000 acres could be grown. We are importing that amount of tomato products in paste form and we are now growing about 20,000 acres of tomatoes. This would be half of what we are growing now.

Has the minister given any thought, or is there advice or help that might be given to the farm areas by the Ontario Development Corporation and The Department of Agriculture and Food to try to bring this in as a new industry? I realize there is a price differential, but there may be some variations in the quality of the product that would allow the person to produce these tomatoes at a price that would give him a reasonable profit with some assistance possibly through provincial incentive as we are doing in other areas, especially in manufacturing.

If we could produce and grow 10,000 acres of tomatoes, this being a new-found product, then we could afford probably to put some public funds in this to get it off the ground. I know there are some problems to overcome, but it seems to me that we have to look at these things. We are importing such large quantities of products while at the same time our farm economy is slipping.

About 10 years ago in Essex County alone there were 1,200 dairy farmers, some of whom had small herds. Today there are 220. In Kent county there are only about 45 dairy farms. Most every farm now is on a cash crop basis. This is not working out too satisfactorily with the price of corn and soybeans. We have to have some other crop that will at least bring in returns on the acreage.

I think that the government is going to have to take a real serious look at some of the large imports that we are making and see if we cannot create a new industry. I believe the tomato industry is one that the government should be taking a really close look at and meeting with the farm groups and seeing if something cannot be worked out.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 2, at least item 2. The member for Middlesex South.

Mr. Bolton: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister if he would comment on the problem which seems to be faced by the farmers in getting adequate prices for milk and eggs. I preface this question by reporting that I had a communication yesterday from Robert King of the National Farmers' Union which said: "Tomorrow morning at the Argyle Mall in London, a group of farmers will be giving away milk and eggs as a general protest about the prices that they are being offered."

This is obviously a marketing problem and a problem of farm income. I wonder if the minister would care to comment on that?

Mr. Innes: Does the member agree with that?

Mr. Bolton: That is not what I am saying. This is what is happening. I want the minister's statement about what his response would be.

Mr. MacDonald: Does the member disagree with that, the gesture or demonstration part of it?

Mr. Innes: Does the member for York South agree with it?

Mr. MacDonald: Does the member for Oxford disagree with it?

Mr. Innes: I asked the member for York South.

Mr. Bolton: Mr. Chairman, I was asking a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food from whom I hoped I would receive a reply.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, I thought maybe the comments I just had in the debate with my hon. friend from York South might have led my friend from Middlesex South to realize that by stability in the market we mean an increased price for the product that these farmers had to sell. Anyone who knows anything about the egg business recognizes that the price that has been paid for eggs in Ontario over the last few months is anything but satisfactory.

So I would hope that some type of stability might be brought about in the pricing structure of eggs through some type of supply management—certainly not the kind of supply management that generates the overproduction of eggs in this province or in any other province at a price where they cannot be sold at a viable price to those who produce them.

There are many price structures that might be associated with what that satisfactory price might be. I suppose the farmer that has a substantial laying flock might be of the opinion that he could produce cheaper than somebody with a few hundred hens. I think all those things have to be taken into consideration, and I am sure they are by the Egg and Fowl Producers Marketing Board, in the determination of the type of plan that it hopes to place before the egg producers of Ontario.

With regard to milk prices, I am not sure what kind of milk the hon. member refers to as being given away. I hope that it is pasteurized milk, because I think the hon. member would appreciate the health regulations that must be recognized in this regard.

I have not heard many loud complaints concerning the price of fluid milk to the producer. Certainly the price of industrial milk may leave something to be desired. It is in the neighbourhood of—what? Is it $4.75 or thereabouts with the government subsidy? I believe about that price, with the government subsidy attached?

Certainly anybody would like to see more money for that product. But what happens is that the federal government is establishing the subsidy and is paying that subsidy on a national basis for milk. Of course, off that price comes the amount of the holdback that the Canadian Dairy Commission takes off the subsidy for the export of milk products that cannot be used in Canada. And I would suppose that one of the best reasons for introducing the market-sharing quota in which Ontario and Quebec are participating—here is another illustration of the farmers of Quebec and Ontario participating in a joint programme that they themselves worked out—is to reduce the amount of milk products that has to be shipped out of this country as surplus products on the world market at far below the price of milk received by producers in this country. This is really what it is all about.

Now if there can be a more satisfactory price established, we are all for it. But at the moment, with the kinds of surpluses that have built up through overproduction of butter and, to some degree in the past, of cheese—although I do not see that surplus in cheese staring us in the face this year—I see no real solution other than to massively inject more money from the public treasury into the Canadian Dairy Commission subsidy programme. I am not sure what the intention of Ottawa is in this regard. I would be somewhat doubtful if they were going to move in that particular direction.

Mr. MacDonald: In other words, this government is going to supplement what the farmers can get in the marketplace?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, that is what has been going on to a very substantial degree.

Mr. MacDonald: That is the principle I enunciated, and both the minister and the Liberal spokesman raised some doubts about it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, I think one has to get all one can out of the marketplace, and I suggested that to Mr. Olsen last summer when I felt the price of cheese—it was pegged at 46 cents a pound—was far too low, and he raised the price of cheese to 51 cents a pound at the Canadian Dairy Commission's support level. That generated an increase of about 29 cents per hundredweight, I believe, in the price of milk. And the price of powder was increased as well to 24 cents. So that resulted in a net increase to the farmer of 29 cents per hundredweight. That is what I mean by getting more out of the marketplace.

But by the same token, the federal government's continuing its $115-million subsidy to the dairy industry of Canada is a substantial injection of public funds from the public treasury to the industrial milk producers of Canada.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, may I just comment briefly on this. There was an interjection which I did not respond to personally but I think it is a substantive point. It was this: Do I agree with these giveaway programmes that have taken place in Guelph and apparently are to take place in London tomorrow?

There is a continuing problem of relationships between the urban and rural communities, and when the farmers take a stand on an issue they would need to be pretty obtuse not to recognize that they have got to take into account the public relations aspects of that problem.

I was interested to discover, for example, that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture is now meeting with trade unions, tenants' associations and such groups in the cities to discuss with them their proposals for lifting education tax off property because there is a potential urban backlash on that issue and they are trying to cope with it.

I think there is essentially the same kind of a problem in the marketing of farm produce in the city. In some areas we have achieved some degree of security in terms of the prices to agriculture. The minister says, "milk." But he has just reminded us that this has been achieved, if it has been achieved satisfactorily, only with the injection of $115 million in public funds.

But to let the city people know that, for example, the price of eggs is ludicrous at the moment—

Mr. Sargent: The hon. member is right for once.

Mr. MacDonald: As a public relations proposition, how do you get this information across? Well in this instance, a group of Ontario farmers said: "We are getting very little for eggs anyway, and as a bit of advertising we will give them away."

Mr. Spence: Who said we were against that?

Mr. MacDonald: Your Liberal critic asked—

Mr. Innes: I said yes.

Mr. MacDonald: —were we in favour of it, and I am rising to say, "Yes, I am in favour of it." I ask him in turn, "Are you in favour and if so why were you asking me the question?"

Mr. Innes: I am not in favour of the eggs and the milk. The eggs are okay, but they could have corrected their situation had they wanted to in the milk proposition, because they are on a quota system. And if they themselves cannot manage their business to arrange to get enough quota, which is available, it really is not the fault of the public.

Mr. MacDonald: What I am saying is that my support for them is unqualified. The Liberal critic has just indicated that his is somewhat qualified.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Welland South.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Mr. Chairman, I want to get on to dealing with inspection and quality control of agricultural products marketed in Ontario.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, are we still on item 2?

Mr. Chairman: On marketing? the member for Welland South.

Mr. Haggerty: Yes that is right. I happen to represent a riding, Mr. Chairman, the Welland South riding, which contains a large number of marshlands. This marshland is being increased year by year for more marketing of vegetables in that particular area. The report some 130 years ago said there was a great possibility that this could increase the potential of marketing vegetables in the area.

The point that I want to raise is that these particular growers in this area find that they do have some problems of marketing their vegetables within the area. One of the reasons is that when you enter a large store in the area, such as Dominion Stores, A & P, and Loblaws, you can buy potatoes which say, "Ontario No. 1 Potatoes" in big letters—"Ontario No. 1 potatoes." People buy them and when they get them home and look at the package it says, "Produced in United States."

I was wondering what the department has in mind to control the marketing or labelling of certain produce in Ontario. The other one is canned peaches that can be picked up in the supermarkets. Again, if you add a little bit of water and a little bit of sugar to it, you will find out it meets Ontario standard No. 1, but yet it is produced in the United States. Yet in the Niagara Peninsula there are trees just laden with fruit—but no buyers.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! I thought the hon. member was going to be speaking about marketing. The hon. member is really on item 3.

Mr. Sargent: This is marketing; 100 per cent marketing!

Mr. Chairman: Item 3 is quality control.

Mr. Haggerty: That is right.

Mr. Chairman: I think the hon. member's remarks would be more—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is in the next vote, quality control of—

Mr. Haggerty: I have continued this far, Mr. Chairman, you might as well let me go through this.

Mr. Chairman: There is somebody who wished to speak back on the thought we were pursuing a moment ago, if the hon. member would keep his remarks for item 3.

Item 2, the member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: Yes. Back on marketing, Mr. Chairman: In the previous years on the estimates we always asked the minister to try to find out the reasons for the price differential that the farmer gets and what the consumer pays, and we suggested that possibly he should make some effort to give the public an indication of the price spread that exists, and also perhaps include the comments of the department itself on whether it is a fair price spread or it is not a fair price spread.

I think the minister did say last year he was going to look into some of these matters and perhaps make them public in the press or on the radio. I was just wondering if the minister has done anything or is moving in that direction, because that is one of the major problems—the share of the consumer dollar the farmer is getting these days.

We all know the farmer's share is falling down, and despite the fact the government may bring in production controls, or the farmers may have production controls, the price at the other end is still set by somebody else and the farmer has very little to say on this matter. I think to a great extent the consumer is basically ignorant of the relationship that exists between the amount the farmer gets for his produce and the amount the consumer pays.

I think it is the responsibility of the minister's department somehow to bring it to the attention of the consumer, and the farmer I am sure will pick up this information. In the process, the minister may have some type of suasion, moral suasion or whatever it is, on some of the retailers or wholesalers in terms of controlling the prices or passing down to the farmer a greater share of the consumer dollar.

The minister mentioned he was going to do something about this last year. I wonder if he has done anything in the intervening period?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Obviously what we have done has not registered with my hon. friend.

Mr. Makarchuk: Well if the minister did, he would not have the problem now.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, there is no solution in that kind of talk.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, I am no authority on marketing, but I would like to have a couple of moments of dialogue with the minister in a long-view look at the whole problem of this marketing. I am amazed at the magnitude of the problem and the intricacies that seem to be solving themselves, partially in spite of politicians. But I would say to the minister this: No plant, whether it is in manufacturing or any area of our economy, can continue to operate at half production. Full production would seem to me to be the answer for perfection. I would like to suggest that, if our agricultural plants across the province are to be continually operating at controlled production, half production, or what have you, we will have a very dull future.

I am wondering if there is any area in which we could say perfection in marketing would be, or it would be if our plants could sell their complete output and we would have a very healthy economy for all our people. Why I say this is, this would never happen, but if it could happen in marketing this way, that all our farmers could sell their complete production, then we would have heaven on earth as far as agriculture is concerned.

But I am asking the minister, with all the technology we have in refrigeration and preserving things for the future, if we could establish area food banks? The minister has probably heard a lot. I do not know the answer to it. But if we could have area food banks, giant refrigeration units could store things for the future, out of all the output of our agriculture plants. When we go around the world offering foreign aid to people, instead of giving them cash we could give them food. Then we could turn back dollars to our people. I wonder if there could be some working arrangement with Ottawa to say, "Here, if you are going to do these things around the world, here is money in the form of food—beef or what have you." Is there ever any chance to solve our long-term marketing problem by looking to the future and doing this thing through food banks and refrigeration?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, as my hon. friend is likely very well aware, through the food and agricultural organizations there is the World Food Bank. It is not as easy to get rid of surplus food products to some nations as one might think, because each of the developing countries has its own economy to think of and most of those economies are based on an agricultural foundation. They are very jealous of the right to produce and expand food production within their particular countries to the place where they get into the export market.

Mr. Sargent: May I ask a question?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes.

Mr. Sargent: In spite of the fact that we are told half the world goes to bed hungry at night, is it still a fact there is no market for this food?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, I doubt those statements very much that half the world goes to bed hungry every night. They may not have the type of balanced diet that we enjoy in our standard of living here, but I doubt very much if they go to bed hungry every night.

I think we have to recognize that the idea of preserving surplus food products, that is conserving and storing them, has been tried by our friends in the United States. Perhaps there is no country in the history of the world that has stored more agricultural products than has the United States. They have used many of them in giveaway food programmes, not only in the United States but outside of the United States. But I think we are all agreed that it has not really resolved anything, because they simply go merrily on producing.

With all the restrictions that have been placed on production, even in the United States there still remains a problem of enormous overproduction of some commodities. I appreciate the concern my hon. friend has expressed and, on the face of it, it is quite logical, but I am not so sure that it is that easy to implement.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, on the matter that was raised by the hon. member for Grey-Bruce, I feel that he expresses the views of many people in the Legislature and in the community. It is simply a matter not so much of technology but a matter of co-operation among governments that could use our tremendous productive capacities for the good of those beyond our own nation. The minister of course is well aware of the problems and there is no simple solution.

I have two specific things I would like to put to the minister. The first has to do with the apple producers and their marketing problems. The minister is aware of tremendous overproduction in the world market, and recent reports and pictures have indicated the destruction of huge supplies of top-quality apples in France and Italy and subsidies from those governments to farmers who are prepared to root out their orchards.

I have been approached by a number of apple farmers in Ontario who really face a most bleak prospect and outlook. Even those who are prepared to almost hand-polish the fruit and sell it over a couple of planks at a local market to people who appreciate this special kind of service, are finding more and more that the prices they are able to get from the community simply do not meet their basic expense requirements.

I know that the apple marketing board—is it called by that title?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The Apple Marketing Commission.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, the Apple Marketing Commission has been in operation for some two years now, and if anything, I would say the problems are substantially worse than they were when the commission took over. I am not complaining that they have not done a good job, I am simply saying that the net result is the situations the producers find themselves in now are practically disastrous.

The owners and operators of farms or orchards that have been in productive and profitable operation for three generations are now simply facing the alternative, and apparently there is not really any alternative; they are just rooting out their orchards and trying to go into some other means of production, and they are having difficulty to decide what to do. I would like to know what sort of advice the minister is giving these farmers? What prospects can be held out for an improvement in that situation?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, first of all, we recognize there are some real problems in the apple marketing industry. But here again it goes right back to the incredible increase in production that has taken place in Italy and France particularly since the end of the Second World War. Markets that normally were enjoyed by countries such as Canada in European countries have suddenly disappeared. And to add insult to injury, this last year it is estimated that 1.5 million cases of apple juice were brought into this country from Italy, France and other European countries. Really, where is our market going to go?

This is the reason we called an apple marketing conference, the first one of its kind ever held in Canada, in Toronto last fall. We had all of the apple-producing provinces represented at that conference. I think it at least brought things out in the light. We were able to take a good look at the situation, but there is no easy solution for it.

We have provided, in the capital grants programme that we introduced as of April 1, 1971, the right for farmers who wish to take out those orchards to qualify for capital grants. There are many old orchards in this province that should be cleaned up and removed. That may help a little to relieve some of the problem, but it is a world surplus situation. There is just no question of it at all. We are caught in the grips of this very difficult problem, and I find no easy solution.

My hon. friend suggests that the apple commission may not have been able to accomplish a great deal in the last two years in strengthening the position of the apple grower. I hesitate to think what the position of the apple grower in Ontario would have been without the apple commission. This is the other side of the coin. And while juice and peeler apples—as my hon. friend from Grey South knows so well, really the apple-growing area of Ontario is actually centred now in that part of the province in the Collingwood area.

Mr. Sargent: That is why we should put a school there.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We feel that there is just no easy solution to this matter of juice and peeler apples. Now, we have made certain grants to—

Mr. Sargent: An agricultural college for Thornbury and Clarksburg!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —to some companies to help them with these problems, help the producers to market a little better the products of their orchards. I must confess, it is not a very bright future as I see it at the moment.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, one small point in addition. I know that the commission and the marketing branch of the department have done their best to assist in increasing the consumption of apples in the province, but when I look in the fruit cooler of our own refrigerator at home during the winter, I see all sorts of oranges and grapefruit there at 79 and 89 cents a dozen for the oranges.

There are always apples there too, but I often think of how successful the citrus fruit industry has been in maintaining prices and ever increasing consumption. We serve apples in our home in the middle of winter and people say, "Is this not marvelous, you have got apples."

There just does not seem to be an appreciation that modern storage, gas storage particularly, keeps them as fresh as when they were picked off the tree, and that they just are not that sort of a special treat that you get for two or three weeks in the fall when you see them in bushels out along the highway.

I do not know what the answer is, but maybe it is an education in advertising. I have often felt that perhaps even with the expenditure of a lot of initiative and money, we still have not broken through that barrier that keeps most families spending a lot of money for citrus fruits when we have got this tremendous attractive alternative immediately available.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend has raised a very good question, and that is promotion of this apple product, because it is a major product in this province of ours. The food council, following the apple industry conference we had, have embarked upon a major promotion programme involving not only our apple producers and the Apple Marketing Commission in Ontario, but on a national apple promotion programme, "Canadian Apples for Canadians," and we are now right in the midst of this programme.

There has been a special press kit distributed to 130 food editors in Ontario. The kit contained a photograph, four recipes from our new apple booklet currently under revision, and five press releases dealing with controlled atmosphere storage, and the quality of apples that come out; general information and uses of Canadian apples and their low-calorie benefits. And this is something we should be stressing.

Now this was sent with a covering letter explaining the nature of the campaign and requesting their full support. There were four press releases distributed to our regular mailing list of 750 food editors during the week of April 26—this week. Six radio tapes and scripts dealing with promotion of controlled atmosphere storage were distributed to 70 radio stations in Ontario. The material was sent with a covering letter as well. Retailers' handling fact sheets—for those who handle the apples—will be sent to produce buyers and supervisors of retail food chains in Metropolitan Toronto.

Letters were sent to all extension personnel and department heads informing them of the campaign and soliciting their support in their local areas. Letters to Canadian catering companies such as Versafoods, Cara Operations, Canteen of Canada, asked them to feature Canadian apples on their menus. Special publicity was used—in "Carnival of Books" at the Ontario Government Bookstore's birthday celebration apples were available to all guests.

In the Canadian Restaurant Association 1971 Food Services and Hospitality Show apples will be distributed at the Canadian Dietetic Association booth tagged with the sign "ACDA, approved diet dessert."

These are just a few of the ideas that have been developed by the food council and are in effect right now to try to relieve this incredible surplus of apples that we have built up in Canada today. In British Columbia, in Ontario, in Nova Scotia, in Quebec, it is a major problem and we are focusing every effort we can on trying to bring to the attention of consumers—as my hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition, so well suggests, perhaps we should make our consumers more conscious of the delightful qualities of home grown Canadian apples and that is what we are trying to do.

Mr. Nixon: I just would like to point out that we will certainly support that programme. But I wonder how many people here, or in the gallery, or in the community, know that we are at the peak of the apple promotion advertising campaign, because I just do not think it is making that kind of an impact and I regret to say it. I wonder how many people in the gallery are not aware of the Esso NHL Power Players programme. Maybe you need Stan Randall or Eddie Sargent Enterprises or somebody who would take hold of apple selling with a little more imagination. think it would be great to give free apples at the opening of the government bookstore; I think that would be marvellous. If we are at the peak of the apple advertising campaign now—well I cannot tell it from the valley.

Mr. Chairman: Item 2. The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: A question, Mr. Chairman. The minister mentioned that there is a World Food Bank. In view of the fact that we are the leading production province in this whole nation, what do we give to the World Food Bank each year in contributions of food and what is our revenue from that?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, as a province we do not make any contributions. Anything that is done is done through The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Mr. Sargent: Can we measure what comes out of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, I cannot at this moment. I really cannot. I doubt very much if we can.

Mr. Sargent: It seems to me if this department is spending $2 million in marketing, its people should know where the final outlet of our production is. Is it the UN in New York that handles distribution for the World Food Bank?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is done through the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations with headquarters in Rome, and the Canadian government participates in those programmes.

Mr. Sargent: Does the Canadian government have liaison with the Rome office?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh, yes.

Mr. Sargent: And the minister does not know what comes out of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I cannot tell the member the exact amount. It is purchased by the federal government.

Mr. Sargent: I think it might be a good idea to find out when we are spending $2 million there.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I will.

Mr. Chairman: Item 2.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, just one other point: We were treated to a considerable discussion about the recommendations in the fifth volume of the McRuer report dealing with marketing boards; I wonder how the minister is setting up his administration to review these recommendations, with the possibility of amending the legislation to undertake the safeguards in marketing that were recommended in that report.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, Mr. Chairman, if I have any lawyers left in my department after the debate last night, I will turn the McRuer Report and The Farm Products Marketing Act over to them and say, "Go to work and advise us of their conclusions."

Mr. Nixon: The minister certainly does not want to get rid of any of them.

Mr. Chairman: Item 2. The member for Brantford.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I should not have any, according to your friend next to you.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, on the matter of marketing, last year or the year before we raised—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Nothing but hot air—known as the windjammer of Downsview.

Mr. Makarchuk: That is one of our natural resource industries.

Last year we raised the possibility of the minister using some of the surplus food that we have in storage, such as cheese, powdered milk and so forth, in trying to provide it to various institutions in Ontario and possibly in Canada. The minister said that he would consider this matter. Would he indicate now if he has looked into it or has he made any decision on this?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I did not hear what the member asked me.

Mr. Makarchuk: Two years ago we raised the possibility that surplus food in storage in Ontario be used to supplement diets either in schools or various institutions around the province. At that time the minister said that he would consider this proposition, and I just wondered what he had done in the meantime?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is safe to say that the government is still considering the idea.

Mr. Lawlor: The government goes on indefinitely considering it.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, the government is taking its time about it, that is quite obvious. But surely, in a period of high unemployment and with the considerable number of people on welfare, and taking into account that there are many institutions even in Toronto and other areas around the province that supply free meals to transients or people out of work, would this not be the logical time to possibly use some of this food instead of letting it lie around in the warehouses and provide it to these institutions so that they can serve it out to these people as supplementary diets? Does the minister not think that this would be the logical thing to do instead of having it lie there?

Mr. Chairman: Item 2.

Mr. Makarchuk: I would like to hear the minister's comments on this.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I gave the member my comments.

Mr. Makarchuk: The minister did not give me any comments. He said that he was still looking at it. Is he planning on doing anything about it or not?

Mr. Lawlor: The minister said that he was contemplating on it.

Mr. Makarchuk: When this issue was raised the last time, Mr. Chairman, there were headlines in the local papers that the Minister of Agriculture and Food was going to consider this proposition. Two years later he says he is still considering. He is the most considering minister there is in the House, and let me tell you it is pretty hard to beat that record.

Mr. Lawlor: The minister has not done a thing about it and he does not intend to. He is too obtuse to say so.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. Makarchuk: In other words, the minister is just refusing to do anything. Am I correct in assuming that?

An hon. member: That is the best he has to give.

Mr. Chairman: The minister has given his answer.

Mr. Makarchuk: The minister had not given an answer. The members of the House just want to make sure the minister is getting the message, that is all.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Chairman, we are all concerned over the sale and the increase of sales of Ontario-produced-and-grown agricultural products. I was wondering if the minister ever considered requiring, during the sale of articles in supermarkets, other stores and so forth, that in the packaging and the wrapping, any Ontario-produced or Canada-produced-and-grown articles have a tag or some type of a little marker inserted so that the purchaser knows that it is Ontario-grown?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Here again, this comes under quality.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, I bring it under marketing because we are interested in selling and marketing of Ontario products. I am not discussing the idea of the quality of the merchandise.

Mr. Chairman: We will get to that point in just a moment. There is nothing further on marketing anyway.

Anything on item 2?

Vote 103, item 2 agreed to.

On item 3:

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There are some of the marketing boards that do this now with containers marked "Produce of Ontario" or "Produce of Canada." You see apple cartons that are stamped "Produce of Ontario"; "Ontario apples."

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Minister, I would go even a little further than that. Rather than have it on display in the supermarket when they package, regardless of the size of the package, let there be some type of little card or tag attached to the product at the sale end so that the purchaser knows that this is an Ontario-grown or Ontario-raised agricultural product.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: All right.

Mr. Chairman: Item 3. The member for Yorkview.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Chairman, in respect to packaging quality control—I suppose packaging is part of quality control—I was wondering about the new packages, the styrofoam packages that eggs now come in. I presume that this is an improvement insofar as breakage is concerned. It protects the product and brings it to the customer in better condition.

I wonder about two things and whether the minister has some answer on them. First of all, does this add considerably to the cost of the eggs and the cost which now is absorbed, not by the consumer but by the producer and therefore his price is driven down a bit? It may not be significant; I do not know.

The second is in connection with pollution. The old cardboard packages would break down easily in the incinerators or in the sanitary landfill, but the styrofoam is not quite as degradable as the old packages. I wonder, with the quantity which is now produced and the quality of eggs that are sold, whether this adds to the real hazards in the whole field of pollution? I wonder if the minister has some answers in these two questions?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I really could not give the member a positive answer on either one, because I frankly do not know. It is something that we can look into. I suppose that there could be some problem there, but I have no idea what the answer is.

Mr. Young: Just looking at it, it looks as if the cost might be much more, but I do not know. It may be that this is one factor in the depressing of the price to the producer.

The other part, it seems to me, is important. We ought to be looking at the whole matter from the point of view of the pollution that is being caused by this kind of packaging here and in many other areas.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, on the same point, this is related to frozen foods or packages of frozen foods in the supermarkets. Does the minister consider—this has been raised before—some form of date of the food to ensure that it has not been frozen and refrozen or remained on the shelves for a period of time, by which it could be harmful to the people who are buying the food? What are the regulations regarding the time that frozen food can be kept, and whether any control is carried out right now by the department to ensure that it is relatively fresh or that it has not suffered any damage in transit or in storage?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is a very difficult subject. There is no question about that at all. There has been some consideration given to it by our department and by other departments of government where this has been tried. It has not worked very satisfactorily. There are many problems associated with it, but I can tell the members that the whole matter of grading quality regulations is under review by the Deputy Ministers of Agriculture across Canada.

They had a meeting recently and this was one of the points of discussion, as well as including some of the suggestions that have been made here this morning. The desirability of dating frozen products is very difficult to determine, and I am not so that sure it would always be in the best interests of the consumers themselves.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, on the same point, I am not too sure why it would not be in the best interests of the consumers themselves. I am sure the consumer is interested in getting fresher produce, and it will also make the retailer or the wholesaler a bit more selective about the products that they turn out and the amount they order and there will be some kind of control.

As it is, they could just put packages on top of packages, and the packages at the top are being sold. The ones at the bottom may remain at the bottom for months and months, in which case they may spoil and some consumer eventually gets stuck with this thing, or there may be a reshuffling. This is where I think dating would be helpful.

The minister says this matter is under review. Could he indicate when the review will come to an end so we can have some specific date from him, seeing that he is considering other things forever?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I cannot give that date, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to pursue the idea of the dating and also the grading. Going into the supermarket, quite often a purchaser of meat products believes that he is buying a red brand quality of meat, only to find out after going through the experience, that it was anything but red brand.

My suggestion to the minister is, should there not be some type of regulation required in the packaging of the food that its grade also be included? Apparently the supermarkets are only interested in disposing of the article. They do not care whether it happens to be red, blue, commercial or even a utility brand of beef. Would the minister care to remark on that?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I see a certain amount of value in this business of dating the packages, quite frankly, from the producer's standpoint. This is why it is under review at the national level. It has to be done at the national level if it is going to be effective, because many of these products are distributed on a national basis through the various food brokers, wholesalers and processing companies. I think there is a great deal of merit in the suggestion and I would like to see it further explored.

Mr. B. Newman: Would the minister then consider asking the big chains to voluntarily undertake a grading and a display of the grade in the sale of their products? I at this time specifically refer to beef products.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: To what products?

Mr. B. Newman: Beef.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: To beef?

Mr. B. Newman: Yes

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, that is strange.

Mr. B. Newman: You go to a store and you buy what you think is a red brand of beef, a steak red brand, and you find out that you are buying commercial or utility brand.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not know how the hon. member would find that out.

Mr. B. Newman: You can usually tell by the taste, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh no, you cannot tell by the taste, definitely not. As I understand it, all beef that is sold in the food outlets is graded beef. There are various grades of beef, but it is graded beef and there are many supermarkets who pride themselves on selling one standard grade of beef.

Mr. B. Newman: But do they?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: As far as I know they do.

Mr. B. Newman: They say they do.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: They say they do and we have no reason to believe that they do not. I would think it would be quite a serious thing if they were trying to mislead the consumer.

Mr. B. Newman: It would be easy to check. All you would have to do is check the invoice.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The consumer can check himself, because it is stamped right on the beef. The grade is right there on the beef.

Mr. B. Newman: But likewise the beef product, when purchased, is also trimmed—and if it is anything but a red brand of beef it is trimmed so that the consumer could not see the blue or the commercial labelling on it.

I will tell the minister from practical experience of my own purchases that it is all right for someone else to say otherwise.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, on the matter of dating again, the minister said that this would be something that will have to be looked into at the national level. I cannot understand his reasoning. If the minister can deal with broilers on a provincial level, surely a simple matter of ensuring that the local beef dealers put a date on when either product is put into the coolers in the stores, when it arrives or leaves the storage area, is not that complicated a procedure?

I do not see why the national level should be involved with the dating. Most of the warehouses are located in Ontario. The originating centres are in Ontario and the dating can be carried out here very effectively.

Mr. Chairman: Item 3?

Vote 104, item 3, carried.

Vote 104 agreed to.

On vote 105, item 1:

Mr. Chairman: Agricultural education research programme—item 1.

The member for Rainy River.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Mr. Chairman, before we get into that I was wondering if the minister had any comment or had an answer to the question that was asked by the member for York North in regard to disbursements of funds for research and development of northern Ontario agriculture?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have those figures and I will table them, Mr. Chairman. I do not think this is the place that you want me to read that long list of figures off, surely?

Mr. T. P. Reid: No, as long as they will be made available to the members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh sure!

Mr. T. P. Reid: May I ask, if I am not getting ahead of the votes—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That was dealt with yesterday.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Pardon me?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That was dealt with yesterday.

Mr. T. P. Reid: I have not seen the figures. Under research and services is there any particular programme going on?

Mr. Chairman: That is item 3. Is there anything further on item 1 of this vote? If not, shall we carry it? The member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: Agriculture, economics and research council. What does this research council really do? In what areas does it work?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is the federal Agriculture Economics Research Council, and the provincial contribution to that organization is $7,500 on an annual basis.

Mr. Innes: There are no personnel? That is just a straight grant?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, Dr. Haslett is a member of the board of governors of the Agriculture Economics Research Council. He is director of the economics and statistics branch of our department.

Vote 105, item 1 agreed to.

On item 2:

Mr. Chairman: The member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: This particular vote takes in the whole orbit of education, it takes in the various colleges, the University of Guelph and what have you. There is one specific point that concerns me very much, and I hope the minister will appreciate the concern that we in our particular area have over the threat, or should I say the rumour, that the satellite college of Fanshawe now located in Woodstock—the Fanshawe agricultural satellite—rumour has it that this college could be stopped. Now this has been brought to my attention and it is of great concern to the people in that particular area.

I want to relate just a little bit of what has transpired. As he recalls, the Kemptville school and the Ridgetown school for many years did a real service for those particular areas. Then the Centralia school was opened up and it had a tendency to draw students from the other areas, not so much from Kemptville but certainly from the Ridgetown area up to Centralia.

Consequently, these two other schools are not getting the number of students they would like to have. I think I am right in saying that, and I could be corrected, but I do understand from the report of the minister that at the Ridgetown school last year there were 28 graduates, including 21 in home economics, and there were 25 teachers. I understand that they would like to have some more students there. But when the Centralia school was opened up in Huron—and one of my hon. friends is here from Huron; I hate to say anything about it.

Mr. Gaunt: Go ahead, go ahead!

Mr. Innes: I think this was a political football. I hate to say this—but I do believe this was true and it was draining students from other areas.

Mr. Nixon: It was designed to help the Minister of Highways and Transport.

Mr. Innes: That is true—to some, mind you; not wholly. On the other hand, I do not see why this department should say to the people in our particular area who are doing a good job—these students, incidentally, go back and forth each evening to their college—that there is no way we could get the students to go to Ridgetown or Centralia, in the greatest respect, so why should you people be threatening this particular little school that is doing a real service to our area in a radius of about 60 to 70 miles? This threat is a threat and I hope that it is not true, because if it is, it is going to be dynamite for this department to interfere. I say this with the greatest respect, because there are a group of people who have devoted a lot of their effort, money and time to get this started.

Mr. Sargent: Hear, hear!

Mr. Innes: If the minister does happen to take it out, I can tell him that it is going to continue through local support. And if that happens, this government is going to be in serious difficulty. Maybe the minister would like to comment.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, the matter that my hon. friend raises is of concern, but I do not know how he and his party and others in the opposition can continually criticize this government for the expenditure of funds and also when we try to correct an absolute duplication of service.

Mr. Innes: The minister is not duplicating anything.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It certainly is a duplication of service. Take the duplication of service that was being provided through the satellite colleges at Woodstock and at Simcoe with the other agricultural colleges.

Mr. Nixon: Take some of the money from the licensing offices and keep the school open.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: These courses are simply being provided to a group of students who could just as easily have been at Ridgetown or at Centralia if they wanted to be.

Mr. Innes: It is not right.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Just a minute. When that programme was started—and I assumed some responsibility for having got it started in that area—

An hon. member: Good move!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —it was given to us on the understanding that the people who wanted to attend that course would be adult farmers who wished to have the opportunity to attend an adult educational type of programme in such an agricultural course. We were not told that they would be grade 12 students.

We were not told that they would be students coming right out of high school and going right into that course rather than going on to Ridgetown or Centralia, where we have all kinds of space, all kinds of teaching facilities and nobody using that space—at least, not being used to the full. We were very much aware of that.

It started out as an experiment. We provided staff, seconded to the Fanshawe College, through the community colleges branch of The Department of Education. We believed it was worth a try. The result was that there were very few full-time farmers who availed themselves of that course. They were grade 12 students.

To put it in the words of my friend, the principal of Fanshawe College, he told me quite frankly that he had almost unlimited funds to go out and, as he described it himself, “rattle the bushes in the high schools and collegiates of western Ontario to produce students for the Fanshawe satellite at Woodstock and at Simcoe.” It was a clear indication to me that the original intent of the programme was not being carried out.

And through discussions that we had with him, and with members of his board as far as our staff is concerned, we came to the conclusion that we would carry the programme on until May 15, 1971. This was the agreement, and it was to be terminated at that time as far as our department was concerned.

I see no reason why there should be the continuance of a school at Woodstock or at Simcoe, when there is all kinds of classroom space and teachers available in the other two agricultural colleges in western Ontario, that are being maintained by our department. Surely this is outright duplication and waste of government funds to the extent, I think, of something like over $70,000. Now as a responsible minister of the government, surely to goodness it is my responsibility where I see duplication to try to do something about cutting it out. That is the reason why we made the decision, as far as we are concerned, to end the agreement with Fanshawe College to provide staff. I believe that the Treasury Board has so advised The Department of Education and The Department of University Affairs, where, I believe, the community colleges will eventually rest, to the effect that there should be no more expansion. In fact, there should be no more agricultural courses provided in the community college setup across the province, while there are obviously empty spaces available for these students to attend in other areas.

My hon. friend may ask what happens to the students that already have taken the first year of the course at Fanshawe satellite colleges. We have still an obligation to them in as far as our department is concerned. We offer those students the right to attend either Ridgetown or Centralia and we will have someone visiting those students and offering them this opportunity to attend those courses at a very nominal figure. I think this is fair; it is right that they should be offered it, because they embarked on the programme, perhaps thinking the programme would be carried on. But it was really only an experimental programme. If they came in last year to that course, they must have known full well, if the principal and the staff at Fanshawe College told them, that the agreement would end on May 15, 1971, because it was a formal agreement and that was the date of conclusion.

Mr. Chairman: Is there any further discussion? We have arrived at 1 o'clock. There has to be a termination here. Will there be further discussion of item 2?

Mr. Innes: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: It is not carried yet then.

Hon. Mr. Bales moves the committee of supply rise and report it has come to certain conclusions, and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, I would like to tell the House that the handsome group in the gallery is from Chesley, Ontario.

Mr. Chairman: They are just in, and we welcome them.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report that it has come to certain resolutions and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Bales moves the adjournment of the House.

The House adjourned at 1 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, MAY 3, 1971

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We have guests with us today in the east gallery from the George Harvey Secondary School of Toronto; and in the west gallery St. Mary's High School of Hamilton and we are also to have some Boy Scouts from Wyoming. A little later, at 2.30 p.m., in the east gallery we will have students from the Queen Mary School in Peterborough.

I am sure you would want to extend a welcome to these visitors today.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Questions, did you say, Mr. Speaker? Where are the ministers?

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

OFF-TRACK BETTING

Mr. Nixon: I thought with that caucus the Conservative Party had today a few more of them would be in, but I guess they must have gone back to the hustings.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Justice in what way he is keeping tabs on the expanding off-track betting industry. Is he looking forward to some special regulation or is he just leaving it to the local police to keep tabs that they are not breaking the law?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Justice): This whole question of off-track betting of course is a very troublesome one.

As the hon. member knows, the legal provisions are under the jurisdiction of the federal government, not ours. As far as I know, in the normal course of the administration of justice and the enforcement of those laws in this province the local police or the Ontario Provincial Police both—and for that matter I suppose the RCMP as well—when they learn of infractions of the betting and gambling laws, carry out investigations in the normal way and charges are laid.

My information is that a great number of charges have been laid, certainly in the Metropolitan Toronto area anyway, in respect of some of these shops.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary: Can the minister tell the House how many off-track betting outlets there now are in the province?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, I cannot. That type of information would not be available to me. I do know that in a number of the county towns there seem to be a number opening and closing. I was interested the other day to note that there are four in Peterborough, and one in Lindsay for instance. I imagine these are being opened and closed with great rapidity by the operators.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, has the minister yet arrived at a provincial philosophy about off-track betting shops?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: A provincial philosophy?

Mr. Singer: What is the hon. minister going to do?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: At the moment the policy of the government here is that this is something that falls completely under the statutory authority of the federal government at Ottawa.

Unless they change the law or until we have wider jurisdiction or authority here in the provincial field, my friend's question is completely hypothetical.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, does this government intend to make any representations about this situation to the federal authorities?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: At the moment there is not very much that should be done, in my own mind, as far as this government is concerned. Usually in matters of this kind, any suggestion that emanates from the provincial government does not get very far as far as our friends at Ottawa are concerned.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary—

Mr. Nixon: All purpose entry!

Mr. Singer: Does the minister disown his predecessor's views, which he expressed sometime—I guess about last November after the House had risen?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: It may be a very dangerous thing to disown something that one is not too sure of—if it was said in the first place—but I do not disown anything that my predecessor said.

Mr. Singer: That is the minister's trouble.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Keep trying!

FARM DEATH OF ONTARIO HOSPITAL PATIENT

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health: Has he undertaken an investigation into the situation that resulted in the death of a patient at the Rideau Regional Hospital School at Smiths Falls who was working on a farm labour assignment, particularly in view of the fact that the local coroner says that some of these young people are being exploited as farm workers?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Minister of Health): No, Mr. Speaker, I have not, as minister, done this. But I will check and see whether the mental health branch has undertaken such an investigation.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question: Is the minister aware of the policy of the department which puts these young people from the hospital schools out as farm labour and does not adequately investigate their situation?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I cannot accept the last half of that offhand, Mr. Speaker, but I am aware of the policy of trying to have the young people who are capable of it out in the fields of labour, in farm labour in particular, as much as possible.

The latter half, the allegation that they are exploited, I will have to assess.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier—

Mr. Speaker: Order please! I wonder if the hon. the Leader of the Opposition would hold his question. The hon. the Prime Minister has a statement that he intended to make. Does he have the permission of the House to revert to that order of business, and then we will return to the hon. Leader of the Opposition?

An hon. member: The Prime Minister is going to announce an election.

Mr. Speaker: Do we have this concurred in?

Statements by the ministry.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have a hopefully not too lengthy statement on bilingualism in the Province of Ontario. This is the first opportunity I have had since assuming my responsibilities as leader of the government to comment on this subject. I believe it is important that I state clearly the determination of the new government to continue the general philosophy and programme which was set in motion by my predecessor, the member for London North (Mr. Robarts). They will serve as our guidelines.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that the basic principle of the bilingualism policy was established at the first federal-provincial constitutional conference in February of 1968. At that time the government of Ontario agreed to provide, wherever feasible, public service in French as well as in English, so that the people of Ontario would be able to deal in either language with the various levels of government with which they come in contact.

At the second constitutional conference, in February of 1969, this statement was elaborated upon by the submission of three propositions regarding our linguistic policy. Among the objectives of Confederation it was proposed that firstly, Canada should be a bilingual country while maintaining its multicultural character; secondly, all governments in Canada should provide, wherever practicable, public services in the English and French languages; and thirdly, all Canadian parents should, as a matter of equity, be able to have their children educated in either or both of the official language.

In addition, the first two articles of the 1969 agreement between Ontario and Quebec regarding educational, cultural and governmental co-operation and exchange set out the commitments of the two governments on the question of linguistic rights.

In that agreement it was stated that, firstly, we will provide within the areas under our jurisdiction, and wherever feasible, public services in the English and French languages, secondly, we will provide education, wherever feasible, to students of the French-speaking and English-speaking minority in the language of that minority. We will also provide them with the means to acquire a good command of the language of the majority.

The approach which has been developed should be clearly understood. I want to repeat here, as explicitly as possible, that a wider and more formal recognition of the French language in Ontario will not force anything on anyone. Our policy does not require everyone to become bilingual. It does not mean that we are trying to force two languages and two cultures upon every Canadian.

As the first volume of the report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism stated, a bilingual country is one in which the great majority of its citizens may well be unilingual. Therefore what Ontario's policy means is that the legitimate requirements of Ontario's French-speaking population are being met and will continue to be met.

Despite the discussions at the Confederation of Tomorrow conference, at the six federal-provincial constitutional conferences and at the many meetings of their associated committees, a firm agreement among all the governments of Canada has yet to be reached on the best method to proceed with any formal constitutional change on the question of linguistic rights. However, in the same period there has developed a consensus on attitudes. Much has already been accomplished by governments in implementing practical changes in educational and other programmes and in ensuring better liaison among governments to exchange information in this area.

The next constitutional conference is to be held in Victoria in June. Further discussion is planned on this topic at that time.

In our province, Mr. Speaker, we have always stressed that the most effective method of ensuring the provision of public services in both the English and French languages is by means of the legislative and administrative processes of each government. We believe that changes made in this way will create a sound foundation for any future constitutional agreement regarding linguistic guarantees. The new government intends to proceed in areas within our jurisdiction to meet the principles set out in the propositions and statements of the government of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I should now like to set out the bilingualism programme of the government. In doing so, I shall deal with it under eight categories: The structures required for implementation, the provincial public service, municipal services, judicial services, the Legislature, education, translation services and bilingual districts.

Firstly, the structures for implementation: At the first constitutional conference in February of 1968 the government announced the creation of four task forces to investigate the provision of bilingual services in the provincial public service, the administration of justice, municipal administration and the Legislature and provincial statutes. The policy which I am putting before the House today is based partly on the experience we have gained in the last three years in the field of bilingualism and on further studies made during that period.

One year ago, the then Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Roberts) announced the appointment of the chairman of the Civil Service Commission, Mr. W. A. B. Anderson, as the co-ordinator on bilingualism. It is his task to co-ordinate and oversee the implementation of Ontario programmes for the provision of bilingual services. Last autumn, the government created a committee of advisors on bilingualism made up of representatives of each department and agency to assist the co-ordinator in his work.

During the last four months, all departments have been examining the extent to which bilingual services are provided in their departments and agencies. They have also been preparing specific programmes to meet the government guidelines.

Provincial public services: Insofar as the approach we are taking regarding the provincial public service is concerned, it should be kept in mind that when we began an examination of this question it was in the knowledge that there already exists a substantial amount of bilingualism in Ontario's public service. This is particularly true in areas where there is a concentration of French-speaking people. Over the years the government has recruited bilingual personnel and some documents have been produced in both languages in order to serve effectively the French-speaking areas of the province.

As the second stage in our bilingualism programme and to supplement the bilingual personnel already on staff, French-language courses were begun in the spring of 1968. Instruction has been provided for members of the Legislature and for civil servants whose duties require a knowledge of French. In the three years since the programme was launched close to 2,000 civil servants, both in Toronto and in the field, were nominated by their departments for the French-language courses given in Toronto. Language centres now operate in Sudbury and Ottawa to handle the increasing demand for French-language instruction among Ontario civil servants. We estimate there will be approximately 700 civil servants enrolled this year, 1971-1972.

These two important factors—the existence and recruitment of competent bilingual personnel and the language training programme—have provided us with a sound basis on which to plan our next steps.

The programme I am outlining today will enable us to reinforce and improve the bilingual services we are already providing to meet the needs of French-speaking Ontarians. In addition, we have decided to implement the following specific measures:

1. To give a definite framework to the provision of bilingual public services in Ontario, all departments and agencies of the government of Ontario will be directed to give attention to the provision, wherever feasible, of a full range of bilingual services, beginning in those—

Mr. Nixon: Directed to give attention wherever feasible?

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is right.

Mr. Nixon: Does the Premier not think he is taking too much risk?

Hon. Mr. Davis:—beginning in those areas of Ontario where there are concentrations of French-speaking people. The main concentrations occur in eastern and northeastern Ontario in the counties and districts of Stormont, Glengarry, Prescott, Russell, Carleton, Nipissing, Timiskaming, Cochrane, Sudbury and Algoma. Other concentrations are to be found in the vicinity of Penetanguishene, Welland and in parts of the counties of Essex and Renfrew. I would stress, Mr. Speaker, that these areas will serve as guides in the provision of bilingual public services and we do not intend to be rigidly bound by them.

2. Government agencies in these areas will provide over-the-counter services in English and French. In addition—

Mr. Singer: Clear, concise and forceful.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I recognize the member for Downsview has very little interest in bilingualism, Mr. Speaker, but perhaps some of the others have.

Mr. Singer: I wonder if the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) will now be able to communicate with his Quebec counterpart.

Hon. Mr. Davis: In addition—

Mr. Singer: Is the Minister of Agriculture able to speak with Monsieur Toupin?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Flexible and realistic!

Mr. Singer: Why should he worry about Monsieur Toupin?

Mr. S. J. Randall (Don Mills): Eat the peanuts and leave us alone.

Hon. Mr. Davis: A very germane observation, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Singer: The hon. member was better in the front row, we could hear him.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, the member heard it, did he?

In addition, those agencies which have personnel in areas of French-speaking concentration will review their staffs to determine the positions in which bilingual skills are necessary or desirable.

I should underline at this point, Mr. Speaker, and I want to be most emphatic about it—

Mr. Singer: Emphatic? Ah, here we are!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Are members ready? That this policy will be implemented in such a way that the careers of those unilingual persons holding these positions will in no way be affected.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I recognize the members opposite really are not that concerned about the civil service; I happen to be!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the problems in this regard which have developed at the federal level, and I wish to make my commitment very clear, and I repeat it: The careers of unilingual persons in the public service will in no way be threatened now or in the future. I should also add that the future entry or promotion of unilingual persons into the Ontario public service will not be affected by our policy on bilingualism.

3. All government agencies will begin to establish a priority list of official documents for printing in both English and French, such as birth certificates, drivers' licences, instructional manuals and hospital insurance certificates. These will be produced in both languages as soon as possible.

4. We are implementing measures pertinent to job advertising and language testing designed to facilitate the recruitment of bilingual personnel.

In the field of municipal services, Mr. Speaker, many municipalities in the northern and eastern parts of the province already provide a number of services in both the English and French language. Again, this situation has developed in response to the practical necessity of providing services for the residents of those municipalities, many of whom are French-speaking. On this basis, we have decided to take the following steps:

1. We intend to introduce amendments to The Municipal Act to permit any municipality in Ontario to provide its services in the English and French languages.

2. An amendment will be introduced to The Highway Traffic Act to permit any municipality to provide all municipal public information and traffic signs in English and French.

3. We will make available to municipal elected representatives and officials the government's language training facilities. Courses for clerks, assessors, and treasurers will be given, as needed, in French as well as in English. French versions of various municipal statutes will be made available.

4. To alleviate the financial burden which might be imposed on participating municipalities, the government will consider reimbursing those municipalities, subject to a formula to be devised by the Treasury Board in co-operation with The Department of Municipal Affairs, for expenditures which are incurred as a direct result of the provision of bilingual public services.

A special task force of the committee of advisers on bilingualism is already looking into this question. The government intends to work closely with the municipal liaison committee in developing these measures.

In the field of judicial services. In considering a more extensive use of French in Ontario's judicial services, we must bear in mind that relatively few members of the judiciary and bar are bilingual. This is an important limitation on the steps the government can take. But we intend to introduce certain measures as a start in improving the situation.

The immediate aim of our policy is to expand the provision of bilingual services, both verbal and written, as quickly as possible. It would be misleading to raise the expectations of the French-speaking population of Ontario without being able to meet these expectations. The development of sound bilingual procedures in the judicial administration of the province will require time and patience. However, we will begin by taking the following steps:

1. Throughout The Department of Justice and Attorney General a continued policy will be pursued to recruit additional bilingual personnel in those areas having a substantial number of French-speaking residents. This approach will ensure that judicial offices in French-speaking areas will be adequately staffed with bilingual personnel. This programme is now under way.

2. To increase the numbers of bilingual judicial personnel, the language-training facilities of the government have been made available to these people at the three provincial centres where such instruction is given.

3. The translation of legal documents commonly served on the public poses a particular problem since their format and/or content are regulated by statute or by long-standing rules of practice and procedure. However, even with these restrictions, certain documents can be rendered in bilingual form. The Department of Justice and Attorney General will begin by producing in English and French judicial notices commonly served on the public. In addition, a variety of legal documents, such as subpoenas and summonses, will be accompanied by an information sticker containing the essential details in French. The next stage of our programme will be to explore ways of permitting the use of French in the courts of Ontario, beginning in the lower courts.

We will seek close consultation with the federal government, as its Official Languages Act is implemented, concerning those sections of the Act which affect the courts. We believe that the experience with bilingualism in the federal courts, as well as in those of Quebec and New Brunswick, will help us to develop sound and realistic programmes for our own provincial courts.

Fourthly, the Legislature: I should like to turn to the subject of bilingualism in the Legislature.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that on July 22, 1968, the government introduced the following motion, which was adopted unanimously:

RESOLVED,

That, henceforth, every member of this House, may as a matter of right in this House, address the House in either of the two official languages of Canada.

We now propose to give more substance to this motion by taking the following steps:

1. The debates of the Legislature will continue to be recorded in whichever of the two languages, English or French, is used. Therefore, members are free to use and should be encouraged to use, whichever language, English or French, is most natural to them.

2. Resolutions, motions and questions will be printed in the Votes and Proceedings and the order and notice paper in whichever of the official languages they are tabled.

3. Although the bills and statutes of the House will continue to be printed in English only, unofficial French translations will be made available by the appropriate departments of those statutes likely to be of general interest.

4. As more competent translators become available, other statutes and regulations will be made available in unofficial French versions.

In the field of education: Since the announcement in August of 1967 that French-language secondary schools will be established within the publicly financed school system, 63 bilingual schools have been developed. Of these, 22 offer the entire programme, except for English, in the French language.

At the elementary level, there were more than 90,000 French-speaking students in 329 schools last year. We are equally encouraged by the development of the two French-language teachers' colleges at the University of Ottawa and Laurentian University.

The legislative and administrative action taken in this area met with the spirit of the recommendations made in the second volume of the report of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism. Therefore, we believe we are recognizing our responsibilities in the field of education, and that legislatively we are fulfilling it.

The task of implementing the legislation is being carried out in various parts of the province. The steps taken by different school boards give us good reason to believe that our approach is both sound and successful.

There have been a few problems. Although any new programme is bound to have some growing pains, these relatively minor difficulties are being overcome and the spirit and intent of the legislation passed in this House in 1968 is being fulfilled.

I am pleased to report to the Legislature that our discussions with the federal government for financial support of these programmes has been well received. In 1970 we were reimbursed for the programmes we had already undertaken at the elementary and secondary levels to the extent of approximately $15 million. In addition, negotiations are currently under way regarding post-secondary education. We are confident we shall be receiving further assistance for that level.

I should make it quite clear, however, that these funds are not coming to us in the form of a windfall. They represent a reimbursement of a portion of the money we have already expended and will continue to expend on bilingual education in the province. We shall also be entering into discussions with the federal government for financial assistance regarding other parts of our bilingualism programme.

In conjunction with these steps being taken in the areas I have covered, the translation bureau in The Department of the Provincial Secretary and Citizenship is being expanded to meet the new demands which will be placed upon it. The review of our translation and interpretation needs which The Department of the Provincial Secretary and Citizenship is now undertaking includes a thorough examination of the implications of the government policy on bilingualism.

I must stress that a great deal of what we intend to do will depend, both in terms of physical facilities and of personnel, on the development of our translation facilities. To help alleviate the problems we are encountering in this field, I have directed The Department of the Provincial Secretary and Citizenship to develop programmes to ensure that in time we will have an adequate supply of interpreters and translators to meet our needs.

Without progress in this area we will face considerable difficulties in implementing our proposals. However, I must caution everyone that this will not be an overnight process but will take time and patience. Nonetheless, I am confident we will succeed in this area.

Bilingual districts and the national capital region: At the same time as we were considering the measures I have outlined in the provincial public service, municipal administration, judicial administration, the Legislature and education, we have also been considering whether it would be advisable to define bilingual districts in areas where there are significant concentrations of French-speaking students. The members will recall that the federal government, by The Official Languages Act enacted in 1969, provided for federal bilingual services in the national capital region and in such federal bilingual districts as might be set up. It also required the federal bilingual districts advisory board, when considering the boundaries of such districts, to consult the provinces.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to acknowledge the very helpful way in which the bilingual districts advisory board has kept us informed of its work. The government of Ontario does not believe that it will be necessary for Ontario to establish bilingual districts for provincial purposes. The need for districts must be related to the type of service to be provided by each jurisdiction. We think that provincial bilingual services can best be provided in the way that I have been describing, without the need to set up specific districts.

I should stress that we recognize the special emphasis given by the federal government to bilingualism in the national capital region. We fully intend to do our part to ensure that our national capital is a place of which all Canadians can be proud. As I have already mentioned, we fully support the efforts being made to date by the municipalities in the national capital region to increase their provision of bilingual services.

With the introduction of the measures I have announced today, Mr. Speaker, I believe that Ontario has a solid basis for an effective and meaningful programme of bilingualism. Our policy will be a continuing and progressive one in our endeavour to improve the provision of bilingual public services in Ontario.

For the people of Ontario to recognize that French is an official language of Canada does not in any way alter the position of the English language in our province. Our aim is to ensure the maintenance and development of certain services provided to the English-speaking community while ensuring that those to the French-speaking community more fully meet their needs.

Mr. Speaker, it is clear that Ontario has made a solid commitment to the principle of bilingualism as a matter of equity for our own residents and as a large contribution to the continued and future strength of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: There will be 21 minutes added to the question period.

Oral questions? The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

DEPUTY IN EDUCATION TO DEAL WITH FRENCH NEEDS

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, further to the Premier's statement, did he announce in the body of his statement that there would be an additional deputy minister appointed in The Department of Education dealing exclusively with French education, as has been requested?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, Mr. Speaker, I did not.

Mr. Nixon: Is there any thought of moving in that direction?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not at this moment, Mr. Speaker.

REDUCTION OF GRANTS FOR FRENCH EDUCATION

Mr. Nixon: A further question. Has it been a part of the statements made by the Premier's colleagues, the Minister of University Affairs (Mr. White) and the Minister of Education (Mr. Welch), that grants for special French education would in fact be reduced in 1972-1973?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I do not recall any such statement. There were grants introduced a year ago for the bilingual programmes in the elementary and secondary schools related to the funding provided from Ottawa. As it relates to Laurentian or Ottawa University with respect to the bilingual character of their own programmes, I have not heard of any anticipated change.

Mr. Nixon: A final supplementary, as far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker: Is the government going to raise the financial assistance that it gives to the French-Canadian association that has been very vocal in putting forward the views of the French community to the government and to others in this area?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure really to what the hon. Leader of the Opposition is referring. There are a number of groups and organizations that have been making requests to the government.

Mr. Nixon: This is L'Association Canadienne-Francaise d'Ontario.

An hon. member: The Leader of the Opposition sounds like Mr. Diefenbaker.

Mr. Nixon: That is the main spokesman.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am not sure whether the request has come in for support this year. If it has we will certainly consider it.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. Nixon: Not on this question.

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): As a supplementary.

Hon. J. White (Minister of University Affairs): If I may add to the Prime Minister's reply—

Mr. Nixon: May he?

Hon. Mr. White: I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition is referring to some of the detail contained in the letter to the University of Ottawa, which was based on recommendations of the committee on university affairs and which informed the university that the special grants, which were by way of being emergent grants and which were provided because the scale of the bilingual operation was small, would be progressively reduced in the years to come, as indeed will be the special emergent grants available to universities like Trent University.

The reasoning of the committee on university affairs, and the advice which they proffered to me and which I accept, was that these institutions are now getting up to a scale where these special grants are not necessary. The purpose of formula resource allocation is to build into the formula all of the needs of the institutions; and we are progressively vacating special grants of every kind.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary to the Minister of University Affairs, if you will permit me: Would the minister not agree, however, that the financial problems, in an emerging university or otherwise, in providing French education in all subjects would be a special drain on their financing, and at least some continuation of the special grants should be considered in the light of the programme announced by the Premier?

Hon. Mr. White: I think this is not necessarily true.

When Trent get up to about 4,000 student units they will no longer receive any special grant. The special grant which they received in the past was based on the fact they were below optimum scale. The number of student units at the University of Ottawa is something like 21,000, and it is thought that the scale of operation in the English lectures and in the French lectures has now reached the point where additional grants are not needed.

We are phasing the reduction in these special grants to every type of institution over several years so that there will not be any radical dislocations.

The University of Ottawa has a surplus of approximately $3.5 million which, I should like to point out, comes from prudent management. This change does not actually relate to that very favourable financial situation. At the end of this year, they will have about $2 million in surplus, once again the result of good management no doubt, and here again not directly related to the advice offered by the committee on university affairs.

We are making certain grants for capital purposes to the University of Ottawa and this morning I received a letter from their rector thanking me for making extra provision for their building needs. I think Mr. Speaker, that when this matter is explored in greater depth during my estimates, the members of the Legislature will be satisfied that the recommendations of the committee and the fact that I have accepted them are entirely appropriate.

Mr. Pitman: I have a supplementary of either the Prime Minister or the Minister of University Affairs: In all that was read this afternoon, will there be any assistance to Glendon College which is trying to provide bilingual education here in the city of Toronto?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think that question should be appropriately addressed to the Minister of University Affairs. The statement deals in terms as it relates to the areas of public administration and so forth. The problem as it relates to Glendon College is internal, within the university itself, and I think that it would be more appropriately answered by the Minister of University Affairs.

Mr. Pitman: I would like to direct a further supplementary question to the Prime Minister. Would the Premier not consider the possibility that that university is providing education for translators, the very people that he regards as being in very short supply in the statement that he just made?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, whether Glendon College could effectively help us in this regard is perhaps debatable. I certainly would not say it could not. I think if the member for Peterborough recalls correctly, there has been some change in the approach on the part of Glendon College itself which might be a matter of interesting discussion during the debates on the estimates of the department.

Mr. Pitman: They had to change. They had no choice.

Mr. Peacock: They adopted instruction in French.

Mr. Speaker: Is there a supplementary over here?

Mr. H. MacKenzie (Ottawa Centre): Yes, a question of the Minister of University Affairs, Mr. Speaker: Is it a fact that the minister is terminating a $300,000 grant in the school year 1972-1973 to the University of Ottawa, which grant was for the purpose of bilingual costs?

Hon. Mr. White: At one time the extra cost of bilingual programmes, when the operation was smaller in scale, was thought to be seven per cent. A few years ago that was stabilized at $1.5 million, which at that time equalled six per cent. We have informed the university this year the amount will be reduced from $1.5 million to $1.2 million and that eventually this special emergent grant will be phased out for the reasons I gave earlier.

Incidentally, while I am on my feet I would like to say that we are providing a special grant—I think it is $100,000—for Glendon. None of this is to in any way diminish our endeavour so far as bilingualism is concerned. We are very hopeful that the federal government will accept the recommendation of the bi-and-bi committee and that certain additional resources will be made available by the federal government, which has indicated some sympathy for the recommendation without taking any action on it. If those resources are made available by the federal government we will, in turn, make them available to the institutions concerned.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A supplementary question of the Prime Minister: In view of the government statement on bilingualism, what explanation is there for the fact that for most of the year no visitor can receive information in French from the staff of the Ontario government reception centre in Cornwall, a city with a 54 per cent French-speaking population and a heavy flow of French-speaking tourists?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in that I have not personally availed myself of the use of the reception centre, I shall find out.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a second supplementary question, if I may, of the Prime Minister. Would this Prime Minister consider making available to the House the reports of the five task forces that studied areas and means by which bilingualism might be encouraged in the Province of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I certainly could consider it, but I would have to observe that it is highly unlikely I shall make them available.

Mr. Peacock: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the Prime Minister would report to the House, since it was not raised in his statement, the success of the programme of instruction in French for the 2,000 civil servants nominated by their departments; and to what extent they are using the language in their daily work?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I cannot comment on all 2,000 of them. The information I get is that they are using it in a general way, a goodly majority of them, not all 100 per cent.

FRENCH CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): I have a question of the Prime Minister. Is the Prime Minister aware that a good deal of the correspondence that members of this Legislature receive is in the French language; and is there any possibility of getting assistance from the government for translating and for answering these letters in the tongue in which they were received?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I understood this service was already available. If it is not available to the hon. member, I will make sure that it is.

EDUCATION RESEARCH OFFER

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: Is he now prepared to accept the generous offer of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation to provide $25,000 to fund objective research facilities for the committee looking into the cost of education?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is not now ready to accept this offer. It is being discussed with my colleague, the Minister of Education, but at the present moment the answer is no, to be precise.

Mr. Speaker: Did the Leader of the Opposition have any other questions? If not, the hon. member for Peterborough.

UNIVERSITY ENROLMENT

Mr. Pitman: I would like to direct my question to the Minister of University Affairs. I wonder if he could tell us whether he has discovered yet how many extra places the universities are being asked to provide for the class coming in next fall.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, the estimation was 4,000, then it was 3,500 and the most recent estimation is 2,200; but, as I think I mentioned to the House a week or two ago, the system of forecasting is rather rudimentary and it is based on the number of applications a year ago and the proportion of duplications which were experienced a year ago.

If one applies that factor to this year's applications, one ends up with this aggregate number, which is in excess of existing places by something like 2,200. There are a number of variables, one being the anticipated shortage of space which might induce potential students to make out more applications than they would have done in previous years.

We have removed the one per cent limit, as my hon. friend may know, so that the universities are encouraged to accept all qualified applicants next September, and I am very optimistic that this will indeed prove to be the case.

Mr. Pitman: I wonder if I might ask the minister a supplementary. Does he expect there will be any shortage of places as has been suggested by at least one or two universities?

Hon. Mr. White: I think my previous answer dealt with that.

Mr. Pitman: How many of those people—that 4,000—are expected to be elementary school teachers who will not receive jobs?

Hon. Mr. White: The figure of 3,500 was mentioned at one time—not as the number who would not receive jobs but rather the number who were required to have one year of university before going into teacher's college. There are so many variables at work here and the system of forecasting is so imprecise that these figures are not very helpful.

It was for that reason I requested the university presidents, in a letter to them dated last Monday, to establish next year in the committee of presidents a clearing house for applications. I am quite sure that they will accede to this request. In fact, I think this was one of their expectations anyway. A year from now we will have a much more precise idea—well in advance—of what the number of qualified applicants will be.

REDUCTION IN SIZE OF DEPARTMENT OF UNIVERSITY AFFAIRS

Mr. Pitman: If I might direct another question to the Minister of University Affairs in relation to this whole business of forecasting: I wonder how he can relate his forecast on assuming the ministry that he would reduce his department by 10 per cent to the budget statement which indicates that his department will be increased by five per cent.

Hon. Mr. White: I am very glad to have an opportunity to clarify that. The Leader of the Opposition said last week that The Department of Revenue, of which I was the minister, could not have been very efficient because the numbers of members in the department were going to fall by 26, which was the largest such diminution on the list. Of course that is the result of all of the work done by many people within the public service under my leadership during the past 12 months.

Now then, the work of budgeting is undertaken almost all year around and it is certainly undertaken very rigorously starting September. The figures to be seen in the estimates this year were prepared very largely in the months prior to my appointment as Minister of University Affairs. The members may recall that on March 1 I said that my hope would be that within 12 months I could reduce the number on staff in the department by 10 per cent. I have not relinquished that hope; but the numbers to which the member is referring were prepared months ago.

RENT REVIEW BOARDS

Mr. Pitman: I wonder if I might direct a question to the Attorney General.

Could the Attorney General indicate how many municipalities have set up rent review boards on the basis of the legislation which was passed in this Legislature a couple of years ago?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I will have to take that question as notice, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Peterborough has further questions on behalf of his party?

INDOOR PARKING AT UNIVERSITY

Mr. Pitman: I would like to ask one further question of the Minister of University Affairs.

Has the minister had a detailed look at the student services building which is being put up—or which is going to be put up—at the University of Waterloo? In view of his statement last week, how does he explain the fact that one floor of this building is related to indoor parking for 36 cars?

Hon. Mr. White: I know nothing about that project as yet, Mr. Speaker. The member is not referring to the University of Western Ontario, is he?

Mr. Pitman: No, I am referring to the University of Waterloo.

Mr. Singer: He only knows about one university.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South.

LAKE ERIE ICE CONDITIONS

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

A question of the premier: Is the Premier aware that the present ice jam at the eastern base of Lake Erie has created undue hardship to vessels trapped in the heavy icefield? Is the Premier aware that the present ice conditions are causing unfavourable weather conditions in the Niagara peninsula and are creating temperature inversions which have resulted in a series of high air pollution readings in the Buffalo, New York, area?

Why has the Ontario government allowed the ice boom to remain in operation at the eastern end of Lake Erie five weeks longer than the normal April 1 removal date? Will the minister make representation to the proper authorities, the International Joint Commission, to have the ice boom removed by April 1 in the calendar year?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I will certainly analyse very carefully what the hon. member has asked and see what I can do about it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

LEGISLATION OVER WATERFRONT LOTS

Mr. Lawlor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management for which he has had notice of a sort. Has the hon. minister had an opportunity to look into the problem and the position of the Toronto and Region Conservation Authority by way of enabling legislation over waterfront lots on Lake Ontario?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Speaker, at the present time the Metro authority fill regulations do not cover waterfront areas. Legislation is to be proposed to amend The Conservation Authorities Act to permit the description of the authority's jurisdiction covering waterfront areas.

Mr. Lawlor: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the minister would be kind enough to give us any indication as to when that legislation might be forthcoming, as there is some urgency?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I hope to introduce such amending legislation in the current session.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Dovercourt.

EMPLOYEES OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BOARD

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the hon. Minister of Labour, notice of which has been given.

How many people were employed by the Workmen's Compensation Board in the year 1965? How many people are employed by the Workmen's Compensation Board at the present time? How many people are employed in the appeal system of the Workmen's Compensation Board?

Mr. Speaker: I wonder if that question should not properly be placed upon the notice paper?

Mr. De Monte: I did give the minister notice of the question, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. G. Carton (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I can answer it very shortly.

The answer to question number one is that 1,368 were employed in 1965; the answer to question number two is 1,391; and the answer to question number three is that there are seven in the review committee, six in the appeal tribunal and three in the board itself.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): I have a question of the Minister of Energy and—

Mr. Speaker: Well, I believe in being fair and alternating the questions.

The hon. member for York South.

CANADIAN GYPSUM POLLUTION

Mr. MacDonald: I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management.

In view of the 30 years' effort by the residents of Weston to secure relief from the pollution of Canadian Gypsum, could the minister indicate how soon some relief can be achieved following the issuance of ministerial orders in April?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member indicates, this has been a rather long-term problem with this particular plant. The ministerial order was served on the company in March, 1969. The order stipulated that certain things had to be done and certain equipment had to be installed. Those things were done by November of that year. This included a 40-foot stack and a steam generator, a cupola odour-control system, and bag house dust collector.

The problem now is that there is some problem with the abatement equipment that has been installed. It is not doing what it is supposed to do, basically.

The company now has an engineer working full-time on corrective action. The air management branch, of course, is also continuing its surveillance.

Apparently their most recent problems were mineral wool fallout and problems with the exhaust system which resulted in violations of dustfall regulations. As a result of this Mr. Speaker, prosecution is being considered by my department.

The company is also on the air pollution index list for sulphur dioxide emissions, and it reduces its operations as required during high API episodes.

Mr. MacDonald: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister indicate at all specifically when some relief is going to be achieved after this long process?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the final date for compliance with our ministerial order was March of this year, so they are in violation of that order and as a result of that I would assume that we can legitimately undertake some form of prosecution. I want to emphasize, Mr. Speaker, that the problems are mechanical in nature. There are failures which, of course, the company does not appreciate. There is no intent to violate the law or continue to aggravate the people in that area. By the very nature of the industry, of course—

Mr. MacDonald: That is a matter of some doubt.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I think now, since the ministerial orders—at any rate, as a result of this latest episode they are beyond the deadline so I would assume some sort of enforcement action will have to be taken.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

HYDRO DISCOUNT PRICES IN USA

Mr. T. P. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. Can the minister inform the House whether or not those companies and corporations in the United States that are receiving an export of power from Ontario Hydro are being given the advantage of the seven or eight per cent discount that is being made up by the rate stabilization fund of Ontario Hydro in the current prices?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I do not believe they are. I am not absolutely certain. I have never considered that particular point, but I am sure they are not. I might say that the amount of export by Ontario Hydro to American companies and utilities is less than the amount we buy back in the run of a year. We make a healthy profit on this sale.

ELIMINATION OF FISHING LICENCE FEES

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): I have a question of the Minister of Lands and Forests. In view of the elimination of fishing licence fees, can the minister indicate if any cutback is contemplated in the enforcement staff of The Department of Lands and Forests regarding fishing laws and game laws?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I fail to understand why there should be a reduction in the number of conservation officers by the removal of the angling licences. I do not see why that should be brought about because the conservation officers still have to check on the number of fish caught, sizes and whether the anglers are resident or non-resident.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

TREATMENT FACILITIES FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Mr. MacKenzie: A question of the Minister of Health: Is the minister aware there are reported to be 100 crippled children in the Ottawa area not now receiving treatment because of lack of facilities? Is the minister aware these children may not receive treatment for three to five years if they have to wait until the proposed new children's hospital is completed? Will the minister endeavour to provide in the immediate future adequate temporary facilities if necessary for treatment of all crippled children?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I will take that question as notice and give a full report to the hon. member in the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Cochrane South.

SAFETY OF CLOSED MINES

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Yes Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs. Does the minister intend to take action this session whereby amendments will be made to The Mining Act to make sure that areas and municipalities where mines have finished operating are left in a safe condition, as requested by the town of Timmins in its brief to the natural resources committee last fall?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have no knowledge of this right at the moment, but I will check into it and report back.

Mr. Ferrier: As a supplementary, I wonder if the minister is aware that the previous minister has made a commitment that he would try to see that some action was taken in the very near future on this important matter.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I am not aware of that commitment, Mr. Speaker, but I will check on it.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Neither is the prior minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

FISHING WITHOUT LICENCES

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests. What does the minister intend to do concerning fishermen who were caught fishing without licences and prosecuted prior to the Treasurer's announcement on April 26?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I am not a member of the legal profession.

Mr. Ferrier: That is one thing in the minister's favour.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I think this is a matter—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I would say, Mr. Speaker, that I have discussed this with my own legal branch and they in turn are consulting The Department of the Attorney General in this matter.

Mr. Gaunt: Would the hon. minister inform the House as to the decision arrived at?

POLICE ACT ARBITRATORS

Mr. Peacock: A question of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General, Mr. Speaker. When does the Attorney General intend to establish the council of arbitrators under The Police Act as he proposed he would do during his visit to Windsor on government business recently?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No sir, I am being misinterpreted again, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gaunt: They are picking on the minister.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: But in any event, any such action would obviously require some statutory enactment. As a member of the Legislature I am sure the hon. member will be aware of the introduction of that bill if his attendance record keeps up.

Mr. Peacock: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: In appointing the arbitrator to inquire into the dispute between the Board of Commissioners of Police for Windsor and the Windsor Police Association, would the Attorney General have in mind the principles that would underlie such council of arbitrators in selecting the arbitrator in this instance?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure of the full import of the hon. member's question, but in respect to the comments that I made in Windsor, they were dealing more in respect to the province-wide situation rather than any particular situation in that locality.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Nipissing.

ONR EMPLOYEES' MEDICAL BENEFITS

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs.

Will the minister intervene in the unilateral decision of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission to stop the use of ONR Employees Medical Association as the administrator of the benefits under the agreement between the ONR and the employees?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I believe there is a transfer going on of the ONR from my department to the new Department of Transportation and Communications. Possibly the chairman of the ONR may want to comment on that particular matter. I do not know; I will leave it open to him.

Mr. A. Johnston (Parry Sound): Mr. Speaker, there are negotiations being carried on in respect to the member's question and I would ask that he leave that question for a few days until we finalize negotiations.

Mr. R. S. Smith: A supplementary to the member for Parry Sound, Mr. Speaker: Could I ask him if it is actually under negotiation or whether a decision has been made by the commission and sent by letter to the employees' association?

Mr. A. Johnston: A decision was made by management but the commission in its wisdom is studying the decision that was made in the hope that we may reconsider the decision of management.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. Ferrier: May I ask a supplementary?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Ferrier: In matters of this importance it is not desirable in terms of good management-labour relations that the unions be consulted in view of the fact that they were very happy with the medical arrangement they had with that plan?

Mr. A. Johnston: I would agree with the member's comments, yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

DREDGING OF ST. CLAIR RIVER

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management, regarding plans for the dredging of the St. Clair River announced April 14: What percentage of the mercury in the St. Clair River is estimated to be in the southeast bend cutoff channel, which is about to be dredged?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I will have to get that information for the hon. member. I did not realize that we announced that we were dredging the St. Clair River for mercury. I will have to get that information.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, while the minister is getting that information would he find out also if this is the place where the mercury concentration is the greatest?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia.

DOW CHEMICAL LAWSUIT

Mr. Bullbrook (Sarnia): The last question answered by the Attorney General refreshed my mind in connection with a question I directed to him about three weeks ago, and I am wondering if it is in order that I redirect it?

The question at that time was: Had he been properly quoted in connection with the Dow Chemical action as saying, relative to the constitutional question involving the bed of the river, "Let the fish sue us"?

Secondly, does that exemplify the attitude that the Province of Ontario took in connection with that suit?

Thirdly, what action or liaison was taken by this government, and in particular his department, to see if the federal government would join in this suit to resolve the constitutional obscurity involved?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am glad the hon. member has reminded me about that.

In answer to question number one the answer is no. In answer to question number two the answer is no, and in answer to question number three the federal government was perfectly aware of the intention to start an action in the manner and in the way in which an action was started.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary, are we to understand in this House that the quote in the Globe and Mail, of which the minister is aware, therefore is a misquote? And secondly, would the Attorney General answer directly as to whether he invited the federal government to join in the action as a co-plaintiff?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I am not too sure that the proper verb has been used there as far as "invited" is concerned. They were certainly aware of our intentions; they were certainly given a full opportunity to join in the action if they thought it necessary or feasible to do so.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Parkdale.

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, I have another supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: All right, a supplementary.

Mr. Bullbrook: It has been ruled in order before, for the member for York South, so may I direct a supplementary to the Minister of Energy and Resources Management, who seems to know more about this than the Attorney General?

Mr. Speaker: You may direct a question to the Minister of Energy and Resources Management. The minister does not have to answer it.

Mr. Bullbrook: Since the Attorney General is not aware of the question of the background of this matter relative to the involvement of the federal government, could the minister advise whether the federal government had been invited to become a co-plaintiff in connection with this action?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, the federal government, as the hon. Attorney General indicated, was aware of what we were doing. Correspondence outlining certain proposals was sent to the federal government last fall and they indicated in their answer that they were not prepared to enter into a legal action at that time.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary, did the federal government take any position in connection with what I call the constitutional obscurity?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Not to my knowledge, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Parkdale.

PROTECTION OF TENANTS

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General: Does the Attorney General intend to introduce legislation in the near future amending The Landlord and Tenant Act in order to protect tenants so that a utility like hydro cannot be cut off by the landlord?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated to a previous questioner, when legislation is introduced in the House the hon. member will learn of it along with everyone else.

Mr. Peacock: But the attendance of both of us depends—

Mr. Trotter: By way of a supplementary question, as the minister who is responsible for the administration of The Landlord and Tenant Act, does the minister think it is proper that a landlord should cut off utilities for the tenants?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: If the hon. member is asking for a personal opinion, the answer there certainly is no. But whether this is a safeguard that can be written into a piece of legislation like The Landlord and Tenant Act—

Mr. Trotter: It is in the bylaw.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: —is something that is quite different.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre.

DISCOUNT POLICIES OF CAR MAKERS

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): A question of the Minister of Public Works: In view of the fact that at least two car manufacturers in Canada, one of which is North American-controlled, continue to have a fleet discount policy, is there any need for the province to subsidize the "big three" to an amount estimated by the Premier a week or 10 days ago at $750,000?

An hon. member: By whom?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, in the first place I think I made it clear last week when I made a statement about this that the figure of $750,000 was based on the tenders received by the manufacturers in the last call last fall, which were manufacturers' suggested retail list prices, and that I did not know of anybody who went in off the street, individually or collectively, and bought a car at the ticket price.

I can only say what I said last week, that we are meeting with the manufacturers and the dealers and will be discussing with them what their proposals will be and that at the present time we have authorized tenders to be called on—I think it is 140—vehicles which are emergently needed by the OPP and that we will be accepting bids as we have in the past, for vehicles from any manufacturer providing they meet the specifications which the operating departments require.

Mr. Deacon: A supplementary?

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has now expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. Villeneuve from the standing committee on procedural affairs presented the committee's report which was read as follows and adopted:

Your committee has carefully examined the following applications for private Acts and finds the notices, as published in each case, sufficient:

Cadmus Associates Limited.

The city of North Bay.

Morton Terminal Limited.

The town of Burlington, provided that the bill is not considered by the private bills committee before May 25.

The village of Wasaga Beach.

The township of Pelee.

The towns of Burlington and Oakville re the county of Halton.

The city of Guelph re the Guelph General Hospital.

The city of Peterborough.

Presenting reports.

Mr. O. F. Villeneuve (Glengarry): Mr. Speaker, on Friday last I presented the report of the human resources committee. As this report was worded precisely in the terms of the motion moved at the committee by the member for Parkdale and passed by the committee, the opposition being in the majority of those present, I find some difficulty in understanding the objections by the Leader of the Opposition and others.

However, I am sure that the members of the committee would have no objection, if the member for Parkdale does not, to rephrasing the report to clarify its obvious intention to read as follows: "Your committee asks that the question of day care be referred to it."

I point out that in the terms of the motion establishing standing committees, the committee already has authority to send for such persons as it sees fit relating to any subject referred to it by the House.

I therefore move the adoption of the report in its amended form, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Villeneuve from the standing human resources committee presented the committee's report as follows:

Your committee asks that the question of daycare be referred to it.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to make our position abundantly clear for the sake of the chairman of the human resources committee and others: We in opposition feel that it should not be necessary for the committee to come before the House to get some kind of approval, rubber-stamp or otherwise, for the Premier to declare it is in order or out of order, or whatever it may be—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: —and that they proceed with the business that is obviously theirs if they have any independent responsibility whatsoever.

An hon. member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nixon: The wording of the first motion was obviously in order as it was put in the committee and for the consideration of the committee under the direction of the chairman that the daycare centres be examined and certain experts brought forward by name in the resolution be called before the committee.

But surely it is not our place, as members of the Legislature, nor is it the place of the leader of the government, to give his personal approval as to the day-to-day business of this committee which must maintain its independence. Mr. Speaker, in clarifying our position—if it needs any clarification—I say that frankly I still think that the committee should have the power to call in or to examine daycare centres without referring it to this House at all.

Surely, this is not necessary under the new approach to the committee. As it is we are not, of course, going to stand in its way. We believe, on this side, that the committee's usefulness is substantially impaired since they are required to get some sort of special permission from the government whenever they want to take any initiatives on their own.

An hon. member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pitman: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might just add my comment to this?

Mr. Nixon: The Premier is the man who said the committee was out of order.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am not.

Mr. Pitman: It seems to me the government has reached the height of ludicrousness to have to come to this Legislature to deal with a subject which is obviously within the purview of this particular committee.

Surely it will not be necessary from now on for the chairman to come here? Perhaps the Prime Minister might want to reply. Surely it will not be necessary for the chairman of that committee to come here every week to tell the Legislature that we are going to examine something which is under one of the departments over which this particular committee has been given jurisdiction, or has been given some degree of concern?

Perhaps the Prime Minister may like to clarify that right now so that we do not get into this kind of silliness week after week.

Hon. E. Dunlop (Minister without Portfolio): They have no jurisdiction!

Mr. Lawlor: Just like a mother hen.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Broiler!

Mr. Lawlor: A broiler, all right.

Mr. Pitman: Oh, come on!

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): What broiler?

Mr. Pitman: Get the government off this hook.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the report be received and adopted?

Report received and adopted.

Mr. Singer: The Prime Minister leads on fearlessly.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: That is right!

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves, seconded by Mr. Carruthers, that the estimates of expenditures for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972 of the two departments hereinafter named be referred to standing committees as follows:

The Department of Energy and Resources Management to the natural and physical resources committee.

The Department of Public Works to the estimates committee.

Also that unlimited substitution of members be permitted on all standing committees while considering estimates referred to them, provided that the chairman is informed of any set substitutions at the start of each meeting.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Nixon: Certainly, we are glad that it has been that unlimited substitution in the committee that is going to examine the estimates has been made clear, but what I am concerned with is why it should be necessary to refer an estimate to anything but the estimates committee. Since we cannot have unlimited substitution, I do not see that it makes any difference, unless it is contemplated that we would have two estimates being examined by committee at the same time as the House itself would be in operation.

As a matter of fact, while I am on my feet, I would like to say that while I know there was consultation among the whips in this matter, still it does not seem reasonable that we are going to undertake the examination of Lands and Forests estimates in the House this afternoon and in the committee that is being established, or at least having these matters referred to it by this motion, that Energy and Resources Management, a very closely allied topic, will be examined, in another place.

I think it would be much better if it might be possible for the House leader and the whips who are concerned with the ordering of this business, to try and get subjects that are not quite so closely allied, so that the individuals closely concerned with both departments are not going to be torn in their responsibility.

Mr. Peacock: Mr. Speaker, I too would like to join with the Leader of the Opposition in expressing acknowledgement for the part of the motion that allows or permits substitution of members on the committee while it is dealing with estimates. But I am not so sure the government intends to prevent concurrent sittings of the committees to which the estimates are referred. I hope it does indeed not intend to have the Public Works estimates, now referred to the estimates committee, and Energy and Resources Management now referred to the natural and physical resources committee heard concurrently while the House is also considering Lands and Forests.

Last session when an estimate was referred to committee that estimate was dealt with before the same committee or another undertook a second estimate. I hope that will be the case hereafter in this session and that Public Works and Energy and Resources Management will not be dealt with concurrently outside the House. I do recognize that the committee may consider an estimate concurrently while the House is sitting.

I would like to remark, Mr. Speaker, that this motion comes just minutes before the committee on natural and physical resources, I believe, begins its consideration of The Department of Energy and Resources Management. That was the reason that last Friday I raised with the Speaker the question as to whether the order referring estimates should be put before the House then, so that there was some formality to the notice which the government House leader had given us by way only of a note last week.

I would ask the government House leader if he would indicate to us, during this debate if possible, the government's intention with regard to other estimates going out from the House for consideration in committee?

I would like to remind the government House leader that we have only a limited amount of time before us for the consideration of estimates. There is an overall limit of 90 sittings of the House. Moreover, within that period there is a limit on the referral of estimates outside the House to within a period of no later than 30 sitting days following the introduction of the budget.

That puts another limit, of another 30 days, on the work of committees on estimates. It would be helpful to members on all sides of the House, Mr. Speaker, if the government House leader would indicate now if possible what other estimates he wishes to refer from the House to the standing committees.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there is merit in the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition and by the member for Peterborough and—

Mr. Peacock: Windsor West.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: —and it is not, I may say first of all, the intention to have two committees sitting at the same time. The intention would be to have the estimates of one department being dealt with here in the House, and one before a committee. The reason for the mention in the motion which I just made with respect to the estimates of Public Works, is they were not referred to in the motion which was adopted by the House on March 31, when the standing committees were set up.

In that motion there was also the paragraph saying committees numbered one to four inclusive may have no conflict of membership with one another; nor may committees numbers five, six and seven have a conflict of membership with one another.

There was some confusion as to whether there would be substitutions. It is my understanding that when estimates of any department are referred to a committee that committee becomes a committee to deal with its estimates. It becomes a committee of estimates and the substitution takes place there. That is clear, I think, in the Votes and Proceedings of April 6; and it appeared on page 32 of the Votes and Proceedings in the report of the striking committee, "substitutions are to be permitted in committees one to five only when considering estimates"—

Mr. Nixon: Why is the minister moving?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Why is the member thinking of Thursday?

Hon. Mr. Wishart:—which makes it clear when it was raised here in the House last week, “such substitutions to be announced to the chairman by substitute members at the opening of a meeting.”

There seemed to be considerable confusion when I announced on Thursday last that the estimates of The Department of Energy and Resources Management would go to the natural and physical resources committee. Members of the opposition, including the Leader of the Opposition, I believe, stood up and questioned—

Mr. Nixon: All the minister has to do is make it clear.

An hon. member: Well read it!

Mr. T. P. Reid: It was not clear to the member?

Mr. Nixon: The minister is now offering an amendment, for heaven's sake.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: My statement was that I did not have the record in front of me, but that it was all on the record.

Mr. T. P. Reid: The member for Simcoe East (Mr. G. E. Smith) got up and contradicted the minister.

Mr. Nixon: Now he is offering an amendment.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Well perhaps my motion today will set everybody right.

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, prior to the vote, I am wondering if you could clarify what explicitly constitutes a meeting? I recall last year having some misunderstanding in connection with this—“substitution is called for before each meeting.” Is that at the beginning of the daily session or does that apply to any of the evening sessions also?

Mr. Speaker: That is with the standing committees that are dealing with estimates outside of the House—

Mr. Bullbrook: Perhaps I have not made my question clear. Is the beginning of a meeting, for which substitution is permissible, in the afternoon? Or could we also have a beginning in the evening where there can be an additional substitution?

Mr. Speaker: I would think that if the standing committee has convened earlier in the day and recesses and they convene again later on, it is a continuation of the same meeting and the substitution should have been made to the chairman of that committee prior to the commencement of the afternoon or earlier sitting.

Mr. Bullbrook: I am glad we have that ruling, sir. Thank you.

Mr. Singer: Except that he cannot rule because it is handled by the committee, which is independent.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

MUNICIPALITY OF METROPOLITAN TORONTO ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. minister have some explanation he wishes to make? Right.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Minister of Municipal Affairs): A short one, Mr. Speaker. The bill deals with three items and it provides for legislation to permit the establishment of the proposed Yonge Street Mall in Metropolitan Toronto. The metropolitan corporation wishes to establish that mall for a seven-day period this year.

The limitation on the amount that may be spent in any year for the reception of persons of distinction is removed; and thirdly, the restriction on the sale of liquors in metropolitan parks, which applies through the provisions of The Public Parks Act, is removed. The provisions of The Liquor Licence Act will continue as before.

Mr. T. P. Reid: Does that include Queen's Park?

EXPROPRIATION ACT, 1968-1969

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Expropriation Act, 1968-1969.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, the essential points dealt with in this bill are firstly, the method by which costs will be taxed—that is costs of the Land Compensation Board; and secondly the jurisdiction and the date upon which that jurisdiction will be exercised by the Ontario Land Compensation Board.

Mr. Singer: Does that one get royal assent today?

WAGES ACT

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Wages Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, this bill repeals a couple of provisions in The Wages Act which the government believes should now be repealed. One is designed to ensure that at least $2.50 per day for the wage earner was exempted after the attachment had been made, and another which removes the exemption from seizure where the debt is for board or lodging or where the debtor has no dependent; and finally, we are now carrying through to the ultimate the abolition of wage assignments with the one exception still remaining for credit union wage assignments.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE ACT,

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves second reading of Bill 2, An Act to amend The Administration of Justice Act, 1968.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): I have a few comments on the principle of this bill, Mr. Speaker. The bill in the first instance removes the word "indictable" so that summary conviction offences now permit people outside of the province to be brought back into the province for that particular kind of offence.

I would like the minister, if possible, to indicate at the end of the debate what range or depth he intends to introduce into that measure. In other words, what is the raison d'être of this legislation? What kind of summary conviction offence has he got in mind for bringing people from, say, Vancouver to Toronto at public expense? Is it infractions of The Highway Traffic Act or failure to file governmental returns of various kinds or liquor offences under the peculiar power and jurisdiction of the Province of Ontario? Just what is the purpose in this regard?

In any event, I would counsel the government, if I may do so. The types of offences involved basically under Ontario summary conviction jurisdiction are relatively minor in nature and very often only procedural, and what the real intent of that particular area in this legislation might be puzzles me, although it does not completely escape me that there could be circumstances in which it would be of some utility.

Secondly, on the general overall purport of this legislation, I have wondered about the necessity of altering the wording from The Administration of Justice Act, which was amended in 1968 and 1969. I thought it covered the ground pretty well, but again the minister may enlighten me as to why he feels it is necessary to substitute the words "under any Act" in section 7 of the present legislation.

If I may go a little afield, I think that possibly the reason may be that he wants to bring direct thought to bear on a diverse panoply of legislation going from interpreters, court reporters, the various county Acts, The Supreme Court Act and all this other legislation, so that when he says "under any Act" he has given it a greater designation than exists perhaps in the present legislation.

If that is so, I would like the minister to turn his mind to the necessity of all the rest of the legislation, or pretty well all the rest of the legislation, coming before us later on this afternoon. In other words, my claim is that under the section as amended or even as it was prior to amendment, he has all the range, power and authority that he needs to set up the fee schedule for interpreters, for court reporters, for jurors, for witnesses in criminal actions in the courts of the Province of Ontario.

Why does the minister feel it is necessary, having this section in effect and in force, to come forward with other legislation during the afternoon referring back? This confers power in a very broad way, requiring the payment of fees for anything required or authorized under any Act to be done by any person in the administration of justice and prescribing the amount.

When we get to, say, The Crown Witnesses Act, we refer back to this Act, which I consider redundant and unnecessary. But perhaps the minister can say that there is some legal formality that must be gone through in order to achieve that.

My third point on this legislation is that I would like the minister to explain to me the explanatory portion on section 2—it is not part of the legislation—where it says that the amendment of section 2 "enables fees payable by the Crown or the public for the purposes of various other Acts, to be prescribed by one scale." The little words, "by one scale," intrigue me. By what scale is the minister thinking of? What is the one scale? Is it maybe to make his task a little easier? Is it in the case of, say, court reporters, that irrespective of whether these reporters are dealing with tribunals set up under the government, various agencies under which quasi-judicial proceedings take place, the courts themselves, or by way of perhaps special examination in a wide range of forums to which people appear, that there would be a uniformity of rights for reporters under these contexts, and the same applicable to, say interpreters, the same applicable to witnesses? Is that the intent of the words "by one scale"; or is there some other notion?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to participate before the minister replies on second reading? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, just by way of a further and fuller explanation, I hope, than on first reading: I am sure the hon. members are aware that under the present legislation the director of public prosecutions may authorize the expenses of bringing a person charged with an indictable offence from a place outside or in Ontario to the place of trial in Ontario.

In the past there has been no statutory authority in existence which would provide for payment of such expenses in an instance where an accused person for a summary conviction offence has to be brought to trial from another jurisdiction. This will permit that. The provisions of section 1 of the new bill remove these restrictions and allow the director of public prosecutions to authorize the payment of such expenses, irrespective of the type of offence committed by the accused.

This authority, we feel, under motor accidents; in case arising under The Juvenile Delinquents Act (Canada); in cases, for instance, under The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act and other similar types of provincial legislation. This fills a very real hole and a very real gap that exists in these pieces of provincial legislation at the moment. It also removes financial considerations by a Crown attorney in matters of election of appropriate procedures where he is authorized to prosecute an offence either as an indictable or under summary conviction procedure.

My hon. friend says that power should be used very sparingly. I disagree. If the question of justice requires the payment of expenses for people to be brought back here, then I think that is an element that is a consideration that happily we should be able to avoid and this is the purpose of the legislation.

In relation to his second point, The Administration of Justice Act, 1968, in clause (b) of section 7 authorized the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to make regulations providing for the payment of fees and expenses for services in connection with the administration of justice. Certain regulations in this respect were made in June, 1968, with effect from January 1, 1968, with regard only to fees and expenses arising from the now-revoked Administration of Justice Expenses Act.

The amendment under this bill sir, will enable fees payable by the Crown or the public for the purposes of various other Acts dealing with the administration of justice to come under one schedule, to correlate all of these matters together, to bring them under one scale so that these matters, first of all, will be handy in one schedule. I certainly believe that in the past, in attempting to relate some of these fees payable under a multitude of pieces of legislation, it is far handier for the practitioners, for the administrators and for the people who get paid the fees to have the money in one place, available from one statute and the words "fixed by one scale," mean exactly that. For instance, for court reporters, no matter what the tribunal, no matter what the type of trial, there will be one fixed scale for them under the legislation.

The other pieces of legislation that we are going to be dealing with this afternoon in the main relate back to this particular bill, Mr. Speaker, in that the question of fees and correlating them under one schedule under one Act, one regulation under one Act, relates to witness fees and expenses, jurors' fees and expenses, justice of the peace fees and expenses, and fees and expenses arising from coroners' investigations and inquests. I hope that deals with the enquiries of my friend.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, there are some questions I would ask which I thought it improper to ask on second reading. I wonder if it could go through Committee of the Whole House.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I have no objection.

Mr. Speaker: This bill shall then be referred to Committee of the Whole House.

Agreed to.

COUNTY JUDGES ACT

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves second reading of Bill 3, An Act to amend The County Judges Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: This party has no particular objection to the appointment of the new judges, sir. They are probably very necessary. This is as true of the county court scale as it is true of other areas of judges in this province—as the Attorney General is learning in a rather devastating way these days insofar as the provincial judges are concerned.

Switching of jurisdictions will help this whole area very greatly, but until this is all done I cannot see how this party can take exception to the new judges.

More importantly, perhaps, is the business about fees for court reporters. As I say, this begins a series of bills where the levying of fees and the setting up of scales are contemplated in the legislation.

If I may just make reference to Justice McRuer at 810 on this matter, he says, in his conclusions to his chapter on court reporting:

The whole process of court reporting is in a very confused and disorderly state. There is no overall plan for employment, remuneration, discipline and promotion of reporters. The problems created by this condition are serious and require a comprehensive approach to their solution. There has to be an efficient and satisfactory system for reporting the proceedings of the court in those tribunals whose proceedings are reported. There must be a complete reorganization of the system.

I am pointing this out, in making some emphatic use of Justice McRuer on this occasion, for the future delectation and mind-broadening aspects of the Attorney General. One cannot take exception to the legislation as to the fee schedule, but without a thorough reorganization this move is not going to be particularly beneficial.

As the Attorney General mentioned earlier, the alterations that have been made, or the regulations passed under The Administration of Justice Act of three years ago were the only regulations that were passed under that Act. The rest of the panoply, the rest of the machinery of justice has lain fallow since that time, and I think quite questionably, because the purpose in bringing in the Act was to begin reformulation and reform within the courts themselves. The only regulations that were passed; regulation 104/71, particularly sub-paragraph 4 thereof; had to do with fees and expenses in general: "Shorthand court reporters will be given $7 an hour with a maximum per diem rate of $35."

There are other provisions made in regulations 112 and 130 but they do not touch upon these matters, so really in effect very little has been done to rectify the iniquitous conditions, if one reads Justice McRuer's words, that exist. I suppose the Attorney General, even as a lagging witness to the processes of justice as the new boy, can be commended to a point in bringing in the changes that are so requisite in these fee schedules and in the reformulation of the courts and the way in which these offices of the courts operate.

I think this is as far as I want to go. I had some misgivings, as I will under The Justices of the Peace Act, about the problem that had arisen with court reporters who, under their documents of office, are permitted to charge fees to the general public, having performed their basic duty to the courts and no doubt to the general public and to the legal professions, at a scale that is determined by them.

I hope the legislation herein envisages the scale that will be mandatory and binding even in that context, because the Minister of Justice has deliberately preserved the sections of The Public Service Act, and I suppose those other areas in the law of Ontario, where reporters can charge fees for their transcriptions without any obligation to pay them over to the Treasurer of Ontario but simply to pocket them.

I say there is nothing wrong, it seems to me, in their being able so to do. What is wrong is for them to be suzerains over their own fee schedule; that must be limited by legislation. They cannot charge, in my opinion, whatever the market will bear in order to extract from the profession, and therefore from the client. The cost of justice is high enough in this province without permitting abuses of that kind and I hope this legislation covers that specific point also.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, I think the member for Lakeshore touched on something that deserves much more elaborate attention. That is the whole question of the adequacy of court reporting in our criminal courts, in our civil courts, before our administrative boards and so on. I do not think they can have escaped the attention of the minister the recent remarks made by Mr.

Master McBride about fees charged by court reporters.

One of the matters that has caused very great concern is the adequate supply of court reporters, not only in the criminal process but throughout the whole process of the administration of justice—and I do not omit, in fact I deliberately include, the proceedings before administrative boards and so forth.

Criminal appeals often are delayed until a transcript is made available. This goes through all levels of our criminal courts. Sometimes it is very difficult, Mr. Speaker, to obtain with any expedition at all a copy of the transcript of a criminal trial. The practice unfortunately has grown of having to pay extra fees for a hurried transcript, which makes no sense to me at all. If the transcript is there, or if the words are on tape or on some kind of machine, and in the normal course of events it is needed for further proceedings, I do not think that the wealthy litigant or the larger legal firm, which is perhaps prepared to lay these moneys out, should get greater service than the poor litigant.

Some of the problems we have had with people being held in our jails pending an appeal have resulted from this very thing. I would have hoped, I think with Mr. McRuer, that somewhere soon—and perhaps this is too soon—we would have heard from the Attorney General that we have advanced sufficiently far in our study of new techniques in this field that there could be a standardized system of better reporting proceedings before our various tribunals.

I know there has been a great deal of experimentation. The Bar Association has studied this; The Law Society of Upper Canada has studied it. The extent to which these things have been successful, I am not sure nor whether or not such people as IBM or the large computer companies who might be able to assist us have been consulted.

I think, Mr. Speaker, it is becoming increasingly difficult to properly service the whole course of administration of justice when we have what is apparently a dying profession that is so badly needed, which is not properly servicing our system. There seems to be little encouragement or enthusiasm to entice young people into the profession of court reporting. The number of people who are expert at it is increasingly diminishing and some of the newer persons who are attracted, perhaps are not as skilled as some of the people who are getting older and who are going to leave that profession in due course.

I think this is a matter of very very serious consideration that I hope the Attorney General plans to give his immediate attention to. He does very little in here. He is patching up one little hole, and there is nothing wrong with this insofar as it goes, but insofar as the whole course of the administration of justice is concerned I can foresee very little real improvement.

The faults are just so obvious and they are known to every practising member of the profession—the ability to obtain transcripts reasonably and quickly and promptly, the ability to have reporters available, all these things, it is a problem that permeates our whole system of justice in this jurisdiction and in many others. I know other jurisdictions worry about it as well. In fairness, I cannot berate the Attorney General for not coming in with a package that is going to clean up all these problems, but it is a constant source of worry and it gets worse as time goes on and this is not going to do a great deal to improve it.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, as far as the court reporters are concerned, I must say that I agree with much of what has been said here this afternoon, although I will not agree with the hon. member for Lakeshore that the whole system of court reporting in this province is in an inequitable stage. I will merely say I think the system is ripe for reform, and one bite at a time.

This is stage one of a reform because, as has been pointed out by the hon. member for Downsview, you have the conundrum here, as we have it in so many other areas, where in spite of the fact there is a great deal of flexibility in respect of the fees charged by reporters, that is in some cases they are charging just exactly what the traffic will bear, and perhaps in many cases even more. Nevertheless, in spite of the very high incomes that some of them have, we are having a great deal of difficulty getting competent help in this field.

Obviously there has been a great deal of experimentation over the last few years. I was interested, as I visited the criminal court just last Friday morning at the old City Hall, to note there that just about all the court reporters are now using the stenomat system. I am not too sure that this is the answer. I do not know enough about it. It is an improvement, obviously, but it may not be the ultimate. The steno typing system was used for a while and there are grave defects in that as well.

Certainly, I would agree that the court reporting in this jurisdiction as in most other jurisdictions is one that is ripe for reform. One thing that we have to clear up is the whole fee situation. We should standardize this and make it a little more equitable; and this is exactly what we hope to do in this particular bill.

I can assure the hon. members of this House that it is not only the day-to-day practitioners of the law who have difficulty in getting transcripts. I find that the Attorney General, so that he can properly decide in some matters which cases should be appealed and which cases should not be appealed, is also having difficulty getting transcripts of the evidence of some of the criminal trials.

In respect of the county court judges, this bill authorizes an additional county court judge to the county of Wentworth, and three additional judges having jurisdiction anywhere in Ontario.

I appeal to the members of the House, sir, to let this bill, if they will, go through to third reading, in the hope that we can get it through as quickly as possible.

Last week, the annual bill at Ottawa respecting judges was introduced. I find to my horror that the federal government will not include in the annual bill any increases in judges in any county or district court anywhere across the country until the enabling bill at the provincial level has not only passed second reading and third reading but also has had royal assent. Therefore, if we are going to get these judges at all this year, I am afraid that we have to go full steam ahead with this particular bill. Why they cannot take it as a matter of good intention on our part—

Mr. Singer: They know the government too well.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: —once it has gone through second reading, I do not know, but they will not go that far. If we could, sir, because I do not believe there is any objection to the increase in the number of judges from any part of the House at all, I do believe we can talk about court reporters and the whole question of the fees in relation to court reporters under other legislation. I would appeal to the House to permit this to go through without going through the necessity of the committee stage.

Mr. Singer: We might even hear about it in the minister's estimates.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I am quite prepared to do that if the Attorney General will permit me asking one question through you, Mr. Speaker. The question has to do with those reporters who are salaried but whose terms of appointment do not prohibit them from taking extra fees. Is this regulation going to set a limitation upon what they may charge?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Only the broadest request has gone out so far from the minister's office in respect of these regulations relating to the fee. I want to see them standardized no matter what the tribunals, no matter what the jurisdictions, no matter what the level of the courts are concerned.

Mr. Lawlor: No matter who they are going to?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I simply have not had the discussions with my officials yet in that detailed a manner respecting what these actual fees should be. This is still a matter that is being formulated; or perhaps has already been formulated within the department but it has not yet come back to me.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, if I may just for a moment, we will get this clear.

Mr. Speaker: We are out of order, but if it is a quick question, I think the minister will answer.

Mr. Lawlor: It is more in the form of a statement. All the member for Downsview and myself are doing is we pointed out the abuse; you are aware of it and this is the thing we want clarified and corrected in this legislation.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I appreciate that. Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed to.

CROWN WITNESSES ACT

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves second reading of Bill 4, An Act to amend The Crown Witnesses Act.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, Bill 4, with respect to Crown witnesses, affects criminal proceedings only. The present scale of fees is notoriously inadequate as set out at 861 of McRuer;

Witnesses other than qualified experts attending criminal trials at the instance of the Crown and the Supreme Court, general sessions of the peace, county court, judges criminal court, before a magistrate trying an indictable offence or conducting a preliminary inquiry, and in proceedings before a grand jury, receive $6 a day, 10 cents a mile travelling allowance, and up to $8 per night living expenses, if they cannot return home at the end of the day.

It goes on further down in summary conviction cases before a magistrate or a justice of the peace—as they then were—

Witnesses receive up to $4 a day and 10 cents a mile. There is no provision for any further relief in exceptional cases.

This legislation, I trust, is designed to correct that fallacy and the inadequacy of fees, which only reacts against the working principles in the operation of justice. I would refer the Attorney General to the fifth recommendation of McRuer in Chapter 56, having to do with witness fees. It simply says: "The scale of witness fees should be the same for all courts and tribunals."

I would trust that is precisely what he means when he says in his headnote: "Where the amounts will be made uniform with fees payable by the Crown in other similar matters."

Certainly this is restrictive to a certain range of courts, but has he—and I asked this question about another matter—envisage a different hierarchy or scale of fees for different levels of courts and different kinds of tribunals, or is it his intention to bring in a scale of witness fees which is the same as recommended by McRuer? Does he accept or does he reject McRuer under this particular heading?

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, the business in section 1 of the new bill, subsection 3, where the Crown attorney with the approval of the director of public prosecutions may order payment in certain extraordinary circumstances for the preparation of the trial case or for preparing any document or article. I wonder why he feels that is an amendment from—I think the wording previously was that it had to do with the office of the Crown but not the director of public prosecutions—whether he feels that is necessary? Can this discretion not be left to be reposed in the Crown attorneys themselves? Why do you have to go to the director of public prosecutions—an extra bureaucratic step—in order to get approval for matters of this kind? Are our Crown attorneys not sufficiently trustworthy, sufficiently men of integrity, and of knowledge as to what is needed and what is not needed in the presentation of the case to make that determination on their own hook?

Thirdly, if it was felt necessary, why not give the presiding judge that power? Surely he is closer to the evidence, closer to the case, more able to decide on the spot as to whether or not there was legitimacy in the preparation; whether the preparation contributed to the solution of the case or whether the document was really a necessary document. Why do you go off to the director of public prosecutions under that head?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to enter the debate? If not, the hon. Attorney General.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, this is one of the series of bills relating to fees. Most of these matters really were discussed under one or other of the prior bills. Again, it is a question of the type of events here. Up until now we have only been able to pay witness fees and expenses in respect of indictable offences. This clears it up.

The big question here, of course, is that at the moment witnesses called at the instance of the Crown in summary conviction proceedings are paid at a fee of $4 per diem from the public funds of Ontario. To put it mildly, that payment is rather out of date. This will remove that differentiation between indictable and summary proceedings. The whole point, as I said earlier, is to standardize these fees. The present rates in respect of indictable offences are fixed at the moment in the schedule to The Crown Witnesses Act. They were last revised in 1956. These are pretty archaic in relation to today's economy. They are out of date and we want to bring them up to date.

The proposed amendment provides that witness fees and expenses under all criminal proceedings at the instance of the Crown, whether with regard to either indictable or summary conviction offences, be fixed under the provision of The Administration of Justice Act by regulation at uniform rates. We want to take a look at the total package and put them in a far more flexible way under the regulation so that they can be dealt with as a total package.

This amendment also clarifies the authority of Crown attorneys and the director of public prosecutions in instances where compensation should be granted, in addition to the established fees and expenses, to a witness. This is in addition to those established fees and expenses to a witness, and it is obviously the view of the department and the minister and the government, otherwise it would not be before you, that we feel that there should be the extra safeguard of the approval of the director of public prosecutions in this matter.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed to.

JURORS ACT

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves second reading of Bill 5, An Act to amend The Jurors Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, as I read Bill 5 I wonder if the present incumbent of the office of Attorney General has seriously considered the kite flown by his predecessor about doing away with juries? And perhaps we could have the benefit of his opinion in this very serious matter as this bill proceeds through, or perhaps we are to take it that the storm stirred up by his predecessor when he flew that kite has been sufficient to set that problem aside for an indefinite period?

That would be my second guess. I would think that would be a more logical thing. Perhaps the Attorney General when he comes to address himself to this bill could comment on that? The inclusion of the words "drugless practitioner" is interesting. I suppose it is somewhat in keeping with the exemptions presently there.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I have got another one.

Mr. Singer: I am sorry, the Attorney General is saying—

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, the member is on the wrong one.

Mr. Singer: Am I on the wrong one? Bill 5—The Jurors Act. Is that not the one we are doing?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, I am sorry. He is right.

Mr. Singer: Is the Attorney General with me? We are doing the same bill?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes.

Mr. Singer: Good. Drugless practitioners. Is there a Drugless Practitioners Act in the province?

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Yes.

Mr. Singer: There is? And that is defined, is it?

Mr. J. Renwick: That is right.

Mr. Singer: We can identify a drugless practitioner. Is there any necessity in this bill, for instance, to relate the definition sections with the applicable statutes? I suppose we can define with reasonable certainty a physician, a surgeon, a dental surgeon and so on, but I was just wondering if there might be a necessity of having cross-references in the definition?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: My reason for interrupting the hon. member is that if he wants to talk about more professions in here I intend moving an amendment. I just thought I would give him notice.

Mr. Singer: Give us the amendment first.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: All I really want to do is add practicing optometrists as well.

Mr. Singer: That of course changes the whole concept of the statutes, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Well, I thought if the hon. member was going to take a whack at me about drugless practitioners I should give him the opportunity now of taking a whack at me in regard to practicing optometrists.

Mr. J. Renwick: What about the stockbrokers?

Mr. Singer: Yes, and what about the friends of my colleague here from Huron-Bruce—chiropractors—being included in that? Would that not be logical?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Is a drugless practitioner not a chiropractor?

Mr. Singer: He is very concerned as always with the wellbeing of various segments of our community and he has expressed great concern about chiropractors.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Drugless practitioner.

Mr. J. Renwick: Drugless practitioner.

Mr. Singer: Is a chiropractor a drugless practitioner? I just wondered, Mr. Speaker, whether or not there might be some kind of cross-reference, because the automatic definition as contained in The Jurors Act might not necessarily refer to the other statutes that bear that name.

The second thing is that I see we are not going to do very much about grand juries at the moment, and certainly some of us and Mr. McRuer have some concern about the effectiveness of the grand jury system at all.

Mr. J. Renwick: The member wants them abolished, does he?

Mr. Singer: Yes I do. In fact if the hon. member for Riverdale wants to I will give him a ready reference to some of my earlier speeches, and with pleasure he can read them.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: How about ordinary juries?

Mr. Singer: I was wondering, Mr. Speaker, since we are in the hour—

Mr. J. Renwick: That's a change from the past session!

Mr. Singer: I find great difficulty talking above the nattering of the hon. member for Riverdale. If he would be quiet for a moment we could proceed.

I am just wondering if this represents the total consideration of the Attorney General insofar as the grand jury system is concerned? The new Attorney General—and granted he is substantially lacking in experience in this field—seems to answer none of our questions in the House. He recently tabled a very large tome dealing with coroners' courts with the announcement that he does not intend to introduce any legislation.

I just wonder if he has in mind any genuine legal reforms. He is tidying up a few loose ends here. I wonder whether or not he might have any thoughts about the reformation or even the abolition of the grand jury system?

Mr. J. Renwick: —destruction of the individual's rights!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: You anticipated me, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I thought the hon. member was on his feet previously.

Mr. Lawlor: He is trying to refuel.

The recommendation of McRuer, under the heading in this situation which is 7 of chapter 56, is: "Jury fees should be raised to provide adequate compensation for wage earners requested to render jury service." He has considerable portions there and I do not know if you are going to place your emphasis upon just drugless practitioners, Mr. Speaker, or upon practising drugless practitioners. It is terribly important as to the adjectives that are going to be used in this and the exclusions. There are 23—

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: That is fully practising drugless practitioners.

Mr. Lawlor: That is fully practising—I think we will have to move an amendment to that effect.

There are 23 different categories of people under the Jurists Act who are presently excluded or permitted not to attend upon jury nor have jury duty. Adding to the list—I do not know if that is a good principle, I rather suspect it is not, I would like to hear more reasoning behind it. The wider the swath of individuals called for jury service, the greater involvement in a fundamental duty of citizenship.

This exclusion of individuals, I suppose, is theoretically on the ground that the duty they are doing as drugless practitioners, actually practising or not, is greater in terms of the public weal than the benefits they are conferring or the necessities of the day, greater than that of exercising their duties as citizens. I mean if you have got a bit of Greek mentality you would say that there is not any higher responsibility, that being a juror is the primary one. That is what they did all day in Athens you know, they heard cases, the whole citizen body, and made judgements and cast stones. This is the—

Mr. Singer: Did not include the slaves.

Mr. Lawlor: Nevertheless, for those who were not slaves, the most civilized portion of the population perhaps, this was how they preoccupied themselves in that particular regime, which was—whatever the natterings of the member for Downsview may be—some-what a higher mentality on the whole than preoccupies the citizenry around here these days.

The recommendation number seven, therefore, should be brought into complete effect.

I will not go over the terms of the fees paid in Ontario to jurors. They are gratuitously low, if that is the word, $10 a day. Again, I think the minister will agree that an updating and a reform in this particular area is vitally necessary. I have only one reservation about the legislation and that has to do with payments to justices of the peace, the terms of releasing jurors and the terms of empanelling jurors.

This seems to me to run directly adverse to the recommendation of McRuer and we will come to it in a few moments, about justices of the peace generally; namely, they ought to be salaried, period. They ought not to be dependent upon funds coming from some outside source or for some incidental and relatively petty duty such as empanelling jurors and what not.

They get paid some ridiculously small stipend for performing that function. It is an antiquated carry-over from earlier history in this province, and why you seek to perpetuate it in your gleaming, if not glittering, legislation, strikes me as a failure of nerve, as a failure to move ahead and abolish the collection of them.

There is a plethora of these little fees that are hanging out all over the place, which is a way of the justice of the peace currying favour with people in authority and what not, to get these little tasks and pick up an extra emolument on the side. Why do we not grow up and have a thorough-going system of justice and pay people what they deserve to be paid instead of the kind of legislation that the second page, at least, of the bill indicates and embodies?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to participate? If not, the hon. Attorney General.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, the philosophy behind the amendment to include drugless practitioners, and now the amendment that I would like to move with respect to optometrists as well, is one that I admit has escaped me as well. The only thing in defence of the amendment that I can say to the House is simply that these professions have asked for the amendment to exempt these people from jury duty.

Originally, I suppose, the theory was to cover people who are liable to be called out in emergency operations of some kind or another—people who may find their jury duty conflicts with their duty to the public. But, as I say, I have no strong feelings about it one way or the other and if the House wants this bill to go to the committee where we can call in the representatives of these professions, I would be glad, certainly, to facilitate that, although no one has suggested it as yet. In so doing, sir, I would like to move, if I may, that section 1 of the bill be deleted and the following substituted therefor—

Mr. Singer: We can only do that in committee.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: All right. I was trying to obviate the necessity of this bill going into committee, but never mind, I will do it in committee. I think I have given the House a caution anyway that I intend to do that later on.

In respect of the whole question of the future of juries in this province, this again is something—

Mr. Singer: The government is carefully considering it.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, the government is not carefully considering it. The minister is not even carefully considering it. This is a question that I have not been able to direct my mind to as yet.

Mr. Singer: Read some of the former minister's speeches.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I will certainly read some of the speeches of my predecessor in respect of this matter, and I was also quite intrigued to find that the hon. member for Downsview was going out of his way not to express an opinion on the matter either, so that—

Mr. Singer: Oh, in so far as petit juries, let us keep them.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Well, I am glad to have this view and this opinion and these suggestions from various members of the House. I am sure the hon. members are not really too concerned about the existing system of payment of jurors' fees at the moment. In respect of the future of JPs in the province, I must say to my friend, the hon. member for Lakeshore, that I shared at one time with him, the view that all Justices of the Peace should be salaried individuals and all of these petty minor fees, collectable by some of these individuals, should be abolished. Certainly that is exactly the trend and that is the policy of the government in respect of the urban areas. All new appointments for Metropolitan Toronto, for instance, are permanent salaried individuals.

However, the great majority of the Justices of the Peace throughout this province, in the rural areas especially, are people whose duties in no way could justify the payment of a regular salary to them—in no way—and therefore, sir, I suppose that question really should be dwelt with under the later amendment—my hon. friend is perfectly correct, the later bill under The Justices of the Peace amendment Act—but because my friend brought it up, I did not want to be accused of not answering his inquiries here.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Attorney General would permit a question. Is he aware that under section 12 of The Interpretation Act, the provision is that “legally qualified medical practitioner,” “duly qualified medical practitioner,” or any words according legal recognition to a person as a medical practitioner or as a member of the medical profession, means a person registered under The Medical Act?

In other words, The Interpretation Act, which applies to all statutes, has a provision for a definition relating to the medical practitioner but when we get down to drugless practitioners, and so on, I wonder if a person selecting jurors could say that somebody who administers a few aspirins to a sick child could be a drugless practitioner. Because there appears to be no necessity to refer in that profession, or in any of the others, to a particular statutory interpretation and I return to the point and wonder whether the minister would not reconsider that.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: This is a matter, I think, that we can best deal with in committee stage. Certainly this matter has been considered.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: This bill shall then be submitted to the Committee of the Whole House.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, is it the wish of the hon. members that it go to the Committee of the Whole House or to—whatever committee we call it this year—it used to be legal bills, but I have no views on it. Would the hon. members rather that it go to the standing committee rather than the Committee of the Whole House?

Mr. Singer: Committee of the Whole House; all right.

Mr. Lawlor: Committee of the Whole House, because the other committee is loaded with those fellows and they will not listen; so I prefer to talk here.

Mr. Speaker: The minister then directs the bill to go to the Committee of the Whole House.

Agreed to.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE ACT

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves second reading of Bill 6, An Act to amend The Justices of the Peace Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Singer: The member already made his speech under the previous one.

Mr. Lawlor: Yes I did, however there is no harm in making the same speech over again.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure he will not repeat the same remarks.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, recommendation number one of McRuer having to do with justices of the peace says the whole system—again, the whole system—pertaining to the office of the justice of the peace should be reorganized. He points out there are 925 justices of the peace in the province, as much as they can determine. There are apparently an unknown number of unregistered justices of the peace of whom the government has completely lost track in its endeavour to appoint as many functionaries as it possibly can under the right banner—the true blue and whatever it is that goes with the Tory Party. The thing has fallen into a total state of ruination.

In this particular legislation the recommendation as to fees is under section 8—that all justices of the peace should be paid a salary based on the demands on their time as shown by a review of the duties they perform. It does not seem to me that this legislation does say in so many words that that is what they intend to do.

The minister himself has said that it is a distinction between the rural areas and the urban which would be the basis of the distinction. I think McRuer wanted it to be based upon a time factor. I do not think this bill needs to be sent to committee personally, if, in the course of sending it on to third reading the minister might just indicate as to whether a time factor in the scale of fees is considered admissible and if that is precisely what he wants to do.

There are pages setting out the present fee structure of the justices of the peace in this book; minor item after minor item. Again it is an excrescence—it is a kind of a barnacle on the belly of the whale, if you will—that there should be a whole host of these petti-fogging fees designed to support and maintain justices of the peace in this province. It is an outworn, thoroughly arbitrary system.

The great number of these fees are levied against the accused person; that is being perpetuated. The government wiped it out, lock, stock and barrel—and I gave the government credit for it—under the previous Attorney General, touching Crown attorneys. But the dregs are still there—the bottom of the barrel is still there—in this business of the justices of the peace.

I would ask the Attorney General to give good thought to and to move immediately in the area of cleaning that thing up, just as McRuer indicated quite a few years ago now that it ought to be done.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Attorney General?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, in all fairness, because a great deal of the work of this session as far as my portfolio is concerned is going to involve words and suggestions and criticisms of the administration of justice in this province by one J. C. McRuer, I think I might as well get it off my chest right now. I do not believe that every word in every one of those reports is manna from heaven or ultimate wisdom coming down to us from on high.

There are many suggestions in those reports which I reject. One of them is the question, for now in any event, of making every justice of the peace in this province a salaried employee of this province right there.

Mr. J. Renwick: I think it is fair to say that Mr. McRuer does not think so either.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: At the moment, as I have indicated, in most of the urban areas we do have full-time salaried justices of the peace. As our urbanization in this province goes on, more and more full-time justices of the peace will be appointed to cover the needs of the people of this province.

I think the hon. member for Lakeshore should bear in mind that the purpose of providing people in this category is as a service to the public. As far as the rights or the payment of justices of the peace are concerned, these are a secondary matter in my book.

What I am looking for is the provision of worthwhile, accessible, experienced, conscientious people to provide a service to the public and in most areas of the province, geographically speaking, we feel that this can still be done by means of the payment of fees for services provided.

At the moment there are 23 full-time, salaried JPs in Metropolitan Toronto. There is one in Chatham. There is one in Whitby. There is one in Waterloo. One is in Kitchener. One is in Niagara Falls and one in Sault Ste. Marie. A total of 30 in the province.

The salaries and working conditions of these full time JPs was established in 1970 by an order-in-council and they are within the scale of $9,705 to $11,349 per year.

Mr. J. Renwick: Are they all Tories?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: They have a varied allowance up to $120 per month for night duty.

It has been found in practice that the limitation of jurisdiction of full-time JPs to city or metropolitan municipality areas is very inconvenient. Also there is a crying need to appoint full-time justices of the peace in county, district and regional municipalities with province-wide jurisdiction.

This new amendment in subsection 2 provides for the appointment for justices of the peace for any part of Ontario, upon the same terms and conditions as the appointment of such justices of the peace for cities and metropolitan municipalities. In effect, Mr. Speaker, what we are doing with this particular amending bill at the moment is to do just what my hon. friend envisages, but I feel I must say to him, however, that in no way at the moment, do we feel that all of the JPs should be full time right across the province.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, with the minister's indulgence, as this probably will go through to third reading, we will avoid the business of the opinion of the whole House. I wonder if the minister would answer me a question?

This is a pretext for a question, Mr. Minister. Does the minister then, on his general approach to McRuer, say that he does not consider necessarily that all the droppings are manna from heaven? Does he agree with the following statement about justices of the peace?

We discuss and condemn the fee system in the administration of justice elsewhere in this report. It is subversive of the administration of justice. The payment of judicial officers on a piece-work basis necessarily diminishes the public respect for law and order. The fee system is a real inducement to justices of the peace to curry favour with police officers in order to "get business."

I think we can all say that we are independently minded with respect to McRuer. No one is more severely critical of him than myself, but that kind of statement must stand. When you get to McRuer you have to give, in my opinion, very good reasons why the minister objects. I cannot see the minister objecting to that kind of statement.

Mr. Singer: That was a question?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: That was a question?

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed to.

SUMMARY CONVICTIONS ACT

Hon. A. F. Lawrence moves second reading of Bill 7, An Act to amend The Summary Convictions Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, in connection with Bill 7—

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, could I also indicate to the hon. members that in committee stage here I intend moving an amendment which will permit the uniform ticket amendment to come into force on a specified date, rather than merely on royal assent.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I would imagine, as I read this bill, that those people who are concerned about computers and management consultants and all sorts of people like that have had a hand in the drafting of this bill.

On the surface it sounds like a wonderful idea. If we only have a uniform ticket where people put Xs and Os and the policeman can hand them out quickly, the whole course of administration of justice is going to move very quickly. In theory I think this is a grand idea.

On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, I want to tell my friend, the Attorney General, about a little incident that happened to me. I went through a red light one day and on the opposite—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Shame!

Mr. Singer: —side was a policeman who pulled me over and gave me one of the presently existing uniform tickets.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Outside of Metro?

Mr. Singer: No, in Metro. The Metropolitan Toronto uniform kind of a ticket where he fills in the Xs and Os, and so on. The summons followed up to advise me that, five months after that date, if I wanted to plead not guilty, I could hie myself off to the city hall and plead not guilty for going through the stoplight. I do not think I had any defence anyway.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, I wonder the extent to which the Attorney General has gone beyond the computer operators and scientists and beyond the management consultants. Is he satisfied that what sounds like a new and modern and up-to-date system is really going to speed up this system of the administration of justice?

Because it is ludicrous, Mr. Speaker, that committing the offence of going through a red light is going to take five months before you, in fact, get a hearing before the court, if you want to argue about it.

I am all in favour of anything that is going to speed this up, but I get worried about the word "summary," as in The Summary Convictions Act. The predecessor of the present minister (Mr. Wishart) found great solace in the words "summary procedure" in The Landlord and Tenants Act. And we all know that "summary" there means very little.

I have not got very great faith in computer scientists or in management consultants insofar as speeding these things up are concerned. I would like some kind of analysis from the Attorney General as to whether or not, when we get the new forms, it is reasonable to assume it is going to be more efficient, it is going to be more speedy, while still protecting the rights of the people who are going to be affected.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: On this bill I would like to know too precisely what the minister has in mind. What range of offences does he intend to place on the ticket? Liquor offences? I would not think it was absconding husbands in this instance, as it was on the previous bill which I wanted to have greater clarity placed upon, before we gave our assent over here.

I ask what precisely does the hon. minister have in mind? I mean precisely. I want to know specifically what range of offences the hon. minister thinks will operate in this particular fashion. Whereas previously this section was confined to Highway Traffic Act offences and has considerable validity there, in a wider swath of offences I would think that, from the point of view of sheer operation, it may not work half as well.

There is one specific point I want to bring to the minister's attention. The major section—section 1, subsection 3, coming down to paragraph 8 of subsection 3—the minister talks about the issuing officer on one side of the fence and giving out the summons portion of the ticket. Then the information portion of the ticket goes in to the police headquarters—I suppose before the justice of the peace. But the minister has made a special provision in paragraph 11 that the informant need not be the same person as that who issued the ticket summons. It seems to me that the informant is after all the individual who swears before the justice of the peace that an offence has been committed. What is the minister's intention—that anybody within the operatus of the police do this and not the very individual whose personal knowledge or whose personal allegation it is a so-called offence has been committed? Ought not the man who issued the summons in the first place to the person on the spot be also the individual to swear that an offence was committed before the justice of the peace? This is a minor matter perhaps, but it is one I think that has some pertinency to this kind of legislation.

I want to join my friend in Downsview in scouting the efficacy of this kind of legislation, as to precisely how the minister deems it is going to operate and what area that he thinks it is going to serve the public in a way better than the present system of issuing summonses and what cost he envisages as possibly being saved to the public purse in the process of bringing this particular sort of measure about.

Does the measure also resemble that in the Ouimet report of the information type of summons of criminal offences under the Criminal Code that are set forth there as a more expeditious way of getting cases before the courts? These are some of the questions that occurred to me while reading this legislation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, first of all, a form of uniform traffic ticket has been in use throughout the province for approximately 10 years and any of the reaction to the use of this form that has come into the department over that time, and anything that I have heard as far as the legal profession is concerned or the public is concerned, has been good.

Just so that I do not want to have any words put in my mouth that this afternoon everything I do is contrary to the hon. J. C. McRuer in his report on the royal commission inquiry into civil rights, and because so many of these words have been thrown at me this afternoon by the member for Lakeshore, I should refer him this afternoon to the report by Mr. McRuer, page 740, in which in referring to the uniform traffic ticket procedure, he has said: "We have had no submissions criticizing this process, that is the uniform traffic ticket process, except that it is too seldom used."

Well by widening it, by making it applicable here in Metro Toronto and having it come up with a form that permits it to be fed into the Metro Toronto computers, the idea is that we are doing exactly what Mr. McRuer has asked us to do.

In relation to the other Act to which, hopefully, the new ticket will be applicable, they all relate to traffic control. This is the main principle behind it, so that under the new procedure a uniform traffic ticket could be issued for offences against such Acts as The Motorized Snow Vehicles Act, The Highway Improvement Act or The Public Commercial Vehicles Act. I can assure my honourable and learned friend that it is not the intention in any event to use this for such matters as liquor offences or matters such as that. They relate directly to traffic control matters.

Under this system too, I think I should point out that the offender will have the advantage of knowing right on the spot what he is charged with since he is handed the summons immediately, while under the system such as that which is now in effect in Metro Toronto for instance, a person may not receive a summons for several weeks following the time the offence was committed.

In respect of the procedures under the Act I should point out that there are really two new procedures provided for under this bill. Under subsection 4 the court may determine that certain offences may be settled out of court, and from a practical point of view this will be in nearly every case where such a ticket is issued. The court in this case will mean the senior provincial judge of the criminal division in the area where the ticket is being issued.

In cases where charges may be settled out of court, the court may then prescribe a fixed amount for the out-of-court penalties and every police officer will have this schedule with him, and when a summons is issued he may then enter upon the summons itself the amount of the out-of-court settlement which the court has already prescribed.

Mr. Singer: Would that differ from the regular area?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes it will. Under the old procedure if a case could be settled out of court the offender had to fill out a small blue piece of paper which was at the bottom of the summons and send it into the court with his signature of the back, and then when his plea of guilty was accepted the court would send out the notice to the offender of the amount of the fine and the offender was then to forward the fine to the court. So no wonder it was indicated to my hon. friend that up to five months could elapse before the matter would finally come to trial.

As a practical matter this creates a very great problem for the court officials, and since in all cases as a practical matter the amount of out-of-court settlement is fixed by the court and entered by a clerk, it seems much more efficient—and I emphasize the words “it seems much more efficient” to have the officer complete this portion of the summons and then an offender can simply, if he wishes, settle out of court, sign the back of the summons and send the amount of the money indicated on the face of the ticket.

I have here, if the hon. members want to see it, a draft of what these things should look like, in case there are no traffic offenders in the House today.

It should be made clear, sir, that the officer in filling out the amount of the penalty is in no way exercising his discretion, but is simply putting on the summons a figure which has been fixed by the court. It is also provided that no officer may accept payment of any out-of-court settlement, and the reasons, of course, for this are pretty obvious.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, would the minister permit a question, it is right on this point.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes.

Mr. Lawlor: This “fixed by the court” business puzzles me. Why is it not fixed by the regulation or fixed under some Act? What have you got here? Take an example. Somebody has an overweight vehicle and one is issuing a summons to them. Does the minister say that the court in advance—or some court, I guess through the county judge or through the chief judge of the provincial judges or whoever it is going to be—have set their own schedule of what the fine or penalty will be arising out of an offence?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lawlor: Surely that is within your jurisdiction? This is a most curious thing that they should do that.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No. There are cases where flexibility from certain area to certain area across the province requires that some of these fines be of differing amounts. The standardization, though, does come because it has to be through the senior provincial judge of the criminal division in the area where the ticket is being issued. As time goes on, I am sure that we will get a more standardized amount laid down by the judges themselves.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Attorney General could advise if this, in fact, means that the senior provincial judge, say, in Lanark—who is a genial and kindly man—could fix the penalty for speeding at the lowest limit set out in The Highway Traffic Act; whereas the senior provincial court judge, say, in Lambton—who is not quite so genial—might say speeders are terrible people and he is going to fix the fine at the highest possible rate? Does the Attorney General think this is reasonable? Because surely the offence, whether it is committed in Lanark or committed in Lambton, of speeding five miles over the limit, is the same offence? If there is going to be arbitrary fixing of penalty in one area, this could lead to very serious inequities.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I think my friend will find that as time goes on here, and these fines are standardized, his fears that there will be grave differences between the fines levied in these cases will disappear. Again, it is a question of moving cautiously, not slowly, but moving cautiously, into an area where more and more we are trying to standardize these.

Mr. Singer: The speeches at the convention indicated that the minister was going to move with imagination.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: The other major change in the procedure is contained in subsections 8 and 9. These subsections provide that the officer who issues the ticket shall sign the face of the information certifying—and I am getting here to the point made by my friend, the member for Lakeshore—will sign the face of the information certifying that he has delivered the summons portion to the offender. This certificate is then receivable in evidence as sufficient proof of the personal service of the summons in the absence, of course, of evidence to the contrary.

Under the existing old procedure, if an accused did not appear at the time indicated on the summons the court could proceed in his absence only when the proof of service of the summons was made or a warrant could be issued for the offender's arrest. In no case could the court adjourn the matter to a subsequent date unless proof of personal service was made. This would require each police officer being present in court to swear that he served the summons personally upon the offender.

The amendment permits the court to accept as evidence the certificate of the officer on the face of the information, that he has delivered the summons personally to the offender and thus the court may then adjourn the matter until some subsequent date. I am sure my friend will agree this new practice is preferable to the existing one.

Subsection 11 simply spells out what is already the general practice in the laying of informations. By the subsection it is made clear that the informant or person who lays the charge need not be the same person as issued the traffic summons. In effect, this will permit a single officer to appear before a justice of the peace and swear that he had reasonable and probable ground to believe that the offence contained in the information had been committed. His ground for so doing would be the signature of the officer on the face of the information. Thus, a report in writing of one officer is being used as reasonable and probable grounds for another officer to believe that the offence had been committed.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this be referred for third reading? Agreed?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Oh, I am sorry. I have an amendment on this one.

Mr. Speaker: There is an amendment? Then the hon. minister would direct it to Committee of the Whole House?

Agreed to.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could then move third reading of Bill 1?

Mr. Speaker: Well, I must point out to the House that the time has arrived for another order of business. If this is the only bill, perhaps we could deal with it.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: There are just four bills here, sir, for third reading, that I think will take 30 seconds with the compliance of the House.

THIRD READINGS

The following bills were given third reading upon motion:

Bill 1, An Act to amend The Wills Act.

Bill 3, An Act to amend The County Judges Act.

Bill 4, An Act to amend The Crown Witnesses Act.

Bill 6, An Act to amend The Justices of the Peace Act.

NOTICE OF MOTION

Clerk of the House: Notice of motion No. 8, by Mr. Makarchuk:

RESOLUTION: That this province request the federal government to amend The Bank Act to enable the Ontario government to initiate provincial legislation to expand the services and functions of the Ontario Savings Bank so that it will be able to operate in all fields of commerce currently available to chartered banks and trust companies, in order to provide meaningful competition in the banking field, lower interest rates, and give this government another financial tool for the encouragement of growth in vitally important areas of the provincial economy.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the member for Cochrane South, resolution No. 8 standing in my name.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Brantford, seconded by the member for Cochrane South, moves resolution No. 8.

Mr. Makarchuk: In moving this resolution, Mr. Speaker, I have considered the fact that banking comes under the jurisdiction of the federal government. At the same time, I have taken into account the current political climate in Canada and the hostile reaction that would come from these existing financial institutions should this province move into the field of banking. This of course should not prevent us from discussing this matter and acting on the resolution.

The foremost advantage of a provincial bank is that it could be used by the provincial government as an effective instrument to stimulate economic growth, to direct growth and development in socially desirable areas or to direct growth into slow-growth areas such as northern Ontario.

It would also be in a position to provide real competition to the existing chartered banks. Presently the Canadian banking industry is composed of nine federally chartered banking companies, five of which own 85 per cent of all Canadian branches. The industry has all the characteristics of an oligopoly selling basically undifferentiated products with little or no competition. The unanimous decision by the banks to increase service charges by 27 and 33 per cent is the most recent example of collusion and lack of real competition in the banking industry. The banking industry has been able to maintain its oligopolistic position by creating several barriers to competition.

First, as mentioned earlier, the politics of this nation have always been such that bank profits always come ahead of people. As a result, I can foresee that the Senate Committee on finance and banking which has to review the application for a charter would be very susceptible to influence by the existing chartered banks to deny issuing of a charter.

It should be noted that the Bank of British Columbia, hardly a socialistic enterprise, was issued a charter which denied the government of British Columbia any right to hold shares or have shares transferred to the government of that province. In spite of this Mr. Speaker, there is a change in the political climate coming and as a result there should be clear discussion of this matter.

The second barrier to entry is the fact that chartered banks control the clearing system. Consequently they are in a position to set the charges for other institutions at rates which could restrict the competitive ability of the new institution. Having enumerated some of the obstacles, I should like to say very emphatically that despite barriers the province should go ahead with plans to establish a provincial bank.

The reasons are many, but basically they could be generalized in the statement that the province would have another very effective monetary tool to use in the social and economic development of this province. First, a judicious use of interest rates. The bank could ensure that interest rates charged by commercial banks would be more in line with the ability of the borrower to pay.

It should be noted that bank profits in the last few years have increased by what I consider an unconscionable amount. The cumulative figures for 1968 to 1970 show the following increase in profits: The Royal Bank had an increase of 26.3 per cent; the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was 32.3 per cent; the Bank of Montreal was 98.8 per cent; the Bank of Nova Scotia was 28 per cent; the Toronto-Dominion Bank was 29.5 per cent; National Bank had 32.2 per cent and the Provincial Bank had 31.1 per cent increase in profits. The average is 39.7 per cent, or roughly a 20 per cent increase per year.

It is interesting to note that while the workers were told to hold the line at six per cent, and now in Ontario after the budget at five per cent, nothing was said to the banks by the same individuals.

Another point is that if the figures for 1967 were included, profits would still be much higher. The high profits reflect high interest rates charged by the banks. Although various groups in society are blamed for inflation, it should be obvious that the banks themselves have contributed more to inflation than anybody else. Our high rates are reflected in higher home mortgage payments, higher cost of production and hence higher cost of consumer goods.

Although a provincial bank may only have a small percentage of the lending market, it could still provide the competitive edge which would force the existing chartered banks to be very cautious about raising their interest rates. Other advantages of a provincial bank are that it could assist the government in carrying out socially useful economic policies.

As an example, money at lower interest rates could be made available to industries wishing to locate in areas where growth is desirable, such as northern Ontario. Small firms which offer less security than larger firms and which are unable to turn to the equity market because they are generally closely held and because they lack financial contacts that are available to those larger corporations, would find a provincial bank more receptive to their needs.

Promoting innovation and strengthening the technology of the province should be another major task of the bank. It should be noted that economic growth is not only linked to the availability of natural resources but also very closely linked to the development of new technology, of brain power. This will not only help us to fulfill the needs of the people of Ontario but also build up our industries' competitive muscle. Assistance for rationalization of industry should be another function of the provincial bank. Relatively inefficient manufacturers could be consolidated into more efficient and competitive units. These are some of the functions that a provincial bank can perform but by no means all.

In conclusion, I wish to say that there will have to be much more planning of our economy by the people for the people, instead of by the corporation for the corporation or just to maximize profits. What is good for General Motors is not necessarily good for the people of Ontario. In order to come to grips with the problems of housing, pollution, urban sprawl, public transportation, full employment and others the province will have to use various methods to achieve these very desirable ends. A provincial bank is only one of the means but it is a very important means, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kitchener.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, this motion is a most interesting one and it does receive some qualified support from this party. I will set out our own particular views in a few moments. It is regrettable to me that the new Minister of Revenue (Mr. Winkler) in whose jurisdiction this matter now lies is not in the House to share our concern over this situation. I believe that it is most important that we consider this kind of expansion of the functions of the Ontario Savings Office so that we may be able to use the kinds of tools which are most important and relevant to our own development as a province.

In the 1970 volume entitled Ontario Government Services there appears on page 377 a very brief comment on the Province of Ontario Savings Office. We are told and I quote:

The purpose of this programme is to authorize the Treasurer of Ontario to borrow money by means of deposits in any amounts and from any persons and to open offices in Ontario for this purpose. Moneys borrowed are used for any of the purposes of the Province of Ontario specified in The Agricultural Development Finance Act. Conditions as to interest and repayments that govern deposits are fixed from time to time by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

Then, Mr. Speaker, we go on and are told that there are now 21 savings offices operating and the list of towns and cities is rather short. Aylmer, Brantford, Guelph, Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Owen Sound, Pembroke, Seaforth, St. Catharines, St. Marys, Toronto, Walkerton, Windsor and Woodstock. This is the network of offices which is available to the citizens of the province insofar as this old deposit function is concerned as operated by this government.

We are referred, then, in this booklet, to the authorizing legislation. This legislation is The Agricultural Development Finance Act, RSO 1960, chapter 9, a one-page statute of five short sections. Of course, the most important of the sections is the one dealing with the use of moneys. Section 3 says this:

Moneys borrowed under this Act shall be used for any of the following purposes: for the public service, for works carried on by commissioners on behalf of Ontario, for the covering of any debt of Ontario on open account, for paying any floated indebtedness of Ontario, and the carrying on of the public works authorized by the Legislature.

There is, therefore, Mr. Speaker, a broad use and area to which these moneys can be put. The statute is there which would allow a development within the province of this facility and, of course, the general public would benefit.

What can be done? How, in fact, can the savings offices be used to give us the kind of tool we need to assist in the development of our province? The former Minister of Revenue (Mr. White) told us in his estimates last October 20 that he had commissioned certain internal studies of the savings office. The member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor) pointed out in those estimates that the financial report for 1970 of the Province of Ontario showed a net decline in the savings office net receipts, from a 1969 high of $10,329,000 down to $1,743,000.

It was pointed out at that time, either that there must be some defects in operation or that there is a failure to make a decision to compete. The failure to make loans is obviously an important reason for the change in development of the use of the savings office.

We were told by the former minister that there was to be, as he called it, a sophisticated managerial management consultant study of the whole operation. We have not seen it as yet and certainly, as the opposition critic for this department and specifically for this function, I would look forward to seeing this report long before the estimates for this year come before us again. But the Minister of Revenue, as he then was, in his estimates last year, did refer to the proportionate differences and problems that the savings offices had with respect to the banks and trust companies.

He said this at page 5263 of Hansard for October 20, 1970:

We have increased our deposits absolutely; we have not kept up with the increased deposits in the chartered banks in this country, nor have we kept up with the deposits in trust and loan companies and such like.

So there, Mr. Speaker, is the problem. This whole function has been allowed to lurch along from day to day without any real direction from this government. It has not kept up. The Minister admits that; he admitted it at the time, and I believe that the situation is still the same today.

I should make it personally very clear that I do not favour any expanded function of the savings offices to be a means by which active tools of competing monetary policies are developed to offset the federal requirement of primacy in this field. The idea that different monetary policies could exist could be as disastrous as this government's recent agricultural policy which challenges some of the more interesting tenets of confederation.

The acceptance of positive changes could see the savings office grow into an urban development bank. While this resolution before us might go much further, I would like to give my views on this one important area. It is in this area that we could develop a useful financial tool for the encouragement of growth within the province.

Mr. Speaker, a provincial urban development bank could help meet the need for lower cost housing in the province. In 1969, Addison Planning and Research Limited produced a report for the Metropolitan Toronto Planning Board on housing needs in the Metro Toronto planning area. It showed that in the 10-year period between now and 1980, about 400,000 new dwelling units would be required to adequately house the population of this area.

However, just one-third of those dwelling units would be within the income range of the people in the area. A further third would have to be provided in the form of public housing and a final third would require some sort of government action to reduce costs, if they were to be purchased or rented by the people in the area paying a normal percentage of their income for shelter.

The fact I want to underline is that only one-third of the required new dwelling units would, under present policies, become available at prices which people could afford to acquire unassisted.

The government of Nova Scotia has recently announced that it could get a home built for just over $10,000, exclusive of land costs, if many of the normal luxuries and finishings were not incorporated. An urban development bank might finance this kind of lower-cost development.

One asks if the need still exists in Ontario for this kind of housing. This government's own housing programme, which was announced in the Throne Speech has been revealed as a fiasco. The double talk and the patched-up policies were quickly seen through, not only by the press, but by most other citizens within the province. It is clear that the needs still do exist.

One of the problems with financing under the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation rulings in the past has been the federal government's use of housing funds as a regulator for the economy. The supply of funds, therefore, tend to dry up in a period when the government has decided on a more restrictive economic policy.

The federal task force on housing has called for a new form of financial institution which makes available mortgages to people in smaller centres across Canada.

I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that the Province of Ontario Savings Office, as it might be developed, could perform this role. In a revitalized Savings Office we could develop in Ontario a pacemaker in the public sector which might bring down the costs of financial services in certain areas.

The urge for competition might become all the more important for all concerned. In this way we could further complement the activity of the Ontario Development Corporation by having a readily available source of long-term investment capital within the structure of this revitalized Savings Office.

The need exists and certainly a framework for action exists. This government should use the framework to fill the need. Co-operation, of course, with the federal government would be needed. In the last few weeks we have seen the path of co-operation strewn with challenges and manifestos. The government is always happy to receive money in contributions to programmes from the federal government but the gratitude seems to be rather short-lived.

In a real spirit of development and co-operation, some of the changes in the financial and banking structure in Canada, which this resolution calls for, could be usefully implemented to benefit all of the citizens of Ontario.

I think the resolution has merit and I think that it should, in general, be supported by the members of this House.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Ontario South.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Mr. Speaker, in speaking to this resolution I would like to comment upon a number of points which the member for Brantford appears to have either ignored or completely misunderstood.

I do not want to quibble over semantics, but the resolution refers incorrectly to the Ontario Savings Office as the "Ontario Savings Bank." This is perhaps a minor error but it is important to make it clear that this agency was established to serve primarily as a borrowing facility for the provincial government. The term "bank" implies extensive public services and operation which were really never intended.

The Ontario Savings Office operates under the authority of The Agriculture Development Finance Act. It was established in 1921. Deposits received from the public are carried in individual accounts on which interest is paid and cheques can be issued. All moneys received on deposit and not required for current operations by the savings office, are transferred to the credit of the consolidated revenue fund and are used to finance the general operation of government programmes.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): That is taken straight from the estimates book.

Mr. W. Newman: Mr. Speaker, the resolution either failed to recognize the lines of legislative responsibilities for banks and trust companies or else is just unrealistic.

The provincial banks would require a petition to the federal government for incorporation, but trust company operations are already regulated under an Ontario statute, The Loans and Trusts Corporation Act. All nine banks in Canada are chartered, or in other words, licensed by Parliament under the terms of the federal Bank Act.

In addition to regulating the auditing of accounts, the issuing of stocks, the setting aside of reserves, The Bank Act regulates the banks' relationships with the public, the Canadian government and the Bank of Canada. It is highly improbable that the federal government will allow the provincial government to operate clearly in an area of finance which is, and should be, nationally regulated.

It is also highly improbable that the federal government would make an exemption in the present provision in The Bank Act which stipulates that no individual or associated shareholders may vote more than 10 per cent of a bank's closed shares outstanding. This would mean that the provincial government would have to relinquish 90 per cent of the shares in such a bank. For the sake of argument, if this limitation was waived so the provincial government could be the only shareholder, such a monopoly would impair the meaningful competition this resolution seeks to establish.

Notwithstanding the above technical and philosophical hurdles to the possibility of establishing a provincial bank, there remains the most important question of success. Canadians are known as savers, and generally seem to prefer depositing their money as opposed to investing it. But the establishment of a 10th bank would simply create a diversion of saving funds from existing corporations rather than creating a new supply of capital.

It may be argued that even if the pool of mortgage money available remains the same, at least some of it would then be at the disposal of the provincial government, and hopefully lower interest rates could be offered. This possibility, however, is very dubious, due to the competitive market forces. The government can scarcely charge lower rates on mortgages without seriously impairing its ability to earn an adequate return on a capital investment.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution asks for another financial tool for government encouragement of growth in vitally important areas of the provincial economy. Substantial encouragement to growth is already being exercised by this government through existing financial arrangements. The Ontario Housing programme has a budget this year of over $158 million, adding to OHC's total housing investment of $545 million since 1966.

The industrial incentives and development programme has been allocated over $40 million to provide technical and financial services and loans to encourage and assist in the development and diversification of industry in this province, and to provide equalization of industrial opportunity. In addition, this government announced in the Throne Speech for this fourth session that preference will be given to Canadian-owned businesses seeking grants and loans under our incentive programmes.

A venture capital fund will also be established to assist in the financing of small Canadian businesses which have exceptional potential but which involve greater risks than are acceptable to conventional lending institutions. A new five per cent tax credit to corporations announced in the budget last week will encourage job-creating investment in machinery and equipment and will serve as a direct stimulus to our growth.

Government debts and spending, coupled with severe controls on government costs, will put more money in the hands of consumers, and within this field the emphasis on giving the private sector more spending power reflects this government's basic view that perhaps for too long we have accepted the need for new and expanded government programmes to move into new areas of social and economic concern.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): One of the most negative statements ever made in this Legislature.

Mr. W. Newman: We will continue—I could say something but I will not—we could continue to move into an area where problems of priorities demand our government goes.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Say it. Go ahead, say it.

Mr. Lawlor: As a right winger, a progressive of the party, I am surprised at the member.

Mr. W. Newman: Well, as long as the member for Lakeshore belongs to the waffle group he can stay there.

But at the same time we must move out of the areas where our money, administration and control are not so necessary. Banking does not need our participation. By 1984 governments will control more than half the gross national product. The idea that governments must do even more should not be entertained. It comes as no surprise that the hon. member opposite should sponsor a resolution calling upon the government to invade yet another area of the private sector.

Mr. Lawlor: It comes as no surprise that the hon. member can think of all the reasons against it and none for it. Not a single reason pro. What negative thinking. He can do better than that.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): He is supposed to be progressive.

Mr. W. Newman: I am trying to control myself. If members are not careful I will not. We are all too familiar with—

Mr. Martel: Who wrote that?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, the hon. member for Ontario South has the floor.

Mr. Stokes: Tell him not to be so provocative.

Mr. W. Newman: If you fellows would stop being so left we could get on with the right business of the House. We are all too familiar with his party's views that the social good will only be advanced by more and more government intrusion and control. I do not subscribe to that premise at all, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lawlor: Do not let the opposition get under your skin. Fight back.

Mr. W. Newman: —and therefore I cannot support this resolution.

Mr. Martel: What else is new?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Cochrane South.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this resolution by my colleague, the hon. member for Brantford, although there is one thing that I would like to see in this resolution and under this plan, and that would be for these savings offices to be extended to northern Ontario, especially if this resolution is carried out and a bank is formed.

I am informed that my hon. friend from the Conservative Party is misinformed, because I gather that the OHC now lends money below the NHA lending rate to developers and private builders.

Mr. Martel: Oh the hon. member for Ontario South forgot to tell us that.

Mr. Ferrier: Now I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is important to create a bank that is not just another conventional bank without any exceptional interest in or empathy for the Province of Ontario, particularly northern Ontario; one with no particular desire to deviate from the banking cartel.

What we are advocating here is a bank that will be more responsive to local conditions and needs, particularly in the north, and one that will encourage the development of indigenous financial resources and thereby foster additional economic development particularly in the north.

At present, the banking industry is concentrated in nine chartered banks, five of which own 86 per cent of all Canadian branches. Rather than genuine competition existing among the banks, we have co-operation as is illustrated by uniform increase in interest rates or increases in certain service charges. They all go along with it. The consumer is always the loser. When the prime interest rate from the Bank of Canada to the chartered banks goes up, all borrowers are informed that the interest rate on their loans will automatically go up. When the interest rate to the banks goes down, the interest rate to the borrower does not drop accordingly, but stays the same. The consumer is always the loser with the present bank setup.

The provincial savings bank is limited in that it cannot borrow money from the foreign exchange markets or the lenders' last resort, that is, the Bank of Canada. Also it cannot make loans to borrowers whether individuals, small businessmen or corporate bodies. This is needed.

Northern Ontario is remote from the southern financial centre and we suffer from a shortage of capital and credit facilities. The foremost advantage of a provincial bank, if it were designed to serve the needs of the north and other slow-growth areas of the province, is that it would be more sympathetic to the needs of these areas of the province and thereby stimulate the economic development of these areas.

According to the Financial Post, the regional bank's familiarity with local needs and the resultant willingness to put up capital for local ventures is one explanation for the diversification and dispersion of industrial development in the United States. Presumably, a bank more in tune with local needs would be more willing to grant credit to enterprises that might not receive funds from the established lender. My information is that in many, many areas loans of probably over $10,000 have to be okayed from the central head offices of the banks. Sometimes they are not as sympathetic to the outlying areas of the north as one would hope.

In short, capital and credit availability will be expanded to serve local needs and conditions should the bank be set up. I attended a development conference in Cochrane about two or three years ago and one of the things brought up was the great difficulty that a woods industry in Hearst had in getting capital to expand and grow. In fact, this industry could not get any money from the Canadian banks. It had to go outside Canada—had to go to Belgium to get the money it required.

I think it is a crime that Canadian banks, or rather lending institutions, would not help this company and numerous others like it in the north, but this is so often the case.

At that same conference, the Canada Permanent Trust Company said that it does not make loans in northern Ontario because they are too costly to service. It is not that it is discriminating against the north, the company says, but there is not enough business there to make it viable for it to set up offices there.

Mr. Stokes: Whose fault is that?

Mr. Ferrier: We did have a truly northern company, the Northland Trust Company. This was making some impact in the north in terms of mortgages that it was giving out but one of the larger shareholders had to get out of the company. No other northerners would buy his shares so they were sold to a southern company which is not as sympathetic to northern interests as the original company was. I think that this loss of control of this company in the north is very regrettable. I think that it says something rather adverse about some of the northern business people and people with wealth.

Now the provincial bank, should one be set up, as is suggested in this resolution, with northern branches, could take up the slack in making loans to northern businesses and to provide mortgage money for housing. Northern housing seems to be at a standstill these days. We need a lot more housing; low rental housing and so on. While OHC is doing its bit, there is a lot more needed.

Moreover, the uses to which northern Ontario savings are put are largely dictated by southern interests. A provincial bank with northern branches could reduce the outflow of northern Ontario savings and make more northern Ontario money available in the north. There are vast amounts of money in insurance and pension funds coming out of the north that are not being used for our benefit and there should be some way of keeping that money in the north and having development of our enterprises and I suggest that a provincial bank could do considerable about that.

It is important that we get capital in the north in terms of development of our natural resources, movement into secondary industries and expansion of the service industry, plus additional money for business and housing, all of which is in short supply as far as capital is concerned.

D. W. Bishop has appeared on CBC television on more than one occasion. He has charged that stockbrokers of this country are shipping out Canadian money, through Wall Street and other American financial areas, that could very well be used to develop our own resources. He sees this as an important way of eroding our own autonomy and restricting the development of our resource base in the north of Ontario and in other northern parts of the country.

I think that a provincial bank might be able to provide some of the developmental capital that is so badly needed. By being able to borrow from the foreign market or from the Bank of Canada these capital resources could be found.

We need secondary industry and if money was more readily available, it could help with the diversification of the northern economy. I do not think that there would be any lack of people coming to borrow this money.

There is the experience of a province which did move into banking—the Province of British Columbia. The terms of incorporation of this bank were that the province per se could not own any of it, a restriction which some of us are not altogether happy with. Let me just review some of the positive aspects of the operation of this bank.

One thing is that a local money market has developed in Vancouver and is partially responsible for the growth of economic activity in Vancouver. Perhaps this could very well take place in northern Ontario.

The Bank of British Columbia operates with a lower prime interest rate than its large eastern competitors—that is, 7.25 per cent as opposed to 7.5 per cent. It has forced a reaction from the other banks that had made them more service-conscious in the west. Eastern banks have allowed their local staff more autonomy in credit decisions. Its convenient banking hours have been adopted by competitors. The Bank of British Columbia offers slightly higher interest rates to depositors.

Currently, the bank has 10 branches. This figure will nearly double by the end of next year. Branching into Alberta is planned, but only after British Columbia is saturated with 50 to 60 branches. A profit was obtained in the first year of each branch operation, compared to three to five years required by other chartered bank branches. The bank has been very successful in attracting institutional and corporate moneys and has more cash available for loans than it has borrowers. From available material, it is difficult to assess the success of its lending operations.

Alberta has operated treasury branches over the years whereby they solicit savings, make loans, sell drivers' licences, fish and game permits, collect utility bills and so forth. They have provided a very worthwhile service to the people of Alberta.

I think, in terms of the benefits that will accrue from a provincial bank and the very few costs involved, that the establishment of such would be a great benefit to our economy, especially the economy of northern Ontario and the slow-growth areas of this province. I wholeheartedly support this resolution that my colleague, the member for Brantford, has introduced today.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Hon. E. Dunlop (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, it had not been originally my intention to join the debate on this resolution. But the interest which it has sparked in the House, combined with the time left on the clock for five members and no other private members being on the list—

Mr. Stokes: The minister is going to support it.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: —I feel that I should be able to enter this discussion briefly.

We have listened to some quite extraordinary statements from the members for Brantford, Kitchener and Cochrane South.

Mr. Stokes: And Ontario South. Those were most unusual.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: Let me say, Mr. Speaker, there seems to be, on the part of members opposite, some extraordinary misconceptions as to the function of the Ontario Savings Office. The term "bank" has been used erroneously in describing it because perhaps to those who use it, it appears to be a bank in the sense in which most people use a bank. They deposit money and have chequing privileges. Indeed, the royal commission on banking—under Chief Justice Porter I think it was—really defined a bank as being a deposit-taking institution.

Only to that extent can the Ontario Savings Office be regarded as a bank. They take deposits and they lend the money, but they lend the money to the Province of Ontario for the purposes, primarily agricultural, prescribed in the governing legislation, the statute which was enacted in 1921, by the government of Ontario.

This is a very valuable and useful undertaking to the development of the economy of the province. My hon. friend—

Mr. Stokes: It does not help the north very much.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop:—from Kitchener pointed out that there were very few offices and he listed the number of towns in which these offices exist. These tend to be small towns in rural Ontario, or in Toronto, places where there are substantial numbers of civil servants who wish to take advantage of facilities furnished by a bank.

Originally it was a combined rural-service operation—both service to the rural economy and service to the rural residents, plus service to the provincial civil servants and, indeed, to anyone else who wished to make use of this service.

I can see some points in the observations of my friend from Cochrane South that perhaps more of these offices should be established in northern Ontario. I would rather agree with him, as do all members of this side of the House, that more of everything should be established in northern Ontario. I believe, however, that this matter is now being very carefully considered by my colleague.

Mr. Stokes: For 28 years.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: Careful consideration sometimes takes a goodly length of time. However, the careful consideration that he is giving to it commenced when he assumed this portfolio on March 1. He may well have some very substantial views to advance on the reorganization of the Ontario Savings Office, not in the ridiculous manner suggested—that the government of Ontario should enter the field of bills and banking, which under section 93 of The British North America Act is clearly assigned to the government of Canada—but in other ways by making use of the services of the Ontario Savings Office more attractive to the people that it is primarily to serve.

As had been pointed out by my friend from Ontario South, however, another deposit-taking institution is not going to increase the supply of capital. Those people who wish to deposit do so in the institution which is most convenient to them and which from time to time gives them the most attractive rate. Sometimes it is a trust company, sometimes it is a bank. It might even sometimes be the Ontario Savings Office. It is that kind of switching of existing capital, rather than increasing savings, which would happen with any changes made in the Ontario Savings Office. It seems, therefore, that the whole basis of this resolution, which surprises me not that it came from a member supporting the socialist party, but it surprises me that it apparently receives even qualified—and you notice how careful they are to see it qualify—support from the Liberal Party, or at least one member of that party, which is not always noted for its solidarity—

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): I agree with that.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: I am not surprised that the socialists wish to twist an understanding of our banking system in the resolution.

Mr. D. Jackson (Timiskaming): You do not have to twist the understanding. The hon. minister just does not understand.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: Oh my friend, I should ask the member to withdraw that, but my surprise is at the Liberal Party.

Mr. Speaker, I am about to consult my watch. I observe the time which the private members of the Liberal Party have not wished to use in this debate to express their qualified approval—

Mr. Peacock: Do not anticipate.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop:—and what their qualifications are. If they wished to speak, they have had every opportunity through the whips.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Peacock: Mr. Speaker, I take it you have not accepted the motion of the hon. minister—

Mr. Speaker: No, the motion is not required.

Mr. Peacock: —for the adjournment of the debate.

I listened attentively to his intervention, which I know that hon. members always do in this House, and I wanted to speak to one or two of the points which he raised: the first being that the Province of Ontario Savings Office, through deposits placed with it, contributes, I believe he intimated, substantially to the capacity of the Province of Ontario to invest in capital works of the province, and thereby relieves the province of the necessity, to some extent, of raising moneys elsewhere.

And as I listened to the minister, Mr. Speaker, I turned to the details of the non-budgetary transaction tabled by the Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) in his 1971 budget speech this time last week, and refreshed my memory about the flow of non-budgetary revenues to this government, which I have discussed a number of times in the past as being completely arrogated to the Province of Ontario, which represents substantial amounts of savings in the hands of employees of the Province of Ontario largely, and in the hands of a number of other persons who are clients of the government.

These savings relieve the government of Ontario much more, many times over. The extent to which the government of Ontario is relieved from borrowing by virtue of the transfer of net deposits from the Province of Ontario Savings Office to the consolidated revenue fund.

In that table of non-budgetary receipts and credits, there is the sum of $500 million provided by the Ontario government's share of contributions to the Canada Pension Plan. There is some $90 million in contributions received from the teachers' superannuation fund and I recognize—and I am sure the minister would be prompt to correct me—that not all of that or any of the subsequent items I wish to list would be net proceeds to the government of Ontario.

There would be some reduction of that $90 million amount of contributions by virtue of cost of administration of the teachers' superannuation fund and of course, the pay-out of benefits to persons eligible for retirement.

Another very large flow of savings from persons in an employment relationship with the province or one of its subsidiary bodies, is the Municipal Employees' Retirement Fund, which is estimated to provide $77.4 million in the current budgetary year, over and above the net general revenues flowing to the province.

Then we have the contributions of the civil servants of the Province of Ontario itself, through the Public Service Superannuation Fund, of $99 million. All of these, I think, compare with the amount received in net transfer from the Province of Ontario savings deposit of only $10.6 million.

I depreciate the value of that somewhat in regard to the flow of savings from all these various sources in the province to the Treasury because they are obviously many times the weight of what is obtained from the Province of Ontario savings deposits. They have made it unnecessary for the province of Ontario to borrow in the money markets of the world in the last several years. Yet I do not wish to depreciate the value of transfers too much in light of what has been put before the House by way of resolution today, Mr. Speaker.

Obviously the amount of $10.6 million is a rather substantial one in the hands of an operation such as the Province of Ontario Savings Bank, or office. When it comes to availability of credit to small businessmen, particularly in northern Ontario, those who cannot obtain from any other source—the chartered banks, the Ontario Development Corporation, or the other institutions listed by the member for Ontario South—the $10.6 million estimated to be transferred to the Consolidated Revenue Fund is not a large addition to the non-budgetary transactions of the province, but in the hands of a genuine depository and lending institution which the Province of Ontario Savings Bank could be, it is a very nice sum with which to start, and to be used in all of the ways referred to by the member for Brantford and the member for Cochrane South in their addresses.

So on that score, Mr. Speaker, I would like to answer the remarks of the Minister without Portfolio and suggest that the—

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: I thought the member was echoing them.

Mr. Peacock: Sorry.

Hon. Mr. Dunlop: I thought largely he was echoing them.

Mr. Peacock: I would like to suggest that in terms of what is being proposed today, that is a very adequate amount, but in terms of comparison with what is already available to the province in the way of savings received by it from very large numbers of people in its employ, it is a rather negligible sum.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any other hon. members wishing to enter this particular debate? If not, perhaps the hon. House leader would call the next order of business.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the clock is approaching very closely to the hour of 6 o'clock. Perhaps if you would care to glance at it, you might consider it close enough to adjourn.

Clerk of the House: House in committee of supply; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair

It being 6 o'clock, p.m., the House took recess.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, MAY 3, 1971

The House resumed at 8 o'clock, p.m.

Mr. Chairman: The Department of Lands and Forests. The hon. minister.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Never mind counting.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Point of order—no quorum.

An hon. member: Here we go again.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! We shall check and see if we have a quorum.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Two shy; we need two.

Mr. Chairman: Call in the members. The bells have rung for four minutes, there should be a quorum.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Once the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Snow) is here there will be a quorum.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Chairman, it is a privilege to once again present The Department of Lands and Forests' estimates.

These remarks this evening are intended to emphasize my department's increasing awareness and concern about the social and economic needs of the citizens of this province and the benefits which can be obtained through the wise management of our renewable natural resources. To meet the challenges of the Seventies, we clearly recognize the need to become even more responsible to the changing requirements of our population.

As a first step in the development of a new management philosophy, my department carried out a thorough review of its goals and objectives. After considerable study during the past two years, these have been redefined in terms of the social and economic benefits which The Department of Lands and Forests can provide from the publicly-owned lands, waters and forests and can encourage from the private lands of the province.

A major internal reorganization has recently been initiated to achieve an even greater decentralization to the regional and district offices and to establish an administrative structure at head office which will focus attention on the newly-defined objectives. The new organization will provide more effective and efficient service to the public within the present complement of staff.

Our department has long recognized the need for the public to be involved in the planning which affects them. In 1950 the minister's advisory committee was established and has continued to represent public points of view. For a number of years we have had district recreational advisory committees. Their role will be broadened to consider wider implications of land use.

More recently, other advisory committees have been established. The Algonquin Park advisory committee has submitted a fairly comprehensive set of recommendations concerning Algonquin Park policies. These include a suggested updating of the purposes of management of the park, as well as their latest thinking about road systems, canoe routes, hiking trails, youth camps and a general forest policy. We are now studying these suggestions and working out their implications in managing the park.

You are also aware of the work of the Quetico Park advisory committee which recently completed its hearings at Fort Frances, Atikokan, Thunder Bay and Toronto and is now studying the information gathered.

As evidence of our increasing concern with the outdoor recreation requirements of the residents of Ontario, I would like to mention a few of the user surveys and studies which are being carried out to obtain the information required for more rational and effective planning.

Hunter interviews and fishermen creel census programmes are being expanded and more use is being made of questionnaire surveys. Fifty thousand hunters are being contacted annually by mail. Last year a similar survey of 35,000 fishermen was also introduced. We are now obtaining additional information about the utilization of the fish and game resources and more importantly about the users and their preferences.

The department is also expanding its work in park visitor studies and household surveys. We are co-operating with the federal government in the Canada outdoor recreation demand survey and with The Ontario Department of Tourism and Information in the tourism and outdoor recreational planning study.

We have now completed the plan for the north Georgian Bay recreation reserve and will soon have in print a report and set of maps outlining the imaginative land-use zoning system which was developed for this area. You will recall that this attractive part of Ontario was set aside by legislation some years ago because of its outstanding recreational potential and relative proximity to Toronto.

This report is the culmination of extensive studies by outside consultants and experts within my department, coupled with extensive public participation in its formulation. The planning concept which has been developed for this area will be extended to other parts of the province. My department is also involved in the interdepartmental planning activities concerned with regional development and regional government.

A record number of people enjoyed our 108 provincial parks last year. Day use increased 16 per cent over 1969, reaching 12 million visitations. An even greater increase in overnight camping was recorded in 1970. While the fine weather experienced last summer was undoubtedly a factor in this tremendous increase in use, there can be no doubt that we must be prepared to accommodate a steadily increasing number of people in our provincial park system.

Two new parks, Carillon and Sandbar Lake were opened last year to serve the growing public demand, and many new facilities were added to existing parks. This year, two more parks will be opened to the public—McCrae Point on Lake Simcoe just east of Orillia, and Shoals Provincial Park on Highway 101 between Wawa and Chapleau.

A number of other sites throughout the province will be available for limited use while they are under development this year. These include Tremblay Beach on Lake St. Clair, Frontenac north of Kingston, the Kendall winter recreation area near Orono, Fushimi Lake near Hearst, and Iroquois Beach near Port Burwell. In addition, development will be started on Charleston Lake in Leeds county, and Methodist Point in Simcoe county.

It is our policy to provide a wide variety of recreational opportunities both in the provincial parks system and on other public lands. For example, plans for 1971 include the development of new public skiing areas, an expansion of canoe routes and wild river parks, more cross-country snowmobile trails and the preservation of additional historic sites.

In keeping with this policy of diversity, I am pleased to report on our plans to establish the first underwater park in Canada. Fathom Five Provincial Park, to be located off the Bruce Peninsula, will protect nearly a score of shipwrecks ranging from old sailing vessels to early steam tugs.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: An exciting interpretive programme will provide both diving and non-diving visitors with an explanation of the fascinating history and unique ecology of the Bruce Peninsula.

As a result of the planning work carried out on the north Georgian Bay recreational reserve and in response to the growing public desire for wilderness experiences, it is our intention to convert Killarney Provincial Park to a primitive park. All existing logging licences have now been relocated outside the park boundaries, making way for the establishment of wilderness zones in major sections of the park including the Killarney-Ontario Society of Artists Muriel Lake area. A programme will be initiated this year to remove the remaining nonconforming uses in other parts of the park in order to achieve a primitive setting throughout the park.

Also in this same vein, Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to be able to say that we are near agreement with the federal government in our negotiations to establish a national park of over 400 square miles in the Pukaskwa area on the northeast shore of Lake Superior. I might add that we are also studying areas for another national park in southern Ontario.

Many of our urban residents are ardent hunters. To alleviate the growing shortage of hunting areas in southern Ontario, long-range land acquisition and landowner agreement programmes have been established. The former will provide multi-purpose public recreation areas for year round use, while the latter will permit hunting on properties owned by private citizens, municipalities and conservation authorities. Fifty agreements have already been signed.

Wildlife populations, particularly deer, have experienced the most difficult winter in the 18 years for which snow depth records have been kept. In the southern deer range, snow accumulated continuously from the first week of December until the second week of March. While the cold was not extreme in comparison with other winters, the chill factor attributable to wind was greater than usual.

In the most extreme areas, four-foot snow depths were reported. Fortunately in some areas one or two short thaws followed by cold weather created a crust on which deer could walk, but this condition was not general. The cutting of trails and browse helped deer to reach food supplies in many of the yards. Experience has demonstrated that similar severe conditions in 1958-1959 and 1959-1960 winters caused serious mortality. Surveys are being conducted to determine the extent of winter deer mortality.

My department's land acquisition programme has also been directed to meet the diverse needs of our citizens.

The Niagara Escarpment, stretching from Niagara to Tobermory, is one of the great natural features of Ontario's landscape. The government's recognition of the escarpment's value to the people of Ontario led to the implementation of a number of Niagara Escarpment study recommendations, including a large-scale programme to acquire areas of outstanding natural beauty which could be developed for park and recreational use. As our contribution to this programme we have acquired over the past year 3,030 acres of prime recreational land at a cost of just over $1.71 million.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): They could have bought it for half too.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Elsewhere, significant purchases included 70 acres containing the Indian burial mounds on the Long Sault Rapids near Rainy River. These are the largest native monuments in Canada constructed by prehistoric Indians about 2,000 years ago. Another 300 acres in Burleigh township northeast of Peterborough were acquired to preserve the Peterborough petroglyphs. These mysterious rock writings are the most extensive of their kind in eastern North America. Archaeological studies indicate that they are linked to prehistoric people, evidence of whom is found around the globe south of the Arctic circle. Casual visitation of this undeveloped site is already 2,000 people per year.

Our purchases are not limited to park lands. For example, last year we acquired 4,620 acres for fish and wildlife management and 4,316 acres for reforestation and forest management.

On March 19 I directed that all sales of Crown land for cottages be stopped. Thereafter, Crown lands for this purpose will be available on a lease basis only. Procedures for leasing are now being developed and will be implemented when adequate land use plans have been prepared.

Our action in instituting leasing of Crown lands for cottages recognizes the sensitivity of shoreline areas where most cottage sales occur. Improper development under private ownership can mar scenic values and impair healthful environment.

Leasing will preserve public title to these important areas and permit conversion to public use in the future, if and when this should become desirable. Also, leasing under the conditions we propose will ensure that residents of this province will be given consideration ahead of non-residents in obtaining sites for cottages on the lakes of the province most suited to cottage development.

Except for two peak periods in June and August, the 1970 fire season was normal and the department was able to hold the burned-over acreage well below the 10-year average. In 1971, we plan to continue developing new technology to increase the effectiveness of our initial fire attack. Land-based fire bomber aircraft will be employed for the first time this year to drop fire-retardant liquids.

Of vital concern to the department is the economic health and vigour of Ontario's forest industry. Softwood lumber and plywood prices have shown some improvement in the last few months and prospects are bright for the remainder of the year.

The pulp and paper industry has not fared nearly so well due mainly, but not entirely, to the disastrous effect on earnings of the revaluation of the Canadian dollar. Every possible means of improving the economic viability of this segment of our industry is being explored. Reducing the cost of transporting wood through the rationalization of timber licences is one possibility. Lowering stumpage charges in remote areas is another.

The production of pulp chips from saw-mill and veneer mill residues has continued to grow and has now reached the point where three-quarters of a million tons are being produced annually. This amount represents a more efficient utilization of Ontario's current timber harvests.

Mr. Sargent: And who is getting the money out of it?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The prospects for still further increases are encouraging, particularly with the recent development of independently-owned roundwood chip mills.

A substantial expansion of the forest regeneration programme is planned in 1971, including the planting of approximately 20 million more nursery stock seedlings. The total regeneration effort this year is expected to reach a record level of 155,000 acres treated and 70 million seedlings planted on Crown lands and agreement forests.

Steps are also being taken to upgrade the quality of the nursery stock to improve survival; to develop and test new silvicultural equipment; to increase the efficiency of regeneration techniques; and to modify harvest cutting to ensure maximum environmental protection and a continuing supply of industrial wood.

The department's contribution to the Ontario seasonal employment programme has provided work for approximately 1,600 men during the last four months. Several hundred separate projects were undertaken across the province, including dead tree removal in the provincial parks, improvement of sanitation facilities, fish and wildlife habitat improvement, trail construction, campground development, road right-of-way clearing and timber improvement projects.

I am pleased to announce a substantial expansion in our summer student employment programme in 1971-1972, which will make it possible for my department to provide summer jobs for nearly 5,000 students. The increase in regular summer employment includes 150 additional junior rangers and 250 students working in the provincial parks, as well as approximately 1,000 secondary and post-secondary school students working in the new provincial students' programme called SWEEP.

In concluding my remarks, Mr. Chairman, I would like to re-emphasize the goal of The Department of Lands and Forests. It is our goal to provide a continuing combination of resource development, outdoor recreation and quality environment which is most consistent with the social and economic well-being of the citizens of this province. All of our plans and activities are—and will continue to be—dedicated to the achievement of that goal.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the minister for providing me, earlier today, with a copy of the remarks he was going to make this evening. I am sorry that I was unable to do the same for him, because I did not have them completed. Nor do I have them now, but I will go ahead and cover some of the areas that are of concern to the people of this province in regard to The Department of Lands and Forests and its operations, and the other areas of government that perhaps could be supplying more support to this department and to the minister.

I would like to make a few remarks concerning the budget last week of the Treasurer, as it concerns this department. The Treasurer in his budget indicated the preference of this government, this Tory government, for placing funds in the hands of the private corporate sector, to create employment. The alternative of direct government expenditure to create employment was turned down and nowhere else in the estimates is it more noticeable than in this department.

This department is more closely associated with those areas of the province where the highest rate of unemployment exists than any other department. The minister and I, and the critic of the New Democratic Party as well, represent areas of the province where unemployment is double the provincial average rate.

Outside of the SWEEP programme and the other programme that the minister indicated tonight—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): SEED and SOLE!

Mr. R. S. Smith: Seed and soul?

Mr. Stokes: SEED and SOLE!

Mr. R. S. Smith: Well it is a government without a heart; I do not know about its soul. I will not comment on that.

But the department's other programme, the Ontario seasonal employment programme, has done very little in our specific area. I think the total amount for the Nipissing district was $9,000, and it created somewhere in the area of five or six part-time jobs for two or three months.

Mr. Sargent: Only $9,000? They spent that on booze in one night.

Mr. R. S. Smith: This is hardly a very great amount when you consider that more than 800 people were on the unemployment insurance rolls in my area. And I am sure that the same problems exist in the areas of the minister and in most of the areas of the northern part of the province, where this department is perhaps the area of government closest to the people.

Direct capital expenditures would and could create immediate employment in areas where the need for the jobs is most acute. Again I would point out that in the northern part of the province, the percentage of people unemployed over the past few months has been between eight per cent and nine per cent. Most of those people who were unemployed—or a good number of those people—were the unskilled tradesmen and the semi-skilled tradesmen who could have been, and could be in the very near future, employed in capital works projects in the parks of this province if the government had chosen to follow a different line than that pronounced by the Treasurer in his budget of last week.

I do not believe that government must do everything for people, but certainly when moneys are being expended by a government to create employment, there are other ways of doing it than by providing it for the corporate structures of our province to increase their profits. I believe that in the northern part of the province and in the eastern part of this province there will be very little direct result from the programme of tax benefits to large corporations. Most of that money, if it is going to work, will be spent in the secondary manufacturing industries of this province, and, as the minister is well aware, there are very few of those in the districts that he or I represent, or that are represented by the northern or eastern part of the province.

I think then that perhaps the major critique of the budget and the estimates of his department could be directed to the lack of funds set aside for capital expenditures within our parks and in the other areas of the department that would create jobs in the areas of the province where they are most badly needed.

I would like to spend a few minutes on some of the announcements that have been made by the minister and by the other officials of the government, or members of the cabinet. Three or four weeks ago in the Throne Speech, it was announced that the government had accepted in part the policy of the Liberal Party, and had indicated that it would stop the sale of Crown lands. We accept this as a move forward by the government, and as a submission of the government to the concern of the public, rather than what it would have done if it had been left to its own devices.

However, as soon as the minister made that statement the question arose as to how the leases would be extended to the individuals who applied. I certainly expected that, perhaps in his opening statement tonight, the minister would indicate to us what procedures would be followed in order that people may obtain these lands.

As he is well aware, in different districts of the province there were a number of subdivisions ready to go ahead on the sale basis, and a week and a half before the announcement in the Throne Speech the districts were advised to withhold any properties they had for sale. Over the winter months, however, many people made inquiries, and some people had been told that lots would be available to them this spring. The minister indicated last summer that he was contemplating some change in the policy of the government in regard to this, and I should think that the decision was made a good while ago.

I do not think the decision was based primarily on the report that was tabled here last Thursday. There were many other considerations which had to be taken into account before that report was published. But I do believe that the minister has had plenty of time to devise a system by which these people who have been waiting for some time could be given the opportunity immediately to lease these properties that were available under sale.

I notice in his remarks earlier tonight he said, "Procedures for leasing are now being developed and will be implemented when adequate land use plans have been prepared." I find that a little difficult to understand, but I take it that he means when the subdivision plans have been prepared. The point of fact is that in many areas of the province there are subdivision plans that were ready to go for sale and I cannot understand why the difficulty in establishing a policy to provide a basis of lease in a very short period of time.

Many people are concerned and most people have shown their good faith in that they are prepared to accept the government policy of leasing and are awaiting the decision of the minister in regard to this matter.

A report that was tabled last week indicated a number of very interesting things, but perhaps the statement that appears on page 15 in regard to summary of evaluation sums up the reason for the decision of the minister to change the policy of the government.

I will read that statement:

It appears that the present method of disposing of Crown land falls short of the new departmental goals and objectives because it does not meet the environmental standards and the social and economic benefits criteria of these objectives. To meet these criteria would require revision in the rate structure and the imposition of more adequate control over land use.

As I understand it then, the government feels that, through leasing, they can control the land to meet the goals of the department in providing the economic and social benefits to the people of the province.

I believe that this has been readily accepted by a good proportion of the people in this province for a good long time. It certainly indicates that the arguments that have been presented by the government opposing the suggestion that Crown lands should not be sold really did not hold water when it came right down to what the goals and the objectives of the department were.

I should think that the goals and the objectives of the department have been a long way from the policy of the executive council for a good number of years. The former Prime Minister (Mr. Robarts) indicated last year that we should not implement such a policy because of the fact that many of our people could not go down to Florida and buy property as there was legislation passed there to retaliate against our policy. I guess this might be compared to the "chicken and egg" war.

But on the other hand—and it is pointed out in the minister's own report—no non-residents of the State of Florida are able to buy Crown land in that state. It is also pointed out in here that most of the other jurisdictions close to us, and including other provinces of Canada, have had a policy similar to what we have now taken up.

This however, does not deal with the whole problem. It only deals with a small but significant 15 per cent of the sales of cottage properties that will take place. I believe that the government should move ahead to study methods by which the sale of private lands in recreational land-use areas could also be controlled—

Mr. Sargent: The government has sold us down the river consistently.

Mr. R. S. Smith: —so that they do not fall into the hands of non-Canadian citizens.

An hon. member: The river has got mercury in it.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I believe that it is important that the government establish some method by which they can obtain private recreational land before they move out of the hands of Canadian citizens.

Mr. Sargent: Hear, hear!

Mr. R. S. Smith: The Land Acquisition Corporation that was announced in the budget will have $20 million made available to it this year, and perhaps it would be a significant move if this department were provided with authority to step in where private land sales are being made and, with the funds available through the Land Acquisition Corporation, to obtain first option on this type of property.

Along with that I believe that they should move ahead with a bill such as was presented by the Minister of Mines last year, when he was a private member, to control the sale of tax lands from the municipality so that the provincial government has first option on the lease as well. The fact that the minister has brought in legislation—

Mr. Sargent: They are trying to wake themselves up over there.

Mr. R. S. Smith: —to control the sale of 15 per cent of the recreational Crown lands in the area will not really answer the problem as it exists, and as the growth in non-Canadian ownership will increase. The facts are likely that within the private sector there will now be more sales to non-Canadian citizens, which might even offset the policy that has been established by the minister. I think that his first step is a good one, but it certainly will not cure the problem unless he takes the initiative to control private sales as well.

The other point I would like to bring up is in regard to the announcement of the Treasurer of the discontinuance of the residential fishing licence. I will not go back over the history of the introduction of the fishing licence, which I believe was done by the former Treasurer, perhaps not with the concurrence of the minister and maybe even not in conjunction with him. At that time, the announcement seemed to come from the Treasurer, and the Minister of Lands and Forests was left, should we say, holding the bag—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Holding the rod.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Holding the licence anyway.

Particularly in the northern part of the province I think the minister experienced some difficulty, and even in his own riding there were a number of people who were rather irate about the residential fishing licence. This may be part of the reason why it has been done away with, but I think if we read the statements that the provincial Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) made the other day we should ask the minister for a further statement in regard to this. The minister said, and I quote:

This licence fee was introduced in 1968 as part of a general move to bring user fees more in line with the cost of services provided by The Department of Lands and Forests. While this objective remains generally valid—

Now that is the point that bothers me and I think will bother a good number of people. While this point is generally valid—I think the present Treasurer restates the reason that the previous Treasurer brought in the residential fishing licence.

He indicated that the user should pay for the fish and wildlife services that are provided through this department. Again, the present Treasurer, although he removed the fishing licences, indicated a belief in the same principle. I would expect from this that perhaps after the next election, if the Tories happen to be successful again, which is quite unlikely, we would have initiated another fishing licence, based on the same premise. Likely at a much higher cost too, to make sure that it does pay more than $1.6 million. I would ask that the minister state unequivocally that this is not the case and that the fishing licence, as far as he is concerned and as far as the government is concerned, is a thing of the past and perhaps something that they would not like to remember. I think it is important that the minister allay the fears of the people that have been created by—

Mr. Sargent: That is the only thing that the hon. Treasurer of Ontario and Minister of Economics has to hold his hat on.

Mr. R. S. Smith: —the rather ambiguous statement of the Treasurer.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): That is nonsense!

Mr. R. S. Smith: The minister has read what he said. He said he still accepts the same principle, and the minister obviously does, too.

Mr. Sargent: The $3 Treasurer! The $3 fishing licence.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Sargent: That is the biggest thing he has got in his budget— $3.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Three dollars!

Mr. Sargent: And more expensive beer!

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks in regard to the question of mercury pollution as it has affected the lakes and the fish, particularly the fish in the northern part of the province. We have had long discussions in regard to the fishing in Lake Erie and the question of the Dow Chemical suit which the government has brought against that company.

In the area of professional legal expertise, I think that many other members of the Legislature can, perhaps, be more critical of that than I, and I believe they have done that over the past few weeks. It appears that the move to sue Dow was nothing more than a charade of the government to cover up their inefficiencies in the production of an effective control against pollution across the province.

However, I would just like to review generally what has happened in regard to the fisheries within the northern part of the province particularly. I think it was early last spring that there were indications that mercury pollution had crept into the lakes of the northern part of the province as well as those on the boundary of the south. Some limited catches were taken and through the results of the experimentation that was done on those, a statement was made by the minister—I believe it was in late September—in regard to the percentage of mercury contamination in the lakes of northern and northwestern Ontario.

Most of the sampling had been done on a very small scale and the fact that the minister even made the statements that were made and produced the results that had been obtained has done a great amount of damage to the tourist operations in many parts of northern Ontario, particularly in the northwest, where it has been found that a number of operators, as I understand it, are not even going to open this year.

Of particular concern to me, however, was the fact that in the release of the minister in September of last year, there was a list of the concentrations of mercury in fish in the Lake Nipissing area. Through the release of that notification of the minister there appeared a great amount of comment in the Toronto newspapers as well as in a good number of the American publications.

The facts were that a very small number of fish had been tested from Lake Nipissing and I believe that the minister, in conjunction with the Minister of Energy and Resources, did a disservice to that area of the province by publishing these results which did not indicate that a wide enough experimental study had been done to produce a banning, in effect, of the eating of the fish from that lake.

During the following three or four months The Department of Lands and Forests did a much wider sampling of the lake and the results that were published at the end of January, or the first week in February, indicated that there was only one species of fish which was above the one-half parts per million level, and that the main species in the lake were all safe for human consumption.

I agree with the minister and with the department that if the results that were obtained had shown the contamination of mercury above that level then certainly we would have had to accept the fact that people should have been advised that this was the case, and that digestion of any large quantities of these fish could seriously damage their health. There is no question about that, but the fact of the matter is that the minister's first statement was based on a very small sampling and created an economic effect on that area that is going to be very difficult for the operators to overcome.

In the northwestern part of the province it is a different situation because there the fact did remain that a good number of lakes, particularly in the English water system, did have mercury contamination in the fish above what is considered to be the safe level. The fact of the matter is, the first reports that came out of the department have done a great deal of damage to the economic stability of some areas of the province. I believe that the government, and the minister himself, should have been more careful to examine fully, what turned out to be the results of inaccurate testings that were taken from the lakes.

I believe the government should provide a much more active programme to promote these areas, particularly with regard to the type of fishing that can be done in these areas with safety, and look into the whole matter of where and when mercury pollution is at a level that contaminates the fish.

Mr. Chairman, there are a number of other areas in regard to fish and wildlife that I would like to speak about, but perhaps we will cover them on the individual votes.

I would like to mention a few things with regard to the development of parks in the province and I would like to indicate to the minister that I was gratified by his announcement this evening, that the Ontario government was coming to some agreement with the federal government in the establishment of the national parks.

It has been my impression, and I believe this to be correct, that the reason why the government has not entered into a previous agreement with the federal government is that we did not want to give up the right to the resources based on the lands that the federal government wished to acquire. Apparently, the new agreements that have been made by the federal government with the Province of Quebec did not include a turnover of the property concerned to the federal government.

They have been done on a 99-year lease basis and the first 60 years of the lease are without encumbrance to the federal government; but after that the province has the right to take back the lands. At the end of the total lease, they do revert to provincial ownership. I would presume that the negotiations that are taking place now on the properties on the north shore of Lake Superior are on that same basis and I would hope that the government will be successful in the establishment of a national park there. However, I do not think the fact that the lands must be turned over to the federal government should prove to be a stumbling block in the establishment of these parks.

I would like to mention a few things in regard to Quetico Park and Algonquin and Killarney, although I notice in the minister's remarks again this evening that he has indicated that all logging operations will be removed from Killarney Park. I would congratulate him on that, and ask him why he cannot extend this to include Quetico Park.

It has been the policy of the party to which I belong that the logging and timber operations should be stopped in Quetico Park which should remain as one of the few wilderness areas that are accessible to a good number of people.

Our policy in regard to Algonquin Park has been somewhat different to that and we have agreed in principle to the proposals that were made by the first provisional plan for Algonquin Park.

However, we are coming to the point where I believe that the people in this province are deserving of at least some information as to what decisions will be made on that park. The advisory committee to the minister, that was appointed about 20 months ago, has spent a considerable amount of time in producing what they consider to be a good policy recommendation to the minister for the use of that park. However, the minister has chosen not to make public the statement of the advisory committee. As a member of that committee, I question his right not to make it public.

An hon. member: Hear, hear!

Mr. R. S. Smith: I believe that it is not an inter-departmental document. It is the report of a committee which was established by the minister and which he took great pains to announce both in this Legislature and across the province, and I believe that the minister has used this committee as a buffer since the time of its appointment to take the heat off the government and himself in regard to the decisions that must be made within that park and in regard to the decisions of policy as to how the park would be developed.

I believe that the minister received that report about five weeks ago, during the last week in March. Since that time he has been in contact with the committee through some of the people within his department, and I have been led to believe by what has taken place that the minister is not prepared to let the public know in the province just what the advisory committee is proposing.

Mr. Stokes: What has he proposed?

Mr. R. S. Smith: That is the problem I have.

Mr. Stokes: Tell me; I will not tell them.

Mr. R. S. Smith: As a member of that committee, I have indicated to the chairman by letter that I do not believe that I have the responsibility to withhold the recommendations of that committee for any longer a period of time than I think the minister in good conscience can take to read the report and decide what his feelings are on that report. The minister has had the report five weeks now, the committee has had—

Mr. Sargent: It has never sat since.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Pardon?

Mr. Sargent: It has never sat since.

Mr. R. S. Smith: The committee has had one meeting since that time, at which there were other documents provided to the committee; it has been very difficult as a member of the committee to decide why the other documents were provided, and what the committee was supposed to do with them. There were many on the committee who feel the same way, who are having some difficulty deciding just what the minister wants. I feel that it is a method of continuing the process, whether the committee has made a report or not.

I believe that the minister should certainly have the reports of his task force within the department and the recommendations of the task force on the implementation of different policies. I do not believe that those should be made public because they are inter-governmental reports requested by the minister of the civil servants within the department. But it is a different thing that a public body that has been appointed by the minister makes a report and there is even a hesitancy on the part of the minister to table the report.

I asked the minister some three weeks ago in the House when he would table the report and he said something about the fact that I should wait for the next meeting of the committee.

Mr. Sargent: That is tonight, is it?

Mr. R. S. Smith: No, the committee met on April 15, and a few days after that I went over and asked the minister again—although I did not do it in the Legislature; I asked him personally—if he would table the report, and of course I got the same answer: that he would look into it and decide whether it should be tabled or not. I think this is basically what he said. If I am wrong he can correct me.

The fact is that I would ask the minister that before we come to the vote that covers the recreational parks and that area of Algonquin Park during these estimates, he table that report so it can be discussed in the House both by him as the minister concerned, and by the other members of the Legislature who are concerned.

Mr. Chairman, I believe it is not only for the benefit of the members here that the report should be published; there are a good number of people in this province who are looking to see where Algonquin Park is going and even though the minister and the government may not accept the principles enunciated in that report, I do believe that the public is entitled to know what they are at this time.

I would like to make a few remarks as well in regard to the forest policy of this government as it has been established over the past 30 or 40 years or perhaps beyond that. I would like to look at it for a few moments both in the long term and as well in the short term.

We discussed at some length this same subject last year in the estimates, and I put forward some suggestions based on the Economic Council report which at that time had just been tabled for a few months. The minister did not agree with all the contents of that report, and in fact he objected to a good number of the recommendations and comments that were made within it.

We had some discussion too at the time in regard to the Ontario Professional Foresters Association, and the minister read a letter in the House from the president of that association. There were some comments made by myself and, I think, the former leader of the New Democratic Party which might not have been too complimentary to the minister or to some of the members of the Ontario Professional Foresters Association.

The president of the foresters' association thereafter, I believe, sent a letter to all the members of the Legislature in which some of his remarks were, I suppose, not too complimentary to me or to the member for York South (Mr. MacDonald). But really that was not of too great concern to me, because I suppose that perhaps my remarks did question whether the first letter was intentionally provided to the minister or not. Since I am not able to read either the mind of the minister or that of the president of the foresters' association, I will leave it by saying that it is up to them to decide in their own conscience just what was the reason for the use of the letter in the Legislature and whether it was provided for that purpose or not.

Second to that, there was some discussion in the Legislature about the methods used by the Economic Council in obtaining the information for the report. Apparently Mr. Cranston, who has since been retired one way or another from the Economic Council, was a little annoyed at the letter that the president of the Ontario Professional Foresters Association had written to the minister. He replied to the Ontario Professional Foresters Association and he happened to send to me a copy of his letter. I will just indicate Mr. Cranston's feelings in regard to this matter by quoting the last paragraph. He is addressing this to the Ontario Professional Foresters Association. His last paragraph reads: "Might we suggest that your association is in a unique position to postulate a forward policy for the forest industry in Ontario." Then he ends up with a question, "Do you contemplate such an undertaking?"

In other words, I think the Ontario Economic Council—and he was writing on behalf of the council—was really not too pleased with the input of the Ontario Professional Foresters Association to the policy of forest management within our province. Perhaps on both sides there is a major conflict of, perhaps, personalities or perhaps interests, but the minister shakes his head. I do not know.

I have read both letters and certainly there is a conflict of some kind. I am sure he has read both letters as well, but the minister and the foresters' association at that time indicated there were many of the recommendations and comments of the Council within the Council's report that he and his department did not accept.

I would like him to explain to me just how the Ontario Economic Council arrived at the decisions that they made and the pronouncements that they made within their report. It is important to note that the former deputy minister of The Department of Lands and Forests, until three days ago, was involved; it is right in this letter:

In 1964 when the Council first became involved in a review of Ontario's forest industry, a subcommittee of the Council consisting of Mr. Bailey, Mr. Silverside, Professor Love, and Mr. Ian Butters undertook to prepare to work for the Ontario Economic Council report.

It is rather hard to imagine how the deputy minister of this department, who invariably is influential in the setting of the policy of this department, could be involved in an independent study of the policy of the department.

This independent study of the Ontario Economic Council, apparently in which Mr. Bailey was directly involved, recommends a number of things that the minister is not prepared to accept. I am not suggesting for one minute that this is anything to do with Mr. Bailey's moving out of this department. I am sure that he has reached higher heights because of the service that he gave to the government and to his department. But I find it difficult to understand how the minister can be so critical of the Ontario Economic Council's report, as he was last year within these estimates, and at the same time realize that his own deputy minister was instrumental in the development of that report itself. Perhaps the minister could explain this to me after when he comments on my remarks.

He shakes his head. Does the minister have a problem following what I am trying to ask him?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: You do one side while I do this.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Okay. Mr. Chairman, there are some other remarks I would like to make with regard to the timber industry, particularly at the present time. There are a good number of producers in our province who are having some financial difficulty in keeping their heads above water particularly because of the loss of foreign markets and the difficulty of staying competitive in the domestic market as well.

There is no question that the foreign export market of the Ontario forest industries have been hurt by the continual increase in the value of the Canadian dollar. There is no question that the home market has been decreased considerably because of the competition that has been created by the development of a number of plateboard and particleboard manufacturers in other provinces of Canada.

Many of the difficulties, however, do have a reflection on the policy of the present government, particularly in regard to the increased cost of production in Ontario and the lack of a programme, perhaps through the Ontario Development Corporation, to assist the present industries to re-tool or to expand in order that production costs may be decreased to compete in both the foreign and domestic markets.

The pulp and paper industry, the lumber industry, and the plateboard and particleboard producers lost their competitive position over the past four or five years perhaps because of the development and the interest of the federal government in its economic expansion programmes in the less affluent parts of Canada.

However, the other provincial governments have moved in to provide a considerable amount of assistance supplementary to the federal programmes.

Mr. Stokes: Why does the member not say the problems they are in are the result of the economic policies in Ottawa?

Mr. R. S. Smith: The hon. member for Thunder Bay can say that. He is going to be up in a few minutes.

Mr. Stokes: I thought the member would want to say that.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I did say that the problems we are in was partly because of the programmes of economic expansion in some of the other areas of Canada that have been fostered by the federal government.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): The member cushions the blow rather nicely.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Trudeau does not care about Ontario.

Mr. R. S. Smith: But the fact of the matter is that there are many areas included in the cost of production in Ontario that have been affected directly by policies of this government. The availability of resources has been of continuing concern to many of the producers. I am happy to see the minister used the same words that I was going to use in regard to rationalization of timber licences within this province.

I do not know whether he would indicate that he is going to go as far, perhaps, as some other people would in regard to this rationalization, but it is important that the timber licence policy and the other methods by which timber and raw materials are made available to producers be completely reviewed. Because of the costs of transportation which are included in the cost of the raw material, there is no question that the privilege that has been extended to many of the timber licence holders in this province should be discontinued and a more rational approach should be taken to provide the raw material to the secondary manufacturing industry that is near the site of that material.

This basically has created large economic problems and costs of production for many of the producers.

There is also the question of the Ontario Hydro rates that have increased so dramatically over the past four or five years and, according to the chairman of the Ontario Hydro, will continue to increase at least at the same rate or perhaps at an even extended rate over the next five years. These two costs are under the direct control of government as well as the cost of stumpage and logging tax. I notice the minister mentioned that they were considering the changes in the stumpage charges in the far northern parts, I expect, of the province to help to create industries in that area because of the lack of use of the resource that has taken place.

I believe as well that the stumpage charges should be tied to the economic situation as it exists for the operators right across the province, regardless of whether they are in the far northern parts or in the mid-north. There is no question that stumpage charges can be geared to the economic conditions that exist over a specific time.

Since it is a major cost in the purchase of raw materials for the secondary industries, I believe that governments could decrease their income from this tax in certain periods when the company is in competitive difficulties, and increase the stumpage charges when the markets are better and the profits are higher.

These three areas, then, are considerations that should be taken by this government which could have an immediate effect on the competitive position of the pulp and paper and other forest industry-based producers. The government has continually refused to use the hydro electric rates of the province as an economic tool in assistance to the slow-growth areas, but I believe because of the fast increasing rates of Hydro, it is essential that a rationalization be made there as well.

The minister is aware of a certain number of smaller producers that are in difficulty and I would like to point out to him the one that is in my own district. The Abitibi mill in Sturgeon Falls has, over the past few months, had to reduce its number of employees by about 20 per cent in order that they might attempt to keep themselves in some type of competition with the industries that have been established in the eastern part of Canada as well as in the foreign markets.

Over the past four years in that one industry, the hydro rates have increased by almost 90 per cent and the cost of coal has increased by about 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ per cent, so you can see that the cost of power for production in that mill has increased by an average of 63 per cent and will cost that company more than \$400,000 per year more in 1971 than it did in 1966. At the same time, and rightfully so, there are increasing labour costs.

They have other costs increasing at a lesser level than their energy and labour costs but altogether the costs of production have increased an average of more than 40 per cent over that same period. At the same time there has been no increase in the price that the end-product is being sold at in the domestic and the foreign market, so you can understand that in their plateboard mill they have gone from a position where they were showing a profit to where, last year, the losses in that small mill were over $1 million.

For this reason they have had to rationalize their whole production and of course the first place they look to save money is in the work force, and as a result more than 80 people have lost their jobs in the past three months.

I think there are a number of other areas in the province where this same thing has happened, and I think that it is imperative that the government also take their share of the responsibility in providing a competitive position for the producers. The use of the hydro rate structure, I believe, should be used to alleviate these specific problems and the stumpage charges, in those areas where it is a major factor in the cost of the raw material, should also be used to attempt to alleviate the acute problem that exists today.

Mr. Chairman, I think I have covered, as well as I could under the circumstances, the things that are of particular concern to the people who look to this department for guidance and who look to this department, through their local industry, for employment within our province. Perhaps under the specific votes I will have more comments and some specific questions.

Mr Chairman: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, at this late hour I am going to attempt to provide a critique for the New Democratic Party of the activities of The Department of Lands and Forests since we last examined these estimates and to offer, to the greatest extent possible, some constructive ideas that might do the thing that the minister and his department are aspiring to—the wise management of our renewable natural resources.

I do want to congratulate the minister for the reorganization in his department. I want to say that the decentralization of decision-making powers within the department is a positive step inasmuch as people in the field, who have first hand knowledge of the situation, are obviously in a much better position to decide the policy than somebody sitting in the ivory tower down here in Toronto.

I think it is fair to say, from looking under the gallery here this evening, that you have quite a battery of advisors from the ivory tower. A good many of them did get their background from a long tenure of service in the north. You know that is where things are happening; that is where the resource is, and that is where, to the greatest extent that it is possible for me to do, I am going to attempt to see that a lot more happens, insofar as this department is concerned.

I want to wish those who have stepped up the ladder all the best and hope that they will, to the greatest extent possible, get The Department of Lands and Forests' wagon on the track and really make maximum use, for the benefit of the people of Ontario, of the huge store of resources that we do have.

I was a bit disturbed, Mr. Chairman, as I followed the minister in his remarks, that he went to page seven of a nine page document before he even mentioned what I consider to be the most important aspect of this department, from an economic point of view at least.

It is true that people in ever increasing numbers have become concerned about recreation and optimum use of leisure time; it is true that people are looking for diversion by way of hunting, fishing, boating, swimming, and recreation of every type; but I think that one must not lose sight of the fact that the timber resources that are in such abundance, particularly in the north, are not getting the kind of attention that they deserve.

It is quite significant, I think, that the minister should read through nine pages and only on page seven did he come upon what I consider to be the most important aspect of this department's operations. The Department of Lands and Forests will spend $77.3 million during the forthcoming fiscal year, while net receipts will be in the order of $40 million, for a net deficit of $27 million. Resource development will cost $44.9 million, while recreational expenditures will amount to $25.3 million, and administration, $8 million.

Revenues from logging tax and timber charges will amount to $16.8 million, but the cost of operating the timber branch will be $18.5 million with an additional $13 million for forest protection, plus $2 million for forest access roads, some of which comes back to the province over an extended period of time.

While one would not deny the fact that the harvesting of our forest resources provides about 78,000 jobs with an annual payroll of $400 million, it seems reasonable to expect that direct provincial government charges should at least cover the cost of operating the timber branch and a fair share of forest protection. This could be accomplished by greater harvesting of the unused allowable cut and not as an additional charge on present producers. According to most recent statistics, only 52 per cent of the allowable cut of conifers and 11 per cent of hardwoods are being presently utilized. These figures are calculated on a sustained yield basis, so one has to assume that a significant amount of our timber resources are over-mature and being wasted. This cannot be permitted to continue when we have such a high rate of unemployment, a surplus of raw material in Ontario and Ontario importing more lumber and more plywood than it produces.

The total productive forest area in Ontario is 165,700 square miles, of which 90 per cent is Crown land, and yet only 400,000 acres are being harvested annually. It is interesting to note, Mr. Chairman, that the minister mentioned in his opening remarks that they were going to get up to about 155,000 acres reforested this year, when we have 400,000 acres being harvested. He will get up and he will rationalize and he will say, "Well, this is what we are actually doing but we are leaving to nature a certain portion, and we are scarifying a certain portion," and I have heard this for the last three years.

All I am suggesting is that the Brodie report in 1968, and indeed the Kennedy report in 1948, as well as the Ontario Economic Council report referred to by the hon. member for Nipissing, all mentioned that we must do more with regard to regeneration. We are not even taking care of the present amount that is being harvested, let alone catching up with the backlog that has built up to such significant proportions over the past number of years.

I am not suggesting we have a shortage of wood in the Province of Ontario at the present time. I am suggesting that we have more than enough wood. I am saying that if we are going to maintain Ontario's relative position in world markets, when one considers that the forecast is for a doubling of the requirements for paper products up until 1980 and a quadrupling up to the year 2000—if we are going to maintain our relative position, reforesting 155,000 acres of 400,000 acres in annual cuts just is not enough.

It is estimated that our forests can sustain an allowable cut of 1.8 billion cunits—one cunit is 100 cubic feet of solid wood—and 87 per cent of this is on Crown land. At present, only 16 per cent of the allowable cut is harvested annually from Crown land, so that the minister can see that we have all kinds of elbow room here to create more job opportunities by more optimum utilization of our forest resources if we would provide some of the incentives that my hon. friend from Nipissing spoke of a little earlier.

Is it little wonder, Mr. Chairman, that the conservationists are perplexed when they see trees being cut in provincial parks when we are only using 16 per cent of our allowable cut? Thirty-eight companies have under licence 93,618 square miles of our Crown land. Many of these companies are utilizing less than 50 per cent of the allowable cut under licence to them, while other entrepreneurs are begging for cutting limits. One company, which has no limits of its own, has effective control of the hardwood species—that is, birch and poplar—on 15,000 square miles of prime forest land while another operator has been inactive for two years for the lack of timber. That is a disgrace, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): Hear, hear!

Mr. Stokes: Based on information from The Department of Lands and Forests, the northwestern Ontario Design for Development goal is to provide 4,000 to 5,000 jobs in the pulp and paper industry. I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that this is not going to happen under the present administrative policies of this minister and this department. I alluded to one entrepreneur who has been inactive for the past two years for the want of raw resources to maintain his operation.

I would like to draw to the attention of this House that at one time the prime licence holder had the final determination as to who cut any particular species on the limits under licence to them. This was not a very good arrangement. It meant that a lot of people who needed wood for their own purpose and for varied uses, were unable to get it because most of these prime licence holders had effective control over about 90 per cent of Crown land under licence to them and effectively excluded anyone else who wanted it.

So the minister issued a directive to three of the prime licence holders—Domtar, Abitibi and Great Lakes—that they were to take all of the hardwood species on those 15,000 square miles. He passed off that responsibility from his own shoulders and the shoulders of his own department and gave it to another party. The minister took it away from the prime licence holder and gave it to another user. This is a relatively small operation and yet this company is allowed to play God on over 15,000 square miles as it affects the utilization of the birch and the poplar species, a species that is under-utilized to the tune of 89 per cent in this province.

I chatted with the person over the phone over the weekend. I found out that he did get some wood. He got 500 cords of birch wood, but he did not get it from this department. He did not get it from any one of the three prime licence holders that I spoke of. He did not get it from the company which was protected by the directive issued by this minister. He got it from another prime licence holder, one of the more responsible in the industry, Kimberly-Clark.

So he is going to have some wood to cut this year, but he has been without wood for the past two seasons because this minister saw fit to allow one relatively small company to allocate timber which is so badly under-utilized. I am speaking specifically of the birch and poplar species at this time.

Mr. Chairman, this cannot be allowed to continue. It is high time that the minister accepted his responsibility for the proper re-allocation of timber limits based on need and on maximum use on a sustained yield basis.

Having regard for the unused allowable cut, there is sufficient unused forest resources to sustain at least four more mills, each producing about 600 tons per day, which is just about as large as any we have in the province at the present time. This government, in co-operation with the federal government and private enterprise, must enhance the competitive position of the forest products industry by financial assistance in plant modernization and plant expansion, better utilization of exploitable forest resources through a continued programme of timber limit allocation—that is what I was speaking of a little earlier—and financial assistance in access road construction. This is something that is quite acceptable to most people in the province.

All one has to do is listen to the conservationists who have been asking that all cutting be halted in provincial parks, but they are quite amenable to the idea of reallocation of timber limits and providing limits outside of provincial parks, even to the extent of building access roads and reallocation of timber limits in order to achieve such an end.

Several lumber, plywood, veneer and other wood-producing industries, particularly in northern Ontario, could be sustained by using under-utilized forest species. This will only be possible if integrated logging and forest management practices, as recommended by the Kennedy report in 1948, the Brodie report in 1968 and the Ontario Economic Council in 1969 and 1970 are implemented.

Greater utilization of forest resources on a sustained yield basis could take The Department of Lands and Forests out of the red and allow it to become a producer of revenue instead of operating at a loss in excess of $25 million annually.

This department has a forest economic unit whose only activity, according to the annual report during the past year, was to make a survey of rural private landowner characteristics in southern Ontario, and a Christmas tree consumer survey in Metropolitan Toronto. This is by the admission of the minister's own department. If you do not believe me, read it in the annual report released just about two weeks ago.

One would have thought that they could have employed their time to much better advantage by implementing programmes that would foster a better use of timber resources, thus creating more employment and more revenue for the provincial treasury. It is only through sound resource management that this department will achieve its objective of the optimum continuing contribution of renewable resources production industries to the economy of Ontario and its communities.

Mr. Chairman, I have some other remarks that I would like to make about the activities of this department and, getting away from timber for a moment, I would like to refer to a condition that exists in this department that has disturbed me. It has disturbed a good many of the employees in this department at the lower echelons and I hope that it concerns the minister, and his advisers sitting under the gallery at the present time; I am very pleased to see them here in such significant numbers.

I would like to find out from the minister how many conservation officers are now employed by The Department of Lands and Forests; this is the law enforcement arm—the one that enforces the fish and game laws in the province.

Some of the conservation officers in this province are charged with the responsibility of patrolling 2,500 square miles at a time when we have a relative few, but a very troublesome few hundred fishermen who take advantage of the situation with regard to insufficient conservation officers to police our fish and game laws.

It is very unfair, I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that any conservation officer be charged with that responsibility—particularly in remote areas of the province where it is less accessible—for any one person to be charged with the responsibility of covering such a huge territory and ask them to do it with any degree of success.

I would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that the morale of these employees within the department has reached an all-time low due to the inability or the unwillingness of this department and this minister, to provide them with adequate assistance in order to patrol our forests and protect our fish and game.

When one considers that one group was stopped at the international border going over with something like 775 pickerel fillets. And that was the group that was caught. Think about the hundreds that are getting away with our precious resources, and I am speaking of our fish resources at the present time. I am also talking about those hunters who go into the forests and are looking for nothing but a trophy. They will allow hundreds and hundreds of pounds of meat to spoil, left to rot in the bush, just because they have paid for their hunting licence and think they have the right to waste our resources in this fashion.

I suggest to the minister, and to his department, that it will not be long before our fish and wildlife resources will be completely depleted, unless we have effective control of our fish and game laws in the province.

With regard to the reorganization that I spoke of earlier, and the discontent of a good many people at the lower echelons as a result of action taken to reclassify all former forestry technicians and all former wildlife technicians into one category of resource technician. This has caused a lot of animosity—certainly from what I can gather—throughout the province. I was wondering just how the minister is going to be able to justify this to his employees and maintain the esprit de corps that formerly existed in the department.

I wrote several letters to the minister on it and I did get replies. However, these replies certainly did not satisfy the people on whose behalf I was speaking. I am hoping that a little later on the minister will get up and explain the reasons why he took the action he did at the time that he did, when it was obviously met with such disfavour by people in his department. I do hope he will take into consideration the feelings of these people and, hopefully, that he will sit down in a realistic way with them to explain to them the reasons for it, and try at least to justify the action that he has taken.

I notice in going through the annual report that the minister does make mention of the resources development programme, which is undertaken by The Department of Lands and Forests with some financial assistance coming from the federal level. I had some first-hand experience of it last summer and I might say that I was quite impressed with what was going on in remote areas of the province—and I have been criticized for saying that The Department of Lands and Forests is the only provincial presence that is doing anything significant to assist our native people in the north.

At the expense of further criticism I am going to say I still believe that is a fact—that this department is the only provincial presence in the northern part of our province that really gives a damn about our native people. I will suggest, however, that in order to make even a small dent in the problems of those people more must be done.

I think the federal government should make more financial resources available to this department and I think this department should work much more closely with The Department of Provincial Secretary and Citizenship, which has the responsibility for Indian community development work. I think with much more co-operation—speaking of federal-provincial co-operation, and provincial interdepartmental co-operation—you could accomplish even more than you are at the present time, in an area where help is so badly needed.

I would like to have the minister assure me, since it appears in his annual report, that they are making sure the rights of our native people are being protected and that their best interests are served. I would like to have him explain, at a later time, just how this department is protecting the aboriginal rights of our first citizens—and I am speaking about their right to hunt, fish and to trap.

From what I can gather, this right is fast slipping away from our native people and I do not see the department standing up on behalf of these people and I think it is the only department that can effectively do this, since they do manage those resources insofar as other people in the province are concerned.

I would like to have the minister assert that he does abide by those treaty and aboriginal rights of our first citizens and assure this House and myself that those rights will be protected.

I want to turn briefly, Mr. Chairman, to the licences issued by this department. I would like to know how the issuers of licences are decided. I have had several complaints from people who are in the sporting goods business—who are in the business of catering to sportsmen—and yet a good many of them find it almost impossible to get the authority to issue the licences which go hand in hand with their operation. A good many people have suggested that these are political plums that are handed out by this department—

An hon. member: Oh, tut, tut, tut!

Mr. Stokes: I would not suggest that for one minute, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MacDonald: I would, and I can give you proof of it, right in York South; documented!

Mr. Stokes: I have had some degree of success in—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Nobody has written or spoken to me about it.

Mr. MacDonald: They predated this minister, to be truthful, but I think it is the system.

Mr. Stokes: All I am suggesting, Mr. Chairman, is that the minister take another look at it. I think this should be done on the basis of providing a service to the people, rather than suggesting that: oh, well, we can have one only every 20 miles or one for every several thousand people or something like that. This is a service that you are supposed to be providing to the people of Ontario and if there is somebody who has a sporting goods store, it is unrealistic for the department to deny him the right to issue those licences. One has to go into a beer parlour or a hotel or even a garage to get one, and yet someone who is in the business of catering to hundreds of fishermen cannot have the right to issue these licences.

All I am suggesting is, take another look at it and I do not think the minister can realistically, in all good conscience, deny somebody who is in the business of serving people, the authority to issue hunting and fishing licences.

Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend, the member for Nipissing, did allude to the fact that—

Mr. Lawlor: There is no division in the Liberal Party tonight.

Mr. Stokes: No, there is no division.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): That is right.

Mr. Lawlor: Complete unanimity in the ranks; the member is the only one here.

Mr. Stokes: The minister does mention in the annual report for the fiscal year 1969-1970 that the revenue from the sale of the former angling licences increased between 1969 and 1970 by—and I am quoting directly—a resounding 73 per cent as a result of the imposition of the $3 resident fishing licence.

This is a licence that was in effect less than two years. It was recently abolished, as mentioned in the Throne Speech, and the explanation given was that it was too costly to administer and collect the extra $1.6 million. Well, this is not a very good reason for abolishing something that has been in effect for less than two years.

I suggest that possibly it is more accurate to conclude that the public reaction was so great, with an election on the horizon, that this government decided the whole idea was ill-conceived and so they have decided to rescind a levy which has been in effect for less than two years.

Mr. Lawlor: Wonderful what an election can do.

Mr. Stokes: I want to suggest to the minister that his colleague mentioned that he was withdrawing the levy of $1.6 million because it was too cumbersome and it was too difficult to collect the tax.

I want to suggest to the minister that if he looks at his provincial land tax, he does not get much more from that. And if you want to look at any bureaucratic monstrosity you should look at the provincial land tax across the province—the way it is levied and the problems that it creates, not only for the landowner in unorganized territories, but talk to the chief of the accounts branch and ask him the headaches he has had in trying to sort out the hodge-podge and in trying to collect that levy.

I suggest the minister take another look at that; maybe he would abolish that too. You only get about $2 million a year out of it and you do not provide any service to the people that you collect it from. About the only thing you have done is that you have built some garbage dumps for these people in unorganized territories. The minister, I suggest, would be pretty hard-pressed to single out anything other than garbage dumps that it does provide.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Welfare, 100 per cent.

Mr. Stokes: One hundred per cent of what?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Welfare in unorganized territories—paid for by the provincial government.

Mr. Stokes: That is paid through premiums. Is the minister suggesting that the people who live in these unorganized territories do not pay premiums?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Welfare; I am speaking of welfare.

Mr. Stokes: They pay premiums on their hospital and they pay premiums on their health; they pay every other kind of tax in the province to a much higher degree, particularly the sales tax which is based on the consumer cost of any specific item, and the minister knows himself how much greater the cost of consumer goods are in Moonbeam than they are in Metropolitan Toronto.

An hon. member: Not here.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister should not arouse the hon. member from Schreiber, because he is red-headed, now.

Mr. Stokes: All I am suggesting is that if this is the logical reason for withdrawing—and I suspect it is not—well, let us assume that the Treasurer is accurate in saying that the collection of $1.6 million for about 600,000 fishing licences became too cumbersome over a period of two years; maybe he should look at the provincial land tax, either withdraw it or give these people something for their money. I am sure my colleague—

Mr. MacDonald: Solid case

Mr. Stokes: —from Timiskaming, who himself lives in an unorganized territory, could tell us just how few services they get for the provincial land tax that is levied at the present time. I do not think these people object to paying a tax as long as we can assure them that they are getting something for it. And I do not think that is the case at the present time.

Another thing that I want to get into is not in the estimates, but it is paid for and covered by the expenditures we will be voting on in these estimates. It is something that is alluded to in the annual report, where it says that the supervisor of the wildlife section has assumed responsibility for the research branch programmes along systems rather than disciplines lines. A practical application of this has been a study of the effect of proposed northern watershed diversions. This was the one item in the entire annual report that disturbed me the most.

I think most members of this House are aware that I have been greatly concerned by surveys that were undertaken by the US Corps of Army Engineers over the past several years, that were completely denied by the Ontario Water Resources Commission and by the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources when I showed them proof positive that indeed the assistance of some people in the Province of Ontario was being sought by the US Corps of Army Engineers and being paid to survey our stream flows, water levels, ice thicknesses and slush conditions.

When I suggested that this in fact was going on, and gave them proof positive that it was going on, the only admission I got was from the federal Minister of Transport that he was aware that this was going on in the Great Lakes to study the possibilities of all-weather operation of the St. Lawrence Seaway. Never at any time did anybody in this government even suggest that anything that was undertaken by the US Corps of Army Engineers had the blessing of either this government or the federal government.

I spoke to a lawyer friend of mine in this building here the other day who had occasion to be up the Winisk River last year on a fishing trip. There was an aeroplane flying over and his friend said to him, "What is that aeroplane doing up here? You know you really do not see that many aeroplanes." "Oh, those are the people who are not here!" He said, "What do you mean?" "Those are the people who are exploring the possibilities of diverting water, selling it to the United States. But they are really not here at all, so just forget that you ever saw that plane."

I am wondering about the meaning of the item in the report I referred to. I must confess to this House that I was so perturbed I gave the minister advance notice that I was going to ask this question. But, more, I want him to answer it for me. "A practical application of this has been the studies of the effect of proposed northern watersheds diversions."

Everybody knows that all watersheds in the north run into Hudson and James bays; if we are going to divert it, it is going to be coming south. The rivers run north and south. I want to know what the minister is going to do; I do not expect he will answer right now, but I hope he will at the appropriate time.

Mr. Paterson: Ask him where all the US Army Engineers' boats were heading that were on Highway 401 today?

Mr. Stokes: The hon. member wants to know what the US Corp of Army Engineers boats were doing on Highways 400 and the 401? Maybe they figure they will take over the southern part of the province before they take over the north.

I want to get into another aspect of the activities of this department, Mr. Chairman. I want to remind the minister that he received a telegram about three or four days ago from the Commercial Fishing Association of Northwestern Ontario expressing a great deal of concern about mercury pollution along the north shore of Lake Superior.

Since early last fall, or since this report was made public about the mercury contamination of fish in Lake Superior, the commercial fishermen there have had a very difficult time getting their fish to market for the simple reason that it is picked up by a transport truck and hauled to Kemp Fisheries in Thunder Bay. It is kept there for about 24 hours.

It is then sent by another transport truck all the way to Winnipeg for analysis either by the Freshwater Fish Marketing Board or by some facility provided by the federal Department of Fisheries, and by the time one gets an analysis as to whether these fish are fit for consumption and for export to US markets, the fish is of very poor and questionable quality.

We want to know what this minister is going to do for the commercial fishermen who are affected in that way in Lake Superior. I think it is safe to say that the commercial fishermen who have been adversely effected by excessively high mercury content in the southern part of the province are getting attention, but no attention has been given to those so affected in Lake Superior.

I have committed myself to getting a reply from the minister for these commercial fishermen in Lake Superior. As a matter of fact, one of them is out on the lake now getting 50 lake trout at his own expense, at the minister's behest and request so those fish can be analysed to determine the quantity of mercury to see whether it is excessive and whether the fish are fit or unfit for human consumption. He is doing this at his own expense.

I am just wondering if the minister is going to take this into consideration and provide every assistance for these commercial fishermen to get their catch of fish analysed with the least amount of delay so that they can receive the maximum benefits from their activities as commercial fishermen.

I want to turn to other aspects of the fishery as it pertains to Lake Nipigon. I wrote a letter to the minister two or three weeks ago, and no doubt he has been very busy and had not had an opportunity to reply yet—at least I have not received it.

I am going to quote a few lines of that letter in the hope that I can provoke the minister into answering me, either later on this evening or at his first opportunity: "The commercial lake trout harvest in Lake Nipigon has declined from 617,000 pounds in 1919 to 13,000 pounds in 1969." I asked the minister on several occasions in the past why he did not undertake a realistic and a meaningful restocking programme to try to bring this fishery back, and on each occasion when I asked either he or somebody representing him, they said that his fishery was quite capable of restocking itself and maintaining a proper balance. Those figures certainly do not indicate that the fishery is indeed maintaining a proper balance when you have a reduction from over 600,000 pounds in 1919 down to 13,000 pounds in 1969.

The Nipigon coaster, the large lake run speckled trout; has all but disappeared and ceases to be an attraction to tourists and local anglers. The northern pike in this lake have been tested and many contain quantities of mercury well in excess of the maximum 0.5 parts per million which makes them unfit for human consumption. The sturgeon population has declined to the extent that our Indian population have stopped fishing them altogether.

Pulp logs being driven down the rivers are driving fish out of the rivers, polluting the river bottoms with bark and so on,, covering up and destroying the food such as larvae and insects and so on and generally disrupting the ecology.

The same applies to the river mouths and bays where the log booms have been collected. Sturgeon and whitefish depend heavily on bottom larvae and other organisms.

Ontario Hydro raised Lake Nipigon in the Thirties by building dams and since then have been in the habit of building up the lake level of course, in connection with the dams at Pine Portage and at Cameron Falls, they have built up the lake levels all summer to a maximum in late September and October. Then they draw off water all winter for power requirements so that the lake is several feet lower in the spring—up to six feet, I am told by commercial fishermen and tourist operators.

We feel that this is resulting in the destruction of the spawn from the fall spawners such as lake trout, coasters and whitefish. For example, if the lake is up three feet and the ice is three feet thick or two feet thick, then all the spawn is five feet out of the water before it gets a chance to get covered over. It is either frozen or baked, take your choice.

The Ontario Hydro Ogoki diversion down the Jackfish River to Ombabika Bay has ripped out the river banks and is continually silting the waters of that bay, so much so that they are often the colour of coffee with cream in it.

The continual silting covers up the bottom feed such as larvae and disrupts the general ecology, not to mention what a disgraceful eyesore this is. There is a possibility that the lake is away out of balance. That is, the coarse fish such as ling and suckers, etc, have increased because they have not been harvested to any great extent.

These fish are now quite numerous and we believe they are taking a heavy toll of the desirable species especially at spawning time. It is obvious that the present team which is conducting a survey of this fishery under the capable leadership of Lorne Towne is understaffed and will now need assistance if anything meaningful is to result.

Since this is one of the most important fishery resources in the province, I respectfully urge you to give it the attention and the priority it deserves and so badly needs. I have had occasion to talk to Mr. Towne and many people at the district level in the Geraldton forest district and I am quite convinced that they are doing everything possible with the resources that they have to make a realistic assessment of the needs and the requirements to rehabilitate that fishery:

I want to suggest to the minister in the strongest terms possible that it is completely inadequate for him to say that he is going to take a lake, hundreds of square miles, and put one biologist and about four summer students on it and say that he is going to do anything to bring this lake up to the important fishery that it once was and the significant place that it held in the economy of that area, both to our native population for commercial fishing and to the tourist operators in that particular area.

I do hope that the minister will not suggest something that is going on, like at Lac Seul, is adequate. I think it was in 1929 that they had a diversion there which flooded thousands of square miles of good timber land, allowed it to fall over and rot, and it is a real disgrace when you see it. You fly over it. You fly over the Ogoki reservoir and you will see thousands and thousands of acres of productive forest land were just allowed to flood. Of course, that resource was lost to the people of Ontario for future generations and it is indeed an awful eyesore.

I notice in the annual report where it says that the minister does have a team of biologists continuing their study in Lac Seul, a body of water with an area of over 500 square miles. He does have one biologist and four or five students studying that, 40 years after the fact.

I know my colleague from Kenora, the hon. Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs (Mr. Bernier), will agree with me that it was a complete disgrace the way that was allowed to happen. When one considers that you do have a fluctuation from year to year, or from season to season, of from 14 to 16 feet, it is high time that, 40 years after the dam was built, you should have some idea—

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs): Forty-one years—the year that I was born.

Mr. Stokes: Forty-one years, my hon. colleague reminds me. I think of it as high time that the minister started making a realistic assessment of all of these things so that we might get the maximum benefit of the resources that he aspired to in his opening remarks this afternoon.

Mr. MacDonald: Is the minister a product of some diversion?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, not really. That was long before this minister was there.

Mr. MacDonald: No, I mean the Minister of Mines!

Mr. Stokes: I noticed another thing that I thought was worth mentioning. This is with regard to restricted fire zones. I am not going to spend any great deal of time on forest protection because I think that from what I can read and from what I can gather in my research and in my travels that our fire-fighting force in the Province of Ontario is equal to or better than any in Canada or on the continent.

I am wondering, though, in reference to something that does appear in the last annual report that had to do with restricted fire zones in a particular area of the province that had suffered from fume damage and that was at Wawa. I cannot name the exact page that this refers to, but it does mention that this department found it necessary to declare a certain area a restricted fire zone because it had been damaged by fumes. I suspect that it is sulphur fumes, as a result of the mining activity in the area.

I brought this up with the minister's colleague, the Minister of Energy and Resources Management (Mr. Kerr), a little over a year ago—the result of sulphur fumes around Sudbury. I wanted to know if the people of that area were going to be given compensation—particularly the native people on the reserve out at Whitefish, where they claim that over 40,000 acres of productive forest land had been irreparably damaged. I am wondering what the minister thinks of damage to the resources by fumes and what he proposes to do about it in the interest of the people of Ontario.

I am also wondering what the minister is going to do. I see in his report that he has a very close and effective liaison between the Ontario Water Resources Commission and they are very actively pursuing, so they say, on a co-operative basis, those areas that have been adversely affected and taking some action to correct it.

Now, I suppose it is unfair to say that the minister should have found mercury pollution the moment it happened. I suppose it would be unfair to say that the minister is responsible even for all the natural mercury pollution that occurs in many areas where there is no industrial activity. That would be unfair and I am not even going to suggest that the minister—this minister anyway—is responsible for any mercury pollution in the province at the present time. But I do think he has to share some responsibility for the adverse effect that the effluent from the many, many pulp and paper mills is having on our fishery resources, on the quality of water, and on the impairment of our quality of life any place in the Province of Ontario where we have pulp and paper mills and the activities associated with such industries.

I know that the minister who represents a northern riding and happens to have a paper mill in his riding, is well aware, as I am, of the adverse effect that the effluent from those mills is having and has had for a number of years, and I am just wondering just what the minister says to his colleague when he discusses these problems.

I know his colleague has said that the pulp and paper industry is the worst offender in Ontario at the present time, from a water pollution point of view. And I am just wondering what the minister says to his colleague and just how serious is this minister, when he suggests that he does bear and accept the responsibility for maintaining good water quality, and that he accepts the responsibility for protecting our marine life in this province. How can he justify statements like that and still allow this pollution from an industry that owes its existence to the resources that are under the management of this minister; how does he justify those statements?

I did want to make a brief comment about the many surveys and the many programmes that have been instituted by this department, and in co-operation with other departments at the provincial and indeed at the federal level, and I think that this minister certainly takes the cake for coming up with all of these cute little names that people hang their hat on.

I noticed the Prime Minister doing it the other day, but this minister is very, very actively pursuing the CORDS—the Canada Outdoor Recreation Demands Survey—of 1968-1969. He also has a TORP survey—the Tourism Outdoor Recreation Plan.

I notice that his particular interest in this is in association with the goals and objectives of the designs for developments across the province, particularly the one recently unveiled in northwestern Ontario—phase 2. He is suggesting; maybe he is not suggesting, but I suppose he, along with his colleague, the Minister of Tourism and Information, has told those who were responsible for formulating this document, that there is a possibility of creating employment and a more viable economy in northwestern Ontario if they use the CORDS and the TORP survey in order to make better use of the tourist resources that we have in that area.

I do hope that any information that he does make available to The Department of Treasury and Economics will foster the kind of employment and job opportunities that are needed in that area; that he will be more realistic when he suggests a number of job opportunities there as opposed to the number of job opportunities that this government—on the advice of this minister—aspire to as a result of the design for development survey, where he suggests that 4,000 to 5,000 jobs will be created as a result of increased activity and better utilization in the forest products industries over the next 20 years.

If it is realistic to expect that we can create 18,000 jobs over that period of time by better utilization of the resources that are in such abundance in the north, I suspect that we can cut that down to about five years instead of 20 and provide those 4,000 to 5,000 jobs in the forest products industry over a much shorter period of time. And let us be a little more ambitious than has been indicated by this government in the Design for Development—phase 2 for northwestern Ontario.

I am not finished yet. I have mentioned the CORDS and the TORP. We also have the SWEEP—that is the Students Working in an Environment Enhancement Programme; we also have the SOLE programme—the Summer Of Learning Experience. The minister has mentioned about the SEED programme, but I have never been able to determine just what they meant. Maybe when he has a moment —

Mr. Pitman: Shared experience.

Mr. Stokes: Shared experience? I was particularly concerned, Mr. Chairman, when the Prime Minister—

Mr. Lawlor: Is it TORP or TORPID?

Mr. Stokes: I was particularly concerned last winter, Mr. Chairman, when I heard the hon. Premier mention the number of jobs that are going to be created as a winter works programme. Correct me if I am wrong, but I think there was something like $5 million in total made available as a result of two winter works projects. One was to clean up provincial parks in the eastern part of the province, and the other was to cut dead elms from alongside Highways 400 and 401. So naturally, being a northerner and a little bit parochial, I started to raise the dickens with the minister and officials of his department. So I thought we should be getting a piece of the action in northern Ontario. So we did. He put about 30 or 40 men to work building privies in one provincial park. I think we hunted and got hold of two carpenters and he built—I think it is—about 20 double compartment privies in an area in Thunder Bay riding.

Mr. Lawlor: His special contribution to the north.

Mr. MacDonald: We have an expansive minister.

Mr. Stokes: He did, he built some privies for us in the north. I suspect they will be used by tourists from the south.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): It must have been a double holer.

Mr. Stokes: He also did—

Mr. MacDonald: One for every citizen in Moonbeam.

Mr. Stokes: He also did a little bit of line cutting on some proposed road that he is going to build. He did provide a little bit of employment as a result of some tree thinning and I think that the total amount of all the projects was in the neighbourhood of $57,000 or $65,000 out of the $5 million that was spent across the province in a winter works programme. I could be a few thousand out, but I think that is about one per cent. I think that is what we received of that winter works programme.

I am just saying that for a minister who comes from the north I think that he could afford to be a little more parochial and see that a little more of the largesse that is passed around finds its way up to the north where it is so badly needed.

We do not have any elm trees to cut down, but I can stand here all evening telling the minister ways and means by which he can make those so badly in need of employment productive in a very useful way—a way that will accrue to the benefit of all of the people of the province. I suggest that one per cent of that amount is not sufficient.

I also notice that the minister mentioned an economic impact study which was undertaken in 1969 to discover the economic contributions that recreation and forest industry had made to local and provincial economy, particularly in provincial parks. That is Algonquin Park. I know that we are presently engaged in doing one for Quetico Park.

I suspect that the result of that survey and the master plan that the minister hopes to have for six provincial parks, including Algonquin, will, I hope, put him in a position to state the ultimate use to which all of the parks in the province will be put. I am speaking particularly of those parks that are of significant size, where the minister does think that a multiple-use concept is the realistic approach to the maximum and the best utilization of the resources within the confines of those parks.

As a member of the Quetico committee I think that it is becoming more obvious every day that more and more people are becoming concerned about the ultimate use of all of our large parks in the Province of Ontario. Certainly certain very vocal and avid conservationists across the province have focused attention on both of those parks.

It was heartening to hear the minister say that he had finally decided to make a primitive park out of Killarney. Hopefully he will come up with a determination for others, such as Lake Superior Park. I share the responsibility of coming up with a realistic long-range management plan for Quetico and we do hope that we will be able to give the minister some very good advice and guidance on that in the very near future.

I do have several other matters which I would like to bring to the attention of the House at this time. I think in closing though, Mr. Chairman, I would just like to mention the problem that I know has been bothering people in this department in northwestern Ontario and I know that it has been brought to the minister's attention. That is the problem of people who have squatted on Crown land without authority but, as they say, with the more or less tacit approval of certain people who were employed by The Department of Lands and Forests over the years.

I think that some of these cottages were burned down after giving notice to these people that they had so many days or hours, or a stipulated length of time to vacate the premises. Indeed, many of these cottages have been destroyed. There was such a furor over this that I think now the only way that camps can be destroyed is by a ministerial order.

I suspect there has been a moratorium on such orders in order for the department to assess the situation and come up with some way that we might be able to accommodate those people and, at the same time, protect the legitimate plans, present and future, for Crown lands.

I did some digging, Mr. Chairman, as a result of representations made to the minister and his department, and to me personally, by the group that calls themselves the Wilderness Owners Protective Association. They do have a resolution that says the department should do certain things.

As a member of the recreation and land-use planning committee for four forest districts in the north, this has come up and I have come across an agreement that covered a similar situation. It was an agreement that was entered into between the Kimberly-Clark Corporation and certain other people who were squatting on Crown land along the north shore of Lake Superior—at Terrace Bay to be more specific.

After Kimberly-Clark had acquired this property there was the problem of what to do with the people who had these unauthorized cabins on what ultimately turned out to be private land. There is an agreement that they had entered into on December 30, 1948 which seems to have worked very well. It has been in effect for 23 years now and I would hope that the minister would take this into consideration and possibly give it very active study and I hope that it will satisfy both the department and the people affected. I understand there is upward of 500 people who stand to lose their cottages because they did not take the trouble of gaining tenure to this land before they decided to acquire one that was already there but had been abandoned by somebody else. I am going to send a copy of this over to the minister; hopefully he will take a look at it and it might solve the problem and keep peace on all sides and still protect the interests of the Crown.

With those remarks, I will close now, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. minister wish to reply?

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Mr. Chairman, on a point of order. I do not see that foul wolf bounty in these estimates. We take it that either it has been abolished or perhaps, I say depressingly, it has been overlooked. Does it still exist?

Mr. Chairman: Perhaps the minister will cover that—

Mr. Stokes: It is still there.

Mr. Chairman: —but actually at this stage the minister is replying to the two leadoff speeches.

Mr. Sopha: I know that. I have just raised a point of order. There may be an error in the estimates. I have looked it over four or five times and I cannot see it. I am merely optimistic.

Mr. Stokes: It is still there.

Mr. Sopha: Perhaps the minister would let me know.

Mr. Chairman: I really do not think that is a point of order. If the hon. minister wishes to reply to the hon. member's remarks—

Mr. Sopha: The minister might reply to it.

Mr. Chairman: The minister probably will.

Mr. Sopha: The point of order is is there a typographical error in the estimates?

Mr. Stokes: That is not an expenditure. That is a revenue, so it would not appear in the estimates.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure what the member is referring to.

Mr. Sopha: The wolf bounty that he pays out.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I am sure we will come to that in the appropriate vote, Mr. Chairman. That will be on the last vote, I believe.

An hon. member: I want to vote for that one.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I think that is on the last vote, Mr. Chairman. Vote 1103, recreation programme.

Mr. Sopha: Good God, you do not call that recreation.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): The member will have to wait around.

Mr. Sopha: The point of order I want to raise is that it was always in the estimates, was always voted by the House. Where is it now?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, with all due respect to the hon. member—and I sort of agree with him that it is more difficult to find the various items—this is a new way of presenting the estimates and it is under The Department of Treasury and Economics.

Mr. Sopha: Good heavens.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I am sure if the hon. member would care to discuss it with me—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): The member for Sudbury has been crying wolf too often.

Mr. Sopha: I want to know when I am to make my speech in defence of the wolves. That is all I want to know.

Mr. Chairman: Well, perhaps under the section on wildlife resources, we might be able to squeak it in there.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the committee of supply rise and report progress and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report progress and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House I would indicate that tomorrow I would anticipate we would return to the estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food after the budget speech of the hon. member for Scarborough West, and we may attempt some second readings.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): May I ask the House leader—coming down, I heard on the CBC, with its infallible accuracy that the speech is to be given at 4:30 p.m.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: That is right.

Mr. Sopha: And we will deal with estimates up until 4:30?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: And possibly some second readings.

Mr. Sopha: Fine.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I understand 4:30 is the hour which the CBC made for these arrangements.

Mr. Sopha: Are they pre-empting the children's hour?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I do not know that I can answer that.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment, I wonder if the House leader could be perhaps a little more specific as to second readings, exactly what he has in mind. Is it the taxation statutes; or what is it he is going to deal with?

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): Second readings on the order paper!

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): That is a big help. There are quite a few of them.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, the Attorney General (Mr. A. F. Lawrence) has one bill; and Bill 19, I think, I shall bring forward tomorrow. The Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Bales) would like to get on with second reading of the bill which he introduced today, the bill respecting Metropolitan Toronto. I expect it will be printed tomorrow.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the adjournment of the House.

The House adjourned at 10:28 o'clock, p.m.

TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1971

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We have many guests with us today. In the east gallery we have students from the Main Street School in Toronto and from the Belle River District High School of Belle River; in the west gallery, students from Woodland Centennial School of Dunbarton and from the Great Lakes Christian College of Beamsville. Also, in both galleries, we have students from the Waverley Drive School of Guelph.

A little later in the afternoon, in the east gallery, we will have students from St. Denis Separate School of Toronto, from the Ontario School for the Deaf at Milton and the Wm. E. Brown Senior School of Wainfleet.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONFERENCE AND CONFERENCE ON NATIONALISM

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier. Can he make available any correspondence with the government of Canada leading up to an agenda to be discussed at the constitutional conference in Victoria next month?

Second, will we hear from the government, before the conference, the stance that this administration will take in the areas to be discussed; and third, will there be an opportunity to discuss the government's position before the delegation leaves?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the three-part question:

Firstly, the correspondence with the federal government; there was a personal letter from me to the Prime Minister of Canada related to the federal-provincial conference. I cannot recall the exact phraseology; in that it was confidential it would not be appropriate in any event.

There will be no difficulty whatsoever, Mr. Speaker, in my outlining to the members of the Legislature at some later date but well in advance of the conference, the agenda and perhaps the position that Ontario will take as it relates to those items that are on the agenda.

Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet, with the concurrence of the Leader of the Opposition, I have a very brief statement to make, in reply really to a question from the member for Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis).

In the Speech from the Throne, Mr. Speaker, it was announced that my government would call an Ontario Conference on Economic and Cultural Nationalism to air a wide range of viewpoints and to put into perspective the many and diverse problems affecting the Canadian identity.

It is my intention to call this conference from June 23 to June 25 and the site selected is the Medical Science Centre at the University of Toronto.

A number of well-informed persons, prominent in the various fields of economic and cultural affairs, will be invited to address the conference. Two speakers will discuss each issue from different points of view, following which there will be a panel discussion—comprising the two speakers plus three additional knowledgeable persons—to discuss the various points raised. Concluding each panel discussion there will be an open question period from the floor.

I must stress, Mr. Speaker, that the whole purpose of the conference is to inform and educate and to ensure that the various views on this complex topic are heard and the issues fully considered prior to the formulation of government policies.

The Legislature will not be adjourned for the conference. However any interested member may attend if he so desires. The conference will be open to the news media so that the general public, sir, may have access to all of the varied ideas and viewpoints expressed.

It is imperative, Mr. Speaker, that a broad spectrum of opinion be represented at the conference. It is our intent to invite persons who have the capacity to influence as well as reflect public attitudes. These will include businessmen, trade unions, all levels of government, the academic community, cultural groups and our young people.

It is the purpose of my government, Mr. Speaker, through this conference to provide a forum that will permit informed, full and frank discussions of the serious issues and alternatives facing all Ontarians and Canadians. Many of the philosophical issues concerning economic nationalism have been treated somewhat emotionally, and perhaps even irrationally, by a great many people. If we are to resolve our problems in the fast changing environment of today we must discuss the issues in balanced terms.

The pragmatic, realistic side must be measured against cultural erosion and the dream of Canadian nationhood, if we are to look at nationalism in perspective. A further look at the availability of capital and entrepreneurial, technological, managerial and even artistic resources are vital to an assessment of Canada's position. Unfortunately, little objective research has been devoted to these issues. They require further consideration and it is hoped that the conference can examine some of these areas, pursuing the discussion to a point where policies can be effectively reviewed.

While the precise conference agenda is still being formulated by the Ministers of Treasury and Economics (Mr. McKeough) and Trade and Development (Mr. Grossman), the conference themes will include the political and social alternatives to nationalism and continentalism, the costs of economic nationalism, the constitutional and legal aspects, and the possible future policies for Canadian industry and resources.

The issues to be raised, Mr. Speaker, at the Ontario Conference on Economic and Cultural Nationalism are vital. I am determined that we will be able to deal realistically with the costs of Canada exercising a higher degree of independent action in various fields.

I know the hon. members will join with me in looking forward to a productive conference leading to new approaches on complex issues touching upon every facet of our economic and cultural life.

Mr. Speaker: As the comments of the hon. Prime Minister constitute a statement, I will add six minutes to the question period.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if I might put a supplementary question to the Premier on the topic I was discussing before he reverted the House to ministerial statements, can he make it clear as to whether or not the House will have an opportunity to discuss a specific position taken by the government on federal-provincial relationships before the conference in June? Will he, in fact, organize one of the standing committees to discuss constitutional matters on a broader basis and to discuss them with the government's advisers on constitutional matters to assist in the preparation of Ontario's position?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it is the intention of the government to have a committee of the House—I forget the exact phrase that was used last year, a constitutional committee I believe—which will be dealing with this in a broad way prior to the conference in June.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): By way of supplementary, if I may Mr. Speaker, does the Premier yet know of whom the government contingent will consist? Does he know whom he is taking with him?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I know some of those who will be going in June, Mr. Speaker. The total number and the names have not been finally determined yet. I shall inform the House just as soon as I can.

Mr. Nixon: I think he is wondering if there is room for one more.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Is the member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson) going with the Premier?

Hon. Mr. Davis: He might make a very valid contribution.

Mr. Nixon: He will hold down the back of the plane.

Mr. Speaker, a further question on the Premier's statement: Has he received any communication from the other provinces as to their willingness to participate in the conference, the details of which he announced a moment ago?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there has been some indication of interest, but the other provinces have not been officially invited, so I cannot comment on that until we have sent them an invitation.

Mr. Lewis: It is quite a programme.

EVICITION OF OHTA PRESIDENT FROM HUMBERVALE APARTMENTS

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the hon. Minister of Trade and Development: Is he going to reconsider the bailiff's eviction from Humbervale Apartments of the president of the Ontario Housing Tenants' Association? The eviction, I believe, has been occurring either today or will in the immediate future following a lengthy court case.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the circumstances. I will take the question as notice.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, perhaps you will not permit a supplementary on the basis that the minister is taking it as notice; but is he not aware of the discussions that have taken place in this House over a number of months concerning Michael Carson and the fact that, for no specific reason other than his activities on behalf of tenants, court cases have been brought against him by the minister's department?

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): Shame!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I do not necessarily know. This is editorializing.

Mr. Nixon: It is not editorialization. The minister should be aware of that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Of course, the Leader of the Opposition is editorializing. I am not familiar.

Mr. Trotter: A vicious act by government and the minister does not know about it in his department. An absolutely vicious act!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I am not familiar with the specific case the hon. member is talking about. He is talking about an order having been issued by a court. I would have to find out about that, Mr. Speaker. He has added some editorial matter as to what is being done—

Mr. Nixon: Incredible!

Mr. Trotter: It is incredible the minister does not know that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —for a special reason. If that is the case, there would have been an order issued. I will find out about it.

Mr. Trotter: It is factual. The bailiff is at the door.

Mr. Nixon: The judge said there was no reason.

Mr. Trotter: By way of supplementary question! How soon?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: As soon as possible.

Mr. Trotter: How soon is as soon as possible when the sheriff is at the door?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Trotter: The minister is afraid to answer, I will bet anything.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I said as soon as possible.

Mr. Trotter: I will bet anything he knows the answer.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for York South.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that the eviction is scheduled for 12 noon, tomorrow, will the minister give us his answer before the House adjourns today?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will do my best to do so, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

SPADINA EXPRESSWAY DECISION

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: Can he tell the House what the status is of the appeal to the cabinet on the Ontario Municipal Board's decision to allow Metropolitan Toronto to proceed with the Spadina Expressway?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, Mr. Speaker, it is still before cabinet.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary: Is the Premier concerned with the municipal board decision today which would permit Metropolitan Toronto to proceed with the acquisition of lands that are associated with other expressway construction in the Metropolitan area?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, this has not been referred to the government. The matter before the government is the approval or otherwise of the Spadina Expressway.

Mr. Trotter: A supplementary question: Has the Prime Minister any idea when we will get an answer from the cabinet in regard to the Spadina Expressway?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Very shortly.

Mr. Trotter: Pardon?

An hon. member: How long is very shortly?

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

REGIONAL GOVERNMENT

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a further question of the Premier relating to the review of government policy: Can the Premier indicate to the House what type of review is being undertaken by the government—probably The Department of Municipal Affairs—on the present status of regional government with particular reference to the problems in the Niagara region brought to the attention of the province and to the attention of the government by the city of St. Catharines?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I attended very briefly a meeting with the mayor and council of St. Catharines along with the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Bales), the distinguished member for St. Catharines (Mr. R. M. Johnston) and, of course, the Minister of Education (Mr. Welch). That meeting commenced this afternoon—or at least this morning at about 11.30. I have not had a report on that meeting since that time.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary: The Premier is not aware that any review of policy is being undertaken?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, as I stated, the council and the mayor of St. Catharines met with the Minister of Municipal Affairs, the Minister of Education, and the member for St. Catharines relating to the problems of that municipality in the Niagara regional government. The meeting, I think, started roughly at 11.30 this morning.

FARM DEATH OF ONTARIO HOSPITAL PATIENT

Mr. Nixon: A question of the Minister of Health: Has he any information to impart to the House regarding the death of Elijah Sanderson who had been a patient in the Rideau Regional Hospital; particularly with reference to the indication from the coroner that the responsibilities of the department had been less than adequately fulfilled?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Minister of Health): No, Mr. Speaker, I have nothing to report today. I undertook yesterday in response to a question that the matter would be investigated.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

CONFERENCE ON FOREIGN INVESTMENTS

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: In view of all the advance planning that has taken place for his conference on foreign investment, can he indicate to the House which speakers have so far been approached to represent the various interest groups he indicated in his tabling of the letter?

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): Is Eddie Goodman going to speak?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I would say at this moment that Mr. Goodman has not been invited to participate, but certainly if he determined to be one of those who wish to ask questions from the floor and so on—

Mr. Pitman: That is too bad; I hope he is there.

Mr. MacDonald: He has been moved from the head table.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: How about Laxer?

Hon. Mr. Davis: A number of people have been contacted, Mr. Speaker, and when I have the complete list I shall let the hon. member know.

Mr. Lewis: Is the member for Don Mills (Mr. Randall) on the list?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, neither is the leader of the NDP, unfortunately—

Mr. Lewis: No, I understand that; but he is still in the Premier's party.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member for Riverdale (Mr. J. Renwick) suggested that the NDP leader should be, and I really had to bypass that.

Mr. Lewis: That is unfortunate for us both.

An hon. member: I hope the Premier will ask Walter Gordon.

COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTRES

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I put a question of the Minister of Health?

Can the minister clarify for the Legislature the position of cabinet on the funding of community health centres in light of his colleague, the member for Quinte's (Mr. Potter) remarks in Ottawa last week that the Ottawa Health Centre was unlikely to receive a grant but a private Belleville doctors' clinic would receive government grants?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I do not think that is an accurate report of the statement. I was at the particular meeting. Neither of these groups—Dr. Tulchinsky's group in Ottawa and the Belleville group—in my opinion can expect to receive cash grants or subventions directly.

What we are assessing at the moment in the department is whether or not some kind of system of loans could be developed that would be attractive enough to such clinics or community health centres so as to make them wish to use them later.

That is the situation at the moment, and I think in relation to any clinic or community health centre in this province at this particular time, I cannot encourage them to make application for direct cash subventions.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, when does the minister think a policy will be announced on this in view of those who are waiting for future prospects?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Well I am not in any rush, Mr. Speaker, to announce policy on this. We have a couple of these community health centres in the province, as the hon. member knows, in Sault Ste. Marie and St. Catharines. Their viability, how well they work, how well they are supported, is still very much open to question, at least in relation to the St. Catharines one.

Therefore, before entering a programme, in other words one which would allow subvention to groups or clinics across the province, I think we will have to be very careful in assessing whether they are viable as presently organized and proposed, particularly by Dr. Tulchinsky's St. Catharines establishment and the one he is working on in Ottawa.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, because I am somewhat taken aback, the minister then is reassessing the very strong recommendations of the Ontario committee on the healing arts that community health centres in Ontario be a pattern for delivery of medical services in the province?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: No I am not, Mr. Speaker. But I do feel that this year, and for a number of years in the future, we should encourage these community health centres as a matter of experimentation, and I would very much encourage them so far as information and other advice and health is concerned. At the same time, I cannot suggest that the government be committed to a total programme of grant formulas giving direct capital assistance to them. So, on the one hand, I do not quarrel for a minute with the principle; as a matter of fact there are many signs that during this year we will have a dozen or perhaps a score of different types of clinics coming forward in the province, and as I say these will be very suitable for an experimental period of two or three years.

ADDITIONAL STAFF FOR DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Mr. Lewis: Another question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Health:

On page 14 of the budget announcement it is indicated that 332 additional staff members had been approved for The Department of Health, almost all of whom will be required to staff hospitals for the mentally retarded and the new school for retarded children at Picton. Is my information correct that 230 to 240 of those people in fact will be at Picton and have been authorized as of May 1, 1971, leaving less than 100 staff members for all the other Ontario Hospital schools in the province in the next fiscal year by way of additional complement?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I think the member is approximately right. I do not know whether it is 240 or 260, but the balance is approximately that.

Mr. Lewis: Then Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, are we to assume the problems of staffing that emerged around the Orillia hospital school recently, and which the minister indicated were true of Smiths Falls and other similar institutions, have in no way been resolved by government and that government will opt out of significantly increased staffing for the next fiscal year?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, there has been some amelioration but they certainly have not been resolved.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, may I assume from this that the minister himself is unhappy about the way in which the moneys are allocated for services to people in his department?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: My mood is hardly relevant to the debate, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Justice): We all agree there is not enough money.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I would suggest that I would be very pleased to go into this in depth and in detail when my estimates are before the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

EXTRA POLICE COSTS FOR ROCK FESTIVAL

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General. Could the Attorney General tell us what success, if any, the government has had in collecting the sum of $87,856.70 from Orange Productions Limited, being a firm that carried on a rock festival in Mulmur township late last summer, and against whom the government passed an order-in-council forcing them to enter into an agreement to put up this kind of a bond, and the former Attorney General indicated that they should pay this sum of money to the government for damages resulting from extra police costs?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to take that question as notice.

Mr. Singer: Could the Attorney General advise us whether or not he has any plans to bring under control rock festivals that might take place in this province this summer?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I think if the hon. member will be patient, government policy in this regard will be announced.

Mr. Singer: Yes, yes; definite as usual.

Mr. Trotter: We sure have to have patience, I say to the minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

DRUG-TAKING IN ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Health.

Could the minister indicate what kind of co-operative effort is being undertaken by his department and The Department of the Attorney General and The Department of Education to try to understand and come to grips with the pressing problem of children being given and taking drugs in elementary schools?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I specifically have not met with my colleagues in their departments but, as far as I can recall, our three departments themselves are working together on this problem. For instance, the alcoholic centres are another field in which we have this overlap, so I cannot give any categorical answer this afternoon.

Mr. Deans: Might I ask if the minister would consider setting up a joint study group to try to come to grips with this difficulty, because there are more and more children, as he knows, who are being fed drugs who do not realize they are getting them until they have had them.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I can assure the hon. member this is certainly a matter of significant concern for the three of us and it will not be too long before I will be able to report some forward movement in this field.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

FURNITURE IN MINISTERS' OFFICES

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): I have a question of the Minister of Public Works. Would the minister inform the House whether those chattels and furniture that adorn the offices of the ministers of the Crown are provided at public expense? And if they are, when the minister's office is furnished, does the property and the furniture vest in the minister?

The second question is, was there any damage done to the exchequer when his colleague on his right, the Provincial Secretary (Mr. Yaremko), recently sequestered all the furniture from the offices of the Minister of Social and Family Services (Mr. Wells) when there was a cabinet shuffle, leaving him, it is said, with not so much as a paper clip?

Mr. Nixon: Is he still using an orange crate?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I will inquire about the first part of the hon. member's question. I happen to know something about the second part, dealing with my colleague, the Minister of Social and Family Services; I was surprised to learn that the desk which he had removed from the office of the Minister of Social and Family Services was the one he had taken there from the Provincial Secretary's office when he went there some time ago. So it is now returned to its original spot.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They did leave paper clips.

Hon. Mr. Auld: There were two paper clips on the floor.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Parkdale.

SHORTAGE OF WELFARE FUNDS

Mr. Trotter: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier. Is the Premier still adamant in his policy to not assist Metropolitan Toronto or any municipality as a result of their shortage of funds because of the heavy welfare rolls?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the government's policy in this regard has not changed. As I read the press clippings today, they have made the approach to the federal government. The Minister of Social and Family Services is analysing the problem as far as this government is concerned at this moment; and certainly we have supported the Metro people as it related to their request to the federal jurisdiction.

Mr. Trotter: A supplementary question: Am I correct in assuming that no matter what the request of Metropolitan Toronto will be in this matter, they are going to be turned down, that it is really a wasted effort?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I guess the hon. member can assume that which he wants. The government has been requested to consider this and we will take a look at it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kitchener.

PHYSIOTHERAPISTS EXCEPTED FOR PAYMENT

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, I have a question in four parts, of the Minister of Health. Will the minister advise us why, under the private physiotherapy plan and regulations, physiotherapists are excepted for payment for treatment calls where they are not members of presently approved clinics and where patients, while not under home care, are unable to attend clinics where they exist?

Secondly, why are recent graduates of physiotherapy courses unable to open clinics and be approved for payment under OHSIP regulations?

Thirdly, why are the regulations not the same for the average and usually elderly citizen here as they are for the Workmen's Compensation Board patients, where full and higher payments are made to any physiotherapist as long as a medical doctor has prescribed treatment?

Fourthly, is it true that there are simply no funds available for these treatments when other paramedical care, such as chiropractic, has been approved?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I will not try to answer that seriatim, but in general may I make these comments.

Firstly, the reasons for these anachronisms relate to the history of the relationship between physiotherapy and the delivery of health services generally, in that physiotherapy grew out of the use of hospitals. The clinics themselves that we have in the province are really an extension or a satellite operation of the support that was given to physiotherapy as an emanation of the general hospital service.

Secondly, what the physiotherapists may be asking, and is implicit in these questions, is the establishment in this province of a total self-regulatory, full-fledged fee-for-service profession, hitched into OMSIP as the medical profession is. That question is much too large for me to jump at, certainly in the first few months that I may be in this portfolio. The obvious scope of such a development financially and upon our health delivery systems can be appreciated by the hon. members.

The other point with regard to the board—there never has been, as far as I know, any great degree of absolute consistency between Workmen's Compensation Board policies in relation to services in the paramedical field and those of either OMSIP, OHSIP or the OHSC.

Finally, it is not a direct question as to whether we have enough in the way of funds. As I mentioned earlier, the funding of a total physiotherapy fee-for-service system in this province would be extraordinary.

But the more important thing at the moment is, even if they were to be placed in that position I have no way of seeing at this minute how we could possibly control the costs and, from a statutory point of view, adequately control the profession. Therefore, it is in the works, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Peterborough.

STUDY OF COTTAGES ON MUSKOKA, KAWARTHA LAKES

Mr. Pitman: I would like to direct a question to the hon. Minister of Energy and Resources Management. I wonder if the minister would indicate whether any charges have been laid in the courts as a result of his department's activities and the activities of his colleague, the Minister of Health, in relation to a survey made of cottages on Muskoka lakes and on the Kawartha lakes last summer?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Minister of Energy and Resources Management): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any charges that have been laid as a result of the surveys. It is quite possible that there may be one or two.

I am assuming the hon. member is referring to our septic tank survey inspection. I know that there were a number of corrective instructions or violation notices—whatever you want to call them—issued to some cottage owners. As far as I am aware, Mr. Speaker, those orders were carried out by the cottagers.

Mr. Pitman: If I might ask a supplementary: Is the minister prepared to carry out any direct followup to ensure that those instructions were carried out by the cottagers?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Yes, Mr. Speaker, inspections were made of the cottages until the weather became inclement last year and surveillance was followed up by the local medical officer of health's inspectors in the various areas. At that time, of course, there were some problems regarding closed cottages. A lot of the cottages were closed and it was hard to find the owners. But these inspections will be followed up this spring, together with our 1971 programme of inspecting septic systems, mainly in the same area.

Mr. Pitman: I wonder if I could ask the minister one further supplementary? Is it possible for cottage associations to secure a list of those cottages which were inspected and found faulty so that they themselves can carry on continuing surveillance of that particular lake system?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: First of all, Mr. Speaker, that would indicate some compliance or agreement to allow cottage associations to inspect individual septic systems. As the member knows, that arrangement would have to mean that the cottage owner would have to give permission to somebody else to enter his property. I do not think it would help the situation if we publicized the names of those cottagers.

I think, to get the co-operation of the cottage owners, it should be left with the government.

Mr. Pitman: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a further supplementary? Is the minister going to continue a surveillance every year on all lakes of Ontario? I am assuming that situation will be continued year after year.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No, Mr. Speaker. What I mean is that in the areas that the government inspects, such as the Kawarthas last summer—and we will finish that area this summer, we hope—there will always be a followup in the event that a septic system is still faulty. If it is not corrected, there will be a followup. If it is corrected I would assume, at least for the time being, that particular cottage owner will be left alone. He will just be subject to the normal inspection that is carried out by the local medical officer of health staff in each area.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Wellington South.

HOME PROGRAMME VEHICLE

Mr. H. Worton (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Trade and Development. Can the minister tell us what plans he has for the future use of the large vehicle that is sitting in front of No. 10 highway garage in regard to the HOME programme? It has been sitting there for months and doing nothing. Can the minister tell us what his future plans are regarding this vehicle?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I did not know that there was a vehicle sitting outside any place up there. I will find out and get the information for the hon. member.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Ask the member for Don Mills. He will know.

Mr. Breithaupt: I thought that was the one the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs (Mr. Wishart) was going to repaint.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

CHRONIC CARE FACILITIES IN ESSEX COUNTY

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health.

An hon. member: Bring the Prime Minister back north with you.

Mr. B. Newman: In view of the acute shortage of chronic care facilities in Essex county, likewise in view of the comments of the local medical profession that acute care facilities are now used from 10 to 15 per cent of the time by chronic care patients; and in view of the fact that it will be eight to 10 years before Riverview Hospital can be incorporated into the IODE Memorial Hospital; and likewise, in view of the fact that a recent Riverview Hospital report says the institution's facilities are so inadequate and obsolete that the health and safety of its 250 patients are endangered—is the minister prepared to reconsider his decision and go on with the reconstruction or the provision for additional chronic care facilities in Essex county?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, may I ask that that be put on the order paper?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce; the hon. member for Lakeshore. Sorry.

NO-FAULT AUTO INSURANCE

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

A question of the Attorney General: What is the situation at the present time with respect to the committee on uniform legislation for the Dominion of Canada with regard to no-fault automobile insurance? That is the first part of the question.

The second part is: What is the situation with respect to this government as to the Attorney General's status on proposed policies for no-fault insurance?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I honestly do not know but I will find out for the hon. member and report back to him and to the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

PORT DOVER LIFT BRIDGE

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): I have a question of the Minister of Highways and Transport. The Port Dover lift bridge is operational, is it not? What was the final cost of that bridge?

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Minister of Highways and Transport): If the Port Dover bridge has become operational, it has become operational very recently. I will have to get the information with respect to the cost for the hon. member.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Got a ticket on the raffle?

Mr. Gaunt: Who won the raffle?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

OSC FINDINGS

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A question of the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs: As a result of the findings at the Ontario Securities Commission regarding the Osler firm, does the minister intend to see that charges are laid against Mr. McDermott?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): That matter is under consideration in the department.

Mr. Shulman: Will the minister inform the House?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: If the government takes action, the hon. member will be well aware of it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Essex South.

U.S. ENGINEERS' VEHICLES

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): A question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management: Could the minister enlighten me as to where the caravan of vehicles belonging to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, travelling eastward from Essex and Kent counties, was going yesterday? What type of work are they going to be doing in our province? What special arrangements have been made in this regard?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I will have to get that information from my department. I am not aware of that cavalcade.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

FARM MARKETING LEGISLATION

Mr. Sopha: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Justice. Can the minister tell us who will represent the government of Ontario at the hearing on May 31 before the Supreme Court of Canada with respect to the Manitoba marketing legislation? What will be the instructions given to counsel as to the position he shall take in that court by way of intervention on behalf of Ontario?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I shall be glad to provide the name and the instructions for the benefit of my hon. friend and the House.

Mr. Singer: When will it be?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Well, I think I can probably do it shortly. I was going to say tomorrow but I appreciate that the House is not sitting tomorrow—on Thursday.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

TEACHERS' COURSES

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Education. Did the Minister of Education announce that those teachers who are qualified to teach trainable retarded children under the authority of the regulations would be eligible for clear admission to summer courses sponsored by The Department of Education and winter courses conducted by school boards? If so, was this memorandum issued to various people in The Department of Education and to the various school boards, and will the course calendars be changed to make it clear that deemed qualified teachers are not being discriminated against? And will the deemed qualified teachers be granted certificates for courses successfully completed previously?

Hon. R. Welch (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I will take that question as notice and I will be very happy to get all the answers for the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

COMMUNITY COLLEGE FUNDS

Mr. Nixon: A question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker. Was he consulted by the Minister of Education, or the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart), before the decision was taken to cut off funds in support of the community college adjuncts in Woodstock and Simcoe, associated with Fanshawe college with special agricultural courses?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there was some discussion within the government and I believe between the Minister of Agriculture and Food and the Minister of Education. In my prior capacity as Minister of Education I had discussed this matter with the then and now Minister of Agriculture and Food.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary: Is it tacitly understood then that the Premier approves of the decision to close down these community college facilities?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it is not a question of closing down community college facilities. It is a rationalization of the courses to be offered compared to those at Ridgetown and the determination by The Department of Agriculture and Food that some of them can be more effectively given there.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question, just so that there will be no misunderstanding: Is there some possibility then that these facilities that have been in operation will continue to be operational since he says they will not be closed down?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it depends on whether or not there are certain course offerings that it would make sense to offer within those communities.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary: I am afraid that is still not clear for those people in my constituency who are specifically concerned. The Minister of Agriculture and Food said that as of May 15 there would be no more funds and therefore they will be closed down.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, this relates to a decision by the Treasury Board. Certain priorities have to be established. Whether or not there can be other course offerings within those two municipalities, not necessarily related to agricultural courses, will have to be determined.

Mr. Singer: Can the Premier not answer anything directly?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, I can. The member does not understand.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Ask a simple question.

Mr. Singer: The question is simple; it is always the answer!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

REDUCING HOSPITAL COSTS

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health regarding methods of reducing hospital costs. Is the minister publicizing or promoting the new inexpensive non-mechanical artificial kidney device that has been developed at the University of Maryland, a device which is used at home, requiring no fluid and no blood pumps, for a cost of about $250?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I will have to take that as notice, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo North.

STUDENT HOUSING RENT REBATES

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): I have a question of the Minister of University Affairs, Mr. Speaker, who is not in his chair. Would he look into the reason why students in married quarters, living in housing built by the Student Housing Corporation on the campus of the University of Western Ontario, can get rent rebate from the municipality while students living in married quarters on the University of Waterloo, in housing built by the Student Housing Corporation and situated on the university campus, are not able to get rent rebates because it is on university land?

Hon. J. White (Minister of University Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Minister of Trade and Development will be glad to get that information.

Mr. Good: No, I asked that department and they do not know anything about it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

ALCOHOLISM IN THE PROVINCE

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): A question of the Minister of Health: Has the minister accepted the findings of the director of research for the Addiction Research Foundation, on the reliance by wineries in the Province of Ontario for their sales on purchases by alcoholics; secondly, on the relationship between the general consumption of alcohol and the incidence of alcoholism in the province?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I believe I have done nothing more than read the same press reports that my friend has. I am speaking here as a layman, but I think that the problem is probably much broader than that outlined from purely the medical point of view as it appeared in the press.

Perhaps at some other time with more backup advice for me, I could debate this in detail.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Parkdale.

DETOXIFICATION CENTRE PROGRAMME

Mr. Trotter: I have a question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker.

Does the Attorney General intend to change the system of arresting people who are charged with being drunk by taking them to detoxification centres or drunk farms?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: This is a question that the new government is making a very serious attempt at investigating—the whys, the wherefores, and also the required funds for such an expanded programme.

Mr. Trotter: By way of a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, is the present Attorney General aware that we have been promised the government was going to do something like this ever since Kelso Roberts was Attorney General? When are they going to do something?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, the present Attorney General is aware that this present government only took office on March 1.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order; The hon. member for High Park.

OISE BUILDING

Mr. Shulman: A question of the Minister of Education, Mr. Speaker.

Who is responsible for the fact that when the library of the new OISE building was built, no facilities were put in for lighting? And is the minister aware that a ceiling that had to be ripped out as a result had won an award before it was ripped out?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I did not know that the building won a prize for something. So, to answer the second question, I did not know that. I did not know about the lights either and I will make it my business to find out about both.

Mr. Nixon: It is the most expensive building in the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Essex-Kent.

ODC LOANS TO SERVICE INDUSTRIES

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Trade and Development: When does the minister intend to announce the details of loans to service industries in the Ontario Development Corporation which were announced in the Speech from the Throne?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Probably this week.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

USE OF FRENCH AT INFORMATION CENTRE

Mr. MacDonald: A question of the Prime Minister: Is the Prime Minister in a position today to inform us as to why the government information centre in Cornwall for most of the year cannot give information in French in an area that is predominantly French?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have asked for that information and I expect I will have it for Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

AIR POLLUTION IN TORONTO

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Energy and Resources Management, if I could manoeuvre around the member for High Park. Is the minister prepared yet to table the list of Toronto industries that are polluting the Toronto air? He promised that several days ago.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Yes, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member is talking about the industries under the air pollution index they were tabled.

Mr. Singer: Well, Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary: The minister just tabled a list of those that were ordered to desist. How about the list of those that are in fact polluting?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, that would take six to eight months to compile.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, can I gather from the minister's last reply that he does not know which industries in Toronto are polluting?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I know exactly which ones are polluting. We are aware of them.

Mr. Singer: Well, if the minister knows exactly, why can he not table now a list of all of those which are polluting?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: That can be done, but as I say it will take some time to compile that list.

Mr. Pitman: Send the member the telephone book.

Hon. E. Dunlop (Minister without Portfolio): Very good! Send him the telephone book.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: First of all we would want the hon. member's definition of the word pollution.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman: My question was answered, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

EXPRESSWAY LAND PURCHASE

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Highways.

Why, in the buying of land for the E. C. Row Expressway in Windsor, are real estate agents being used to persuade the people to sell?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I have to suggest to the hon. member that he pursue that with the government of the city of Windsor, because the land acquisition programme in instances of that kind is undertaken by the municipal authorities.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question: Inasmuch as The Department of Highways is paying 75 per cent of the cost, does the minister know whether this cost was in the original estimates?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I would have to assume, Mr. Speaker, that The Department of Highways knew that was in the cost. It does not always fall, incidentally, that it is any more or less expensive to buy directly or buy through real estate agents. The fee for such a service is usually charged to the seller.

Beyond that detail—

Mr. Bullbrook: It is added on to the sale price.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: —I cannot explain it to the hon. member because, as I say, the authorities who are in charge of these ventures are the municipal partners. I can only assume that the department was aware of the cost and found it to be satisfactory.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, if the fee is a cost to the seller, that means that the money he receives for selling his property to the expressway is going to be that much less.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, that is quite true. But if he is satisfied in net terms, I suggest that it is no real problem.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves that today the House rise for the dinner interval from 5:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills. The hon. member for Dovercourt.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

Mr. De Monte moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act amending The Workmen's Compensation Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for monthly payments to the widow of a workman killed in an industrial accident of 70 per cent of the average earnings of the workman. The bill further provides for a minimum compensation to an injured workman of at least 85 per cent of his average weekly earnings during a time of temporary total disability.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The 17th order, House in committee of supply; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND FOOD (concluded)

Mr. Chairman: Page 26, vote 105.

On vote 105, item 2:

Mr. G. W. Innes (Oxford): Mr. Chairman, when the House rose on Friday last I was in the process of talking to the minister about a situation at Woodstock and Simcoe involving the closing of the Fanshawe agriculture courses at Woodstock and Simcoe.

Since that particular time the people in that community have expressed their concern over what is termed a real reaction throughout not only the Oxford county area, but also the surrounding counties of Perth, Waterloo, Brant, Elgin and Norfolk.

I want to read to the minister what the then Minister of Education (Mr. Davis) said when he introduced the bill to establish schools in May, 1965. The main essence of the establishment of the colleges of applied arts and technology was this—and I read this from the transcript in Hansard:

As for the programme, our plans are not yet advanced to the point where I can be specific and definite. Besides, the emphasis not only could but should—and I underline that should—vary from one community to another as local needs dictate. In general, however, one may recognize three major responsibilities of every such college:

1. To provide courses of types and levels beyond or not suited to the secondary school setting.
2. To meet the needs of graduates from any secondary school programme, apart from those wishing to attend university.
3. To meet the educational needs of adult and out-of-school use, whether or not they are secondary school graduates.

I would hope to see the following range of offerings in most if not all colleges of applied arts and technology, the choice—and I underline this—to be determined by local circumstances as indicated above and extended where a particular need exists in a community.

It lists the various categories, and (d) category happens to be agricultural and agricultural-related programmes, at least in rural areas, in co-operation with The Department of Education.

So that sort of sets out the format of the concept of the farm management courses that were offered in Woodstock, the satellite of Fanshawe, and at Simcoe. Since Friday, I might mention to the minister—and I want to be sincere and fair about this because I really think that he has overlooked something that is very important—the warden of the county has made a statement which is quite strong. The mayor of the city of Woodstock has also made a very strong statement attacking the proposed closing, and the two governors who are representatives on the board of governors for the Oxford area have both complained very bitterly about it because they feel it has and is providing something that cannot be provided at the other schools.

The minister has said that it is a complete duplication. Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock the people who became so concerned about this particular problem called a meeting, and last evening 181 people came to the Fanshawe college at Woodstock and I was asked to be present. It was a very significant group of people who felt very strongly about the closing of this particular setup of buildings there.

I might mention to the minister—and he knows perfectly well—that this operation which was previously an old county home has beautiful buildings, beautiful grounds, and was almost given to the college for $7,500, as was mentioned by the warden last night. He said: "You know, if we had sold it to them for $200,000 they would never have closed it, but we did this to try and help and get the thing off the ground."

Last evening the people there—including 61 students—were asked how many of them would have gone to another college if they had had the opportunity. And out of the 61 only two said that they would have been able to go to another college, and another two said that they would consider. So out of the 61 only four could have availed themselves of another institution.

So it left 57 people that the community feels they are helping to provide a farm management course and a course in relationship to people that would not have been provided to them otherwise. This is something that I hope the minister will take heed of.

A large petition was sent around and signed by a large number of them. I want to read the comments that were voiced by the students. As they wrote their names down they wrote a little item beside each one just to show how strong they feel about the whole setup. I will just read these in the order they were on the list.

One said: "Our son started at Ridgetown and transferred to Fanshawe because Ridgetown did not offer the course required. Fanshawe does. It serves the local boys who under no circumstances can get away to residential colleges."

These are all individual items, I might say.

Another one said: "I can go to Fanshawe and do not need a high-school diploma."

A present student said: "I can live at home. This college gives more practical work than anywhere else."

The next student: "Good practical course, close to my home, permits me working at home and going to school."

The next student: "A lot of students will go to Fanshawe that would not go to any other school."

The next student: "It is more satisfactory for students to commute to agricultural college and be able to work at home on the home farm."

Here is one from a very fine person whom I know, a lady who has lost her husband and has two sons: "I had one son who graduated from Fanshawe agricultural course, and one son just finished his first year. I think the course should continue."

Here is another one, mother of a son and daughter who have attended the courses and feel it should be continued in this community: "I am a graduate student of this school and am now taking responsibility for the farm and feel much credit is due to the course given. Therefore I feel strongly that it should be definitely continued."

Here is another one, from the father of a son who completed his first year and has received excellent guidance in down-to-earth farm operations: "I feel strongly that the school should be carried on."

"I heard of Fanshawe agricultural college and enjoyed the course immensely. The course at Fanshawe is down to earth, realistic and very, very useful." That is from a member of county council, also connected with students who have taken a course here at Fanshawe.

Here is another member of county council: "Very concerned due to local participation."

Another member: "Fanshawe fills a definite need in the district. This course allows us, the students, to get practical experience in farming. This course gives students the facts, not any side dressing. The practical applications of this course are beneficial and will be of extreme value upon graduation."

Another one: "This course, I feel, is a great asset to the community and allows those who are unable to leave home to get an education."

Another one: "Also it can be applied the same day as you learn it. The practical aspect is great and directs itself to farming."

So those are some of the comments that have been expressed by the people who gathered last night in the number of 181. They feel very concerned about it; they feel this has done a very down-to-earth job for the people who are concerned. As I mentioned, I said, with the greatest respect, that I am very certain that a large percentage of these students would in no way go anywhere else. This is what really concerns me. I do differ with the minister on this concept, because it is so true that these students would in no way go anywhere else. I certainly appeal to him, please, for $70,000. Lord heavens if we cannot save that somewhere else in this large budget to help out 40 students each year, there is something wrong with this government.

I kid you not, Mr. Chairman, I am serious that these county councils, the chamber of commerce, the city of Woodstock; and likewise the complement of the same three groups in every area surrounding feel the same way. I would like to send the minister over the copy of this petition, but I think it is going to be presented to him if he will see fit to see these people. Apparently, they are currently in the process of hoping that they can have an audience with him and the Minister of Education and, I hope, the Minister of University Affairs. I hope that the minister will accept them because they are a most sincere group. I have a copy of the petition here, but I think they will be presented to him in a more formal way. I have a photostat of them all.

I want the minister to know that the people in that area are really up in arms. I appeal to the minister to use his good offices and good judgement to reverse this decision because, if he does not, I can tell him that this school is going to carry on. If it has to carry on through funds that are going to be raised by the taxpayers who are currently overtaxed and are paying educational taxes, it is not going to sit too well with the people in my area. I have pleaded with the minister and I hope we will see fit to cut somewhere else if he has to cut. If this government cannot afford $70,000 to operate these two schools which have done such a good job, I think it is time they moved over.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): They should take the $70,000 out of their $1 million PR propaganda budget.

Mr. Chairman: The Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I want to join with my colleague from Oxford with perhaps some more specific information on the Simcoe agriculture school that is associated with Fanshawe. I had the good fortune and the honour to address the student body down there. To set the Minister of Agriculture and Food's mind at ease, he knows that William Knowles, member of Parliament for Norfolk, representing the Conservative Party, is on the board of the school and I know has addressed the students as well.

I do not think the idea is that we go down there to talk politics but simply to talk about the role of government in the farm community. I was very impressed at the initiative of the students in having the local politicians attend to give them our views on not only legislation pertaining to agriculture but tax reform, regional government—the sort of things that they as young farmers working day-to-day on their dads' farms or on the farms of relatives in the community, would be dealing with. The minister knows that these farmers, practical dirt farmers, are certainly concerned with tax levels as much as anyone. They would be the first to congratulate the minister if the saving of these funds would, in fact, be of any assistance to the agricultural community.

I think the member for Oxford has pointed out quite clearly and explicitly this is not the way it is seen. It is seen as false economy indeed and another pressure tending to direct the young people away from their own communities so their work on the farm scheme is lost. In the views of a good many they are not going to have the kind of education that is going to be directed along their specific needs.

The Simcoe school, I think, emphasizes the local kind of agriculture. They do concern themselves, of course, with farm management in a general sense, not exclusively tobacco or dairying or anything like that—I see from the list of local citizens who have taken part even beyond the local agricultural rep, who I think took a major role in the course along with the staff that was there from time to time and on a regular basis. I felt the course was a good one and I was most impressed, I would say, with the initiative and the healthy outlook of the young men who were taking part in these studies.

I was quite interested in the minister's comments on Friday when he said that the original concept was to provide practical agricultural training for, let us say, mature farmers who, with time off during the winter and slack times, could come in and have some special short courses. I am not prepared to say that the school concept is a bad one since it seems to have emphasized the opportunities that have been made available for the last few years now to the young men who, for a number of reasons, cannot leave home or feel that they cannot leave home to avail themselves of the opportunities at Guelph, for the diploma course, or at Ridgetown for a similar course, or even at Centralia.

I was also interested in what the member for Oxford said when he quoted specific references from the students. Some of the references that were given to me by students who came to see me over the weekend on this issue and others who have contacted me by telephone and by letter were maybe a bit heated because of the circumstances. I found that many of them said that among their classmates, there was practically none—very few, if any, who were prepared or could, in their own decision, leave their responsibilities at home and go away to an agricultural course which would require living in Ridgetown, or Guelph, or Centralia.

I was quite struck by the attitudes that were expressed by even the parents. In at least one case, one son had gone to the diploma course in Guelph—beautiful campus, great facilities—a course that has been established for a long time; but in comparing the advantages to a young man who is prepared to go back on to the farm or continue his responsibilities on the family farm—at least in one very forcefully put view where there was direct family comparison—there was the decision that the practical work, the course content at the school at Woodstock, was very superior to what was offered at the diploma course in Guelph.

The feeling was that over the years there had been a broadening—and I do not deny the generally valuable aspect of a broad education—of the course at Guelph to the detriment of the practicality of the course which is designed not to be a liberal arts education for all—the value that such an education must have—but to be of specific practical application to these young men who want to know about farm management, feeds, fertilizers, tax concepts, the responsibilities for establishing a farm estate, corporations, all of these things, and they want that in the shortest possible time, in the most specific possible way.

The course at the Woodstock school I think is especially valuable, since I am informed that there is attractive land of about 100 acres, I believe, in association with the school and that the first-year students are even now in the process of putting in a crop, or at least the decision is being postponed waiting for the results of the government's deliberation. This is the sort of work surely that would provide the experimental aspect to what these young men are doing on a practical level in their own home situation.

I would agree with the member for Oxford and others who have spoken on this, that surely with the funds under consideration the minister might do well, at the very least, to put the schools on probation for an additional year; that it is easy to find places in the budget where this $70,000 could be found. The member for York South has suggested that the advertising campaign on Ontario: "Is there any place you would rather be?" could very readily have supplied that fund and left another $700,000 left over to do the advertising that the government has felt is necessary over the years.

There is $3 million that has been allocated to the duplication of licensing facilities on the basis of the government programme that has been so substantially under criticism in recent weeks.

I hesitate to raise this because I feel there might still be an opportunity for the minister opposite to reconsider a decision which I think has been entered into on faulty advice. Surely this is the kind of conservation of tax money which is not in the best interest of the farm community? The minister knows the farmers are more sensitive than any other group. They carry a heavy load for education costs already—an inordinately unfair and heavy load for education costs. They would be prepared to examine carefully any proposal that would cut these costs. I believe the minister is making a mistake.

I hope there is nothing that has been in the evidence, or the information put forward from this side or from any other source, that would preclude the possibility of a reconsideration. Surely this is an area where reconsideration is called for. We are here discussing the specific expenditures of this department and the minister in co-operation with The Department of Education, at the present time—soon to be in co-operation with The Department of University Affairs—has the say-so, I would say not only on the establishment of special education facilities for farmers but the continuation of these facilities.

The minister knows of the pressure in many areas of the community to extract this responsibility from him and from his department. And if he is prepared to abandon this experiment—and it has been a successful experiment; at least it has not been proved otherwise—then surely he is going to abdicate the kind of responsibility that I know he, as Minister of Agriculture and Food, has fought to maintain so that this department, which historically has had a responsibility for special education in the farm community, is not going to be precluded from the continuation of that responsibility. Certainly he would get support on this side if he would move to the continuation of the schools. I do not believe that the possible saving of $70,000 is going to be merited on an examination of what is being offered and what it means to the agricultural community in Oxford and Simcoe and the surrounding counties.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Mr. Chairman, I would like the minister to know that many people in my area are concerned about the proposed closing of the Fanshawe course on farm business management. I was not aware that we have so many in Waterloo county attending that course, but there has been flak ever since the announcement was made last Thursday in the Legislature and the announcement hit the fan. There were phone calls the next day right up to noon today. I have been getting phone calls asking what can be done to ask the minister to intervene and do something so this course not be changed.

I think the key to the whole thing is that we have a need being served here in a localized area and, as mentioned by the member for Oxford, this was the prime purpose of the course in a community college setting.

The entrance requirements at Ridgetown, for example, I understand, do not admit mature students over 19. The entrance requirements would preclude some students who are eligible to go to the Fanshawe course from entering the Ridgetown course. If the closure of this college is nothing more than to get all farm education courses under the agriculture education and research division and out of the community college, then I would say that is not a valid reason for closing this school.

The community college there, according to these people who have phoned me, is serving a tremendous need in a localized area of about five or six counties. The minister says duplication is one reason for the closing. We have duplication all across the province in other areas, but we would not expect a student in high school to attend a school somewhere other than in his vicinity. Because of that, we have students attending high school.

As an example, the Waterloo-Oxford High School, the secondary school there, gives courses suitable to that area, which is a farming community—courses that are not given 15 miles away in the Kitchener-Waterloo collegiates. And there we have on a broader scale the same situation, where farmers' sons and daughters in the area surrounding the Woodstock campus of Fanshawe are being served.

From my information, practically all of these students return each day to their homes to carry on their normal farming duties before school and after school and in the off-school season and between the first and second years. When they are at the school, they are getting a practical knowledge of farming not available in many other areas.

These students, I am told, go out almost daily to the best farms in the area. Believe me, there are good farming units in that particular part of Ontario.

An hon. member: The best!

Mr. Innes: Hear, hear!

Mr. Good: What they are gaining here is not a highly technical education in agriculture as that of Guelph, but let us bear in mind—

Mr. Innes: Hear, hear!

Mr. Good:—that fewer than 10 per cent of the graduates of Guelph ever end up in actual farming operations.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Good: They are in allied operations such as the feed business or somewhere else. But here we have a need being served to actual people who are engaged as tillers of the soil and the growing of produce.

Mr. Innes: Hear, hear!

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): And outstanding in the field.

Mr. Good: This is something that is serving a tremendous need. If this programme has been developed by accident, I would say so much for the good. The department should learn that here it has something which has community acceptability, and the very fact that the community is so worked up over the proposed closing of it, I would say, should lead the minister to believe that the government has here one of the most successful experiments—at one of the least costs probably—of any course that has ever been offered.

As this party has said before, the $70,000 expenditure that was given in the newspaper headlines as the main reason is absolutely not valid. I could mention half a dozen other costs that are greater than that which should have been cut out years ago in the training programmes of this government across from us.

May we, as opposite members, and as members whose ridings are being affected—and the students of this college all live in the ridings, one might say, of members here in the House this afternoon—may we ask that the minister give very serious consideration to the continuation of this programme? Not only the continuation of it but the expansion of it into other parts of the province so that the basic fundamentals and rudiments of farming in its practical sense can be continued for the students who need it.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Middlesex South.

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak on the same issue; the continuation of the community colleges. It has been suggested that the closing of these colleges is based on the need to save money and the need to avoid duplication. It would help in reaching a decision about this if the minister could tell us in what way there is duplication?

I would like to ask him how many students from the agricultural colleges at Guelph, Ridgeway and Centralia really return to the farm from which they came, or go on to a farm of their own? How many of them, because of the nature of their education, are diverted into related agricultural interests—such agribusiness ventures as feed supply, fertilizer companies and operations of that nature?

Would the minister not agree that a very high percentage of those who go to receive agricultural training should return to the family farm to improve the quality of agricultural effort in their own community? If the minister is really assured that the existing colleges provide that kind of training, that sort of emphasis, then I would be interested to hear that from the minister's own lips.

Also, it was suggested in the minister's reply recently that these other colleges were quite easily available to all students who wished to receive agricultural training. Yet it does seem rather clear that a community college provides the chance for a man to maintain his family responsibility, to attend the school and still look after the farm. I am quite certain, without knowing Oxford county in detail, that there are many young men who could not simply pack up, leave the farm and take a course.

I recognize there must be an avoidance of duplication; there must be the saving of money. But there are two ways of looking at the use of money. One is the saving of it. The other is the wise use of it. If the saving of $70,000 is going to mean that a fair number of young men are deprived of the chance of really first-class practical training, then it would seem that $70,000 would not be saved. So much an investment would be wasted. In other words, the failure to use the $70,000 might be the saving of $70,000 and the loss of great potential from our young men who require this training and could benefit from it.

So, when the minister answers the questions posed, I would like him to give us an indication of his own view as to whether or not Guelph, Ridgeway and Centralia really meet the total need for agricultural education or whether or not there is a place for a community college like the ones that we are referring to.

Mr. H. Edighoffer (Perth): Yes, Mr. Chairman, I would just like to make a comment or two in this regard. I, of course, would like to echo the comments made by the member for Oxford. I also, in my riding, have several students attending these courses, and these names are on the list mentioned by the previous speakers.

Mr. Chairman, I am most interested in this particular school pertaining to farm business management, as I am a great believer in the continuance of small business and I consider a family farm very closely connected and considered to be a small business. Because of this, I will join my colleagues in strongly recommending that these schools continue in connection with the Fanshawe College. By discontinuing this expenditure of $70,000 we are certainly discouraging studying or discouraging the opportunity for these young people to continue in the business of farming.

I would just like to say that, to me, a farm business management course, as conducted at these schools at present, must continue to operate if we are to have co-ordination of actual farming on a small-scale basis.

Mr. Chairman, I have to go along completely in support and hope that the minister will reconsider his decision.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Chairman, I have listened with great interest to my friends in the opposition parties defending the right of the further expenditure of $70,000 in one particular school and that is the school at Woodstock, which is a satellite of the Fanshawe community college located in London.

There is no one who could agree more than I with what has been said on the validity and the wisdom of the course. It is a delight to hear the kind words that have been expressed regarding the quality of the education provided, because the education provided in this particular course is planned, directed and taught by members of the staff of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, working out of Ridgeway on a loan basis to Fanshawe college. So we appreciate those sentiments that have been expressed.

Might I suggest that it is difficult indeed for me to rationalize how the opposition can be so incredibly critical of the government's expenditure in money used for education in this province and then turn around and, where it suits their political purpose, recommend the expenditure of additional money such as this.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Educational frills.

Mr. Nixon: The minister started and we will be at it for a while.

Mr. Innes: Be fair—

Mr. Nixon: There is $1.7 billion to spend on education.

Mr. Innes: Be fair to the children in this province.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, I listened to everything that was being said by my friends opposite and said nothing in reply. Now, I hope they will do me the same favour.

Mr. Nixon: Oh, we will say what we like.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The hon. member said that this was $70,000 in this particular school. Multiply that by 50 counties and districts across the Province of Ontario and you have got $3.5 million, if my mathematics are right.

This is what can happen and I suggest to my hon. friend that not only is the board of Fanshawe college interested in continuing this school, but they want to place a similar school in every county served by that college.

We have other community colleges across the length and breadth of Ontario and are now demanding that the same course be offered in their particular counties as is offered on this experimental basis at Woodstock.

Mr. Good: This serves seven counties.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This serves seven counties. But does my hon. friend from Waterloo realize that his own Conestoga college wants to establish the same kind of course in the county served by his school?

Mr. Good: They do not need it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh, yes they do, because they are out now asking how many students would be interested in coming to that school.

Mr. Nixon: Does not the minister think the farmers should have this kind of service?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I told the member on Friday that it was I who worked with Fanshawe college in developing this as an experimental programme for adult farmers. That was the intent and the purpose of it.

Mr. Nixon: And it is the minister who is removing the funds.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is what happened when it was established. The fact of the matter is that the average age of the students at Fanshawe college agricultural course is the same as that in the other schools. And for the hon. member for Waterloo North to stand up and say that the requirements at Ridgetown preclude the acceptance of students over 19, simply indicates he does not know the facts. Because that is not a fact and if you have been sold that bill of goods and you have bought it hook, line and sinker, obviously you do not know what is really going on. I suggest you learn before you get up and make those kind of statements in public.

Mr. Good: The education requirements are different at Ridgetown than they are at Fanshawe.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We do not believe nor accept that to be the case, and I defy you to prove to me one single case where that has happened. Now there could be an isolated case where a student has been accepted in one school and not in another one—

Mr. Nixon: Not too sure of yourself.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —and vice versa. But the same course and requirements were established right through the piece. This is something that my hon. friend cannot deny, because I have gone into that very definitely.

Mr. Good: If my research is incorrect, I stand to be corrected. The only point you have made up to now—

Mr. Nixon: Well, he is not sure of that.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The hon. member for Middlesex South asked how many returned to the farms. Roughly over 50 per cent of all the students in the various agricultural colleges—that is in the diploma courses—returned to the farms as actual farm operators, farm managers, helpers on farms, what have you.

Most of the balance of the students graduating each year from those courses go to the agri-business community. And I think that in that particular area they are serving the agricultural interests about as well as anyone can expect students to do. There certainly is not room for all those students to go back to the farms from whence they came. Some of them have to find alternative opportunities of employment. But it seems to me that when they are going to the agri-business community they are serving a very useful purpose in the continuing development of agriculture in this country.

I am amazed at the fact that all of the hon. members opposite have stood up and said, "Well we have got several students coming from our particular county or our riding attending the Fanshawe college." Let me say, Mr. Chairman, there were only 40 students in total attending the Fanshawe college at Woodstock.

Mr. Innes: In one year.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: In one year. In total in one year. Now how many does that really represent from each of the counties? My hon. friend from Perth stands up and says, "Several students from my riding are attending that college." I am not denying they are. How many really are coming from Perth to this school? And then are we to establish a similar school in Perth county?

Mr. Good: You do not need it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is the question I have to ask, my hon. friend, you say you do not need it. Am I to say that there is not to be a school in Perth county? Am I to say that?

Mr. Good: You do not need it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: You do not need it? Then you are saying that you do not need a school in Perth county?

Mr. Nixon: He is saying that closing the one in Oxford—is that a solution to that? You are wiping the slate clean. You are just evading your responsibility.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: But the hon. Leader of the Opposition has to recognize, Mr. Chairman, despite his stampeding over there, the fact that when you permit one county to have a school you have to do that for every county.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is just as axiomatic as it can be. This is what happens.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Nixon: Do you think the solution is to close the whole thing?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Now as far as I am concerned, I did not make the decision to close the Fanshawe College, as my hon. friends opposite are suggesting I did. I did not make that decision. I simply suggested to the Treasury Board in the determination of the budget, that as far as I was concerned there was available space for all the students to be absorbed in the community colleges, in agriculture at Fanshawe and Simcoe without any difficulty whatever in the present accommodations which we now have, both at Ridgetown and Centralia.

Mr. Innes: If they would attend.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: If they would attend.

Mr. Innes: But they will not.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: My hon. friend says they will not attend. Let me go into this if I may—and Mr. Chairman, surely I have the right to be heard in this House on our side of the argument. I listened to theirs and never interrupted once.

When the course was established one of the people came to us and said: "Look; I just have to have this school here if my boy is going to get a chance to attend agricultural college. We have got to have him at home on the farm. If you have this school established at Woodstock, this boy will be able to attend an agricultural college and pick up his diploma in agriculture, because we need him at home on the farm. I cannot afford to let him go off to Ridgetown or anywhere else to get this course."

The boy could hardly wait until graduation day to take a job in another county—as soon as he graduated. Who are we to believe? Are we to believe that this boy's services were so indispensable to that farm that he could not afford to take five months in the winter of two years to attend a residence class at Ridgetown or at Guelph or at Kemptville?

Mr. Good: He would not have gone if he had.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: But you see just as soon as he got the advantage of attending that course in Woodstock for two years, he was not needed on the farm at all. Away he went.

Mr. Innes: That was not an advantage; that was a privilege.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Away he went to another place. Now are we to believe that it was so essential; that that is the case? These are the things that have to be taken into consideration when we are trying to determine how best to economize and save money. To me, it is interesting to hear our hon. friends opposite say: "Spend $70,000 at Woodstock. Spend $70,000 in every district and county across this province on this course," because I suggest—

Mr. Nixon: The hon. minister is saying he does not believe what the farmers tell him. He does not believe them.

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—Mr. Chairman, to my friends opposite that if they say that this course—

Mr. Good: Take the car off the road back and forth to Muskoka.

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—is to continue at Woodstock, we have to say that it is right and fit and proper for every community college in Ontario to establish the same kind of an agricultural course.

If that is what we want—my hon. friend from Oxford says, "Oh, no, that is not it; just give it to me; give it to my people in Oxford and Woodstock—"

Mr. Nixon: They have it now. We are saying, "Do not take it away."

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—"but say 'no' to everybody else."

But you want to say, "Discriminate against the rest of Ontario." That is what my friend from Oxford is saying.

Mr. Nixon: Nonsense! Absolute nonsense! The minister is abdicating his responsibilities. He is saying wipe it out, and then he is saying it is not his responsibility, that he does not decide it. He is like Pilate—washing his hands.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The continuance of the course is not my responsibility. I simply said the space was available.

Mr. Nixon: The minister just said to the Treasury Board that this should be closed.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The space was available. The students at the Fanshawe school in agriculture at Woodstock and at Simcoe could easily find accommodation in these other places.

Mr. Nixon: I think the Minister of University Affairs should take it over because this minister certainly cannot handle it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Now my hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition, suggests that the agricultural educational programme be taken over by The Department of University Affairs.

Mr. Nixon: The minister is not handling it well.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: All right, that is what his position is. I want that clearly recorded, Mr. Chairman, that the Leader of the Opposition, of the Liberal Party of this province, says this, that agricultural education should be taken over by The Department of University Affairs. Let Hansard record that.

Mr. Nixon: On a point of order. Is the minister finished?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Go ahead, the member wants to talk.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, sure. On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, because the Minister of Agriculture and Food is clearly trying to mislead anybody who might possibly dig through Hansard to read his remarks, although why they might do that I am sure that I would not know.

My point is that if this minister is going to close the school, then the Minister of University Affairs might as well take them over—what is wrong with that reasoning?—because the minister is certainly not accepting the responsibility to administer the schools effectively.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the Leader of the Opposition what schools he is referring to when he says that the Minister of Agriculture and Food is seeking to close these schools? What schools is he referring to?

Mr. Nixon: The one at Simcoe and the one at Woodstock.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: All right, those two schools are already under The Department of University Affairs. I have nothing to do with either one of them.

Mr. Nixon: And the minister is closing them.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have nothing to do with either one of them, and I am not closing them.

Mr. Nixon: The minister told the Treasury Board they were not necessary.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I did indeed.

Mr. Nixon: There he is.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: But I am not closing them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: My hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition, is trying to make a case. He is trying to make a case, but he cannot do it—

Mr. Nixon: The case is there.

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—for the simple reason that I recommended, as my purpose should be and as a responsible minister of the Crown should accept the responsibility where he sees an obvious saving. He should point out to the Treasury Board that space is available in other colleges for these students and suggest to the Treasury Board that it is not in the interest of economy to maintain duplication of services—and call it what you like that is what it is. If my hon. friends opposite want to have duplication of services then it is all right with me; they can carry on, as far as I am concerned. But let it be clearly understood—

Mr. Nixon: Well a moment ago the minister said it was all right with him.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is all right with me if the Treasury Board and the government decides to carry on these schools. But let it be clearly understood there is duplication of services, there is unnecessary expenditure of money, and if that is what we want in this province then why should the opposition be screaming all over the place about the high cost of education? The two positions are completely inconsistent, and there it is.

You just cannot have your cake and eat it too, as far as I am concerned. I have no qualms about it whatever.

Mr. Nixon: We want the schools. The minister can have the cake.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: My hon. friend from Woodstock says the school is going to continue—there is nothing in The Community Colleges Act to hinder the acceptance of public funds for the continuance of these schools. If that is what they want, so be it. There is no problem whatever.

The agreement that we had to provide staff on a loan basis comes to a termination on May 15, 1971, and that was clearly established last year. There is nothing new about that. The Fanshawe board knew about it, the Fanshawe president knew about it, his administration knew about it. It was a perfectly amicable agreement arrived at in my office to which we appended our signatures.

Mr. Nixon: What about the kids when they came the first year?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There it is. I do not know what they told the kids, but that is what happened.

Mr. Nixon: The minister should concern himself. The schools are to be concerned with the students and nothing else.

Mr. Good: He just does not care.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: My hon. friends opposite say I should have concerned myself. The president and the administration of Fanshawe college wanted the complete administration of the schools in their hands. All they wanted us to—

Mr. Nixon: Oh, the minister is not responsible for that either?

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—do was to provide on a loan basis to them the members of our staff to accommodate their teaching programme for this last year, and we agreed to do that up to May 15, 1971.

What happens from then on is someone else's determination, not mine. I have made a recommendation. If the government does not go along with it that is fine with me, that is a decision that has to be made, and I am sure the suggestions that have been made this afternoon will be taken into consideration.

I have to ask myself— regarding the testimonials that my friend from Oxford read into the record—how anyone could compare the course of education at Fanshawe with courses of education offered in other colleges when they did not share the same students.

Mr. Innes: Is the minister questioning the students? Do not question me, question the students.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is fine, I am just asking how that position could be taken. Now the thought occurs to me—

Mr. Nixon: One from each family, I think that was made clear.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The thought occurs to me that there might be some difference in opinion in this particular regard. We were told that the—

Mr. Nixon: Did the minister say it was not a very good point?

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Stewart:—out-of-school students were not accepted at Ridgetown or Centralia. They are. You do not have to be a secondary school graduate to be accepted in admission to Ridgetown or Centralia or Kemptville or Guelph or New Liskeard—the five colleges operated by our department.

My hon. friend knows that perfectly well that this is the case, and has been ever since the school started. We believe that there are students who may drop out of school for a variety of reasons, work two or three years on the farm and then say, "I would like to go back to school and get an agricultural diploma." They are accepted back into the course. This has happened and it happens all the time, so let us get our facts straight on these kinds of things.

We recognize the advantage of being able to live at home and drive to these schools. It has a good many advantages as I see it. I think there is also something to be said, Mr. Chairman, for the advantages of living in residence—my hon. friends opposite will know better than I. The member for Oxford, being a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, I think would be the first to recognize the advantage of living in residence during a college career. I think there is something to be learned there that is useful to people in later life and it seems to me to be a major advantage that I have never had.

Mr. Innes: That is quite true, but if you cannot afford it what do you do?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: There may be some who cannot afford it. Let me say that student loans are available to any student who wishes to avail himself of them to attend any of our agricultural colleges on the same basis as they are available to any student in this province. Surely we have tried to do everything possible.

I simply suggest, Mr. Chairman, that it is very difficult to have one's cake and eat it too.

Mr. Chairman: Item 2 carried? Item 2?

Mr. Innes: Will the minister entertain delegations to see him specifically on this? Would it be fair to ask if they should see you, see the cabinet, see the Prime Minister or the Minister of Education or the Minister of University Affairs? Whom should they see?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, Mr. Chairman, Fanshawe college does not fall under our department at all—you will see no reference to Fanshawe college in this budget estimate of mine. It is not there. The members has raised this because he wanted to attach blame to me for a recommendation I made. That is why he raised it in these estimates.

Mr. Innes: It was the minister's recommendation.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Of course, he did. That is why he raised it. Now, if my hon. friend wants to send a delegation in—and I am sure he has done a good deal in generating the interest in sending that delegation in—

Mr. Innes: No, I have not.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —because I know of the political action which is going on out there. Do not ever think I do not. I know it very well because my county is next to the member's and I know very well what is going on.

If there is a delegation which wants to come to meet us, the members of the government, they should then address themselves, in my opinion, to the Minister of Education, in whose department community colleges are now administered and to the minister of The Department of University Affairs, to which the administration of community colleges will be transferred. There is nothing to do with it under The Department of Agriculture and Food estimates whatever.

Mr. Nixon: Except that minister recommends that the schools be closed.

Mr. Innes: Yes, and he also lends the teaching staff to Fanshawe college. Is that not true? You must pay them.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: What did you say?

Mr. Innes: The staff that is lent to Fanshawe college—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That agreement terminates as of May 15, 1971.

Mr. Innes: —must have been paid up until now by The Department of Agriculture.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, they were paid by the department for community colleges for their services. We did not pay them.

Mr. Good: Mr. Chairman, the minister says that this is not his concern. Well, will the minister categorically deny the report that the education and research division of The Department of Education has gone on record as saying that it wants to get all agricultural education back into The Department of Agriculture?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I do not know what the hon. member is talking about.

An hon. member: Well, quite frankly you do not.

Mr. Good: This division of which we are talking is not under The Department of Agriculture. Secondly, it is under the community colleges branch of The Department of University Affairs.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, this is agricultural education in our community colleges, and research is under The Department of Agriculture and Food but the courses taught at the Fanshawe satellite colleges in Woodstock and Simcoe are not under our department.

Mr. Good: Exactly, and the minister wants all education in agriculture back under The Department of Agriculture, is that not correct?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I want, Mr. Chairman, to avoid the provision of facilities that are not being used to capacity—

Mr. Good: The minister did not answer my question.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —and the duplication of services in our area.

Mr. Innes: Answer his question.

Mr. Nixon: That is not what he is talking about at all.

Mr. Good: Mr. Chairman, the minister either evades or will not answer the question. Is it not true that he wants this course back under The Department of Agriculture and not associated with The Department of Education in the community colleges?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have never said anything of the kind at any time, and I refuse to be drawn into saying that today.

Mr. Good: Well, has his education and research division gone on record as saying it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not that I know of. Absolutely not. I am assured by the director of agricultural research and agricultural education that this is not the case, Mr. Chairman. I had never heard it referred to before until my hon. friend from Waterloo wanted to drag out another red herring.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: Would the minister inform me what the cost per student is for the Ridgetown school?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I can get that figure. I have not got it right at my fingertips.

Mr. Chairman: Shall item 2 carry?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I have not got it here. We can get it, but I have not got it here.

Mr. Chairman: Item 3, research and services.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Education.

Mr. Chairman: Still on item 2?

Mr. Spence: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: I am sorry; I did not see. The member for Kent.

Mr. Spence: In regard to the College of Agricultural Technology at Ridgetown, we are very proud of it in our area—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Some of the member's friends are not very proud of it.

Mr. Spence: They never criticize Ridgetown.

Mr. Innes: We want to take care of the little people.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Some of your colleagues said the course at Ridgetown was not as good as that being offered at Fanshawe.

Mr. Spence: They said something about some student who could not qualify in Ridgetown, but I must say that I am very proud of the college at Ridgetown—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am glad to hear you say that.

Mr. Spence: —and I do not think my colleagues indicated or meant that the Ridgetown college was not doing a good job.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: All I know is what they said.

Mr. Spence: I was here, Mr. Minister, and my hearing is pretty good. I turned my hearing aid right up, and I thought I got a good understanding of what they meant.

Mr. Chairman, we are very proud of Ridgetown College, the research job they are doing and what they are doing for the number of students at the college. But in the Province of Ontario there is a large segment of the agricultural industry where the net return is not satisfactory to keep a man, wife and family on the farm today.

I wonder if the minister would give any consideration to carrying out a pilot project at these agricultural colleges where a student or someone would carry out a project that would operate the same as an average farmer would operate and could make a livelihood under good conditions or conditions recommended by the college. I think this would serve a very good purpose and one that the agricultural industry would like to see carried out.

Of course, this year we do not want any great expenditure, but if a project like this could be carried out I think that a few top, educated individuals or students of agriculture could farm and produce an income that would keep a man, wife and family in the way they should be today. If you could do this it would be something I would think the agricultural industry would be very interested in.

I wonder if the minister would give any consideration to a pilot project such as this? Maybe I have not explained it the way I should, but I think the minister understands what I mean.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, the course at Ridgetown does not lend itself to the type of programme my hon. friend suggests, but the course at Centralia is developed along the lines of practical management training out on the farms. There are research projects going on at Ridgetown which do involve the costs of production of various commodities, but the actual operation of a farm is not carried on because it is on a 12-month basis and these students are there for a period of only 20 weeks at the most in any one year.

Mr. Spence: In fact, the minister does not give any consideration to this being carried on at any of the agricultural colleges?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is carried on at Centralia through the working of the students with practical farmers during the 20 weeks they are at Centralia. If the group was interested in dairying it would work with a dairy farmer; if it was interested in beef, it would work with a beef farmer, hogs, poultry, and so on, and they establish costs of production patterns, returns what have you, based on the projected expenses of operating the farm and I think do get a good deal of practical farm management experience in that regard.

They also get farm management training in the other courses, but it is done in a different way because the facilities are on the campus;

at Centralia they are not, so there is a difference in the type of structure of the two courses.

Mr. Charman: Anything further on item 2?

Item 2 agreed to.

On item 3:

Mr. Chairman: Research and services; the hon. member for Brantford.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Mr. Chairman, just a few comments on the matter of economic planning in the field of agriculture. Every year, of course, we discuss this with the minister and suggest that more action be taken in this field, and I notice this year in the annual report of the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario that there are a few projects underway or that have been completed which are aimed in this direction.

But it seems to me that in view of the importance that agriculture has in Ontario and the effect it could have or does have on the economy of Ontario, there should be considerably more research going on. Right now, I notice, research is limited to agricultural daily marketing and policies. There is farm finance and taxation which I suppose is a very useful one to the Treasury Department, and some on farm production and management. Here the government is dealing with the relevance of economic planning to commercial farms in Canada. Perhaps if the minister could start setting some economic goals for the family farms in Canada, particularly in Ontario—and I assume that one of the more desirable social goals is to try to preserve the family farm in this province—perhaps some of the research should be directed in this area.

What I would like the minister to comment on is to find out exactly—for the future, for the following years—whether he is going to do some really intensive economic research relating to agriculture in Ontario because there are problems. The minister knows them. Perhaps he can at least find out what some of the problems are—not that the government does not know what some of the problems are—but perhaps in some way we can accurately fit them into the jigsaw puzzle that makes up our whole economy and plan from there and try to set some goals for Ontario agriculture and try to ensure that the family farms in Ontario are preserved.

I think this should be one of the functions carried out in the minister's research department. At the moment, the minister is not doing that kind of work. I would like to hear the minister's comments on this. I would like him to indicate whether he intends to do this kind of economic research and if he is, when is he going to do it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the hon. member's inquiry, I think he is confusing the Agricultural Economics Research Council of Canada, to which we contribute $7,500 as a province, with the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario, which is described as research and services in this particular vote. They are two different things entirely.

The terms of reference of the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario, to which we are referring here, include:

Programmes of research in respect of agriculture, veterinary medicine and household science: to select and recommend areas of research for the betterment of agriculture, veterinary medicine and household science; to stimulate an interest in research as a means to developing in Ontario a high degree of efficiency in the production and marketing of agricultural products.

That is what the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario is all about. That is the group to whom we are referring in this particular vote.

My hon. friend's points, I think, are well taken in regard to agricultural economics research, and we do this on a national basis with each province contributing. Our share is $7,500. It is made up of grants from the various provinces, the Canada Department of Agriculture, farm organizations and agribusiness across Canada as well. That is the source of funds that is directed to this organization. We dealt with that, Mr. Chairman, if I might mention, in an earlier vote that was carried last week.

Mr. Makarchuk: May I correct the minister? The amount is not $75,000, it is $7,500. Is that what he is referring to on the administration?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am sorry; it is $7,500.

Mr. Makarchuk: Fine.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: If I said $75,000 I am wrong.

Mr. Makarchuk: My point again is that the research carried on at the federal level may apply to Ontario and does, in many cases, apply to Ontario. But, at the same time, there should be some kind of policy originating from this Department of Agriculture and Food relating to agriculture in Ontario, to ensure that it continues to exist in its viable form; to ensure that the family farms will continue and to examine the possible alternate production of various commodities in order that there remains a viable industry.

I think that some of this kind of research can be done on the provincial level more than is done at the moment. The government has a few projects going on that are related to Ontario, but I think the government should be involved in this field at much greater expense than it is at this particular time.

Mr. Chairman: Item 3?

Mr. Ruston: Item 4, Mr. Chairman, on research—I mentioned this the other day. I would like to ask the minister if he has looked over the Topcon report with regard to the Vegetable Growers Marketing Association? I got a letter away today to the Minister of Revenue in Ottawa with regard to imports of some canned tomatoes and tomato paste. I think this is something that should come under a fair amount of research. It seems to me that there is room here for some work to be done. I see under research it says, salaries $2.5 million; services $8.8 million. I am just not sure where all these are put in, but I am wondering about the crops we are growing. We are growing tomatoes, No. 2 tomato crops in Ontario. I think we are producing 300,000 tons for processing, as peeled tomatoes; and we are importing tomatoes. I see that tomatoes that come in from Spain come in at 6.9 cents per pound for value for duty purposes.

According to the Topcon report, there seems to be the possibility that there should be anti-dumping legislation put on this. Of course we know that this is up to the federal government, but I wonder if the minister has ever consulted with The Department of Revenue in Ottawa. They are the ones who have to do with the duties and dumping duties. Has he ever consulted with them on matters such as this?

We also have tomato paste coming in at prices for value for duty from U.S. 19 cents, Italy 18 cents and Portugal 13 cents. I am wondering if this is not an area for the Minister of Agriculture and Food for the Province of Ontario as one interested in increasing the income of farmers of Ontario. Since not only does it increase the income of the farmers of Ontario, it creates new employment, anything produced in the country, in my opinion, is very important rather than importing it. So has the minister ever—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: This is not under the research vote. This is nothing to do with research.

Mr. Ruston: This is under research—whether these things should be grown in Ontario or not. The minister bounced this off the other day. Does he want to bet? Do away with it. Slough it off. He is not interested in it. Why is he not interested in something that would create more employment for the farming industry here and now?

He sits back there and every time he gets a chance he gives a political speech in this Legislature instead of dealing with farm commodities that he should be dealing with. It is time somebody told him where to get off, because it is all he does. I know he is a good politician but he is not looking after the farming community when he is doing that.

Mr. Chairman: The item is research and services.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is not in this vote.

Mr. Ruston: It certainly is in this vote. Research is whether we can grow this stuff in Ontario or whether they can grow it in Portugal or Spain, and that is in research.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We know that.

Mr. Ruston: All right, where is the minister spending this $8 million then? I want to know where some of that money goes.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member does not need to get his blood pressure up.

Mr. Nixon: It would be hard not to.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I simply suggested, Mr. Chairman, that the matter of tariffs and trades and these kinds of things comes more properly under the food council vote that was passed.

Mr. Nixon: He wants to know whether we can grow a similar product.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We know that we cannot. That has already been determined. There is research going on now in Ontario at the Harrow stations—I understand at Vine-land as well—and I believe at the Simcoe station in a lesser way—to determine the type of tomatoes that are suitable for mechanical harvesting. So we know that this can come about. There are a few mechanical tomato harvesters in Ontario right now. But for my hon. friend to ask, do I know anything about the Topcon research report, which I believe was something that was commissioned by the fruit and vegetable growers association itself. It is not available to us. To my knowledge, it has never been released for publication. I think it is something that they may have themselves. Maybe my hon. friend has a copy of it. I do not know if he has, but I know it has not been made available to our department in any way that I am aware of.

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Chairman, I can tell the minister that there is a summary of the Topcon report and it is in the Can-Crop news letter dated, April, 1971, sent out by the Ontario Vegetable Growers Marketing Board.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: If my hon. friend really wants to know how the money is being spent in agricultural economics, we have the annual report of the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario which has been tabled in the House. I would direct his attention to page 187 which describes the agricultural economics, programme 25, department of agricultural economics. I would suggest that if he were to review this he would note that farm management and production economics involve farm data collection and analysis; farm production and management, which involves cash crops and livestock production; and farm finance and taxation.

There is another separate section devoted to agricultural marketing and policy, involving dairy marketing and policies; livestock feed-grain economy; the market appraisal and outlook for Ontario farm products; and the various types of active agricultural economic research projects for 1969-1970. These are on page 191 of the report which describes in detail these various programmes that are now in operation. I believe that report is continued on page 92.

There is quite a detailed summary of how the money is spent. It is co-ordinated by the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario which is comprised not only of active farmers but agri-business people and professional people as well, to try to avoid research just for the sake of research. There is no point in spending money when answers have already been provided in other jurisdictions.

The purpose of establishing this research institute was to avoid the unnecessary spending of money in these areas.

If, in fact, we have learned that certain types of tomatoes, for instance, can be grown in the United States and harvested mechanically, it seems to me that much of our research has already been achieved in this regard. We should be able to make it available and know whether or not it is applicable in Ontario, and that is what is being done.

I would think that the value for the dollars provided by this province for agricultural research in this province, is very closely scrutinized by the people involved in the agricultural industry, both at production and agri-business level. We may have no fear that money is being in any way wasted.

Mr. Chairman: On item 3, the hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: Last year, the minister's specialists ran various field days throughout the province in conjunction with their particular fields of work, they picked out good farms throughout the area to hold their seminars in and I thought it was a very worthwhile project.

I wonder if they have given thought to a little more concentration on this effort and to use some of the good farmers as sources of experiments from time to time? I think it is most important, as was mentioned by the hon. member for Waterloo in respect to Fanshawe college. If they take these students out to farms that have been successful, the farmers have been able to give the boys a little bit of an education on the good management practices that they have utilized in their business. I feel that sometimes we lose sight of availing ourselves of the opportunities that are currently in the field when people would accept some direction if they were asked.

I think we could talk about the University of Guelph and the experimental farm at Elora. As you know, most of the civil servants are working an eight-hour day and sometimes they just do not work out the best that they might. Maybe the minister could expand these to some of the other areas?

Another thing that concerns me is the pollution as it affects the farmers. I do not know whether or not it comes under this vote, but I would think that some experimental research must be going on in this department to ascertain what the farmer can do and what he cannot. I got a call on the weekend intimating that one farmer was burning stumps. The air pollution control board from London came down and ordered him to call the fire department and put out the fire, which he did. Apparently, it was still smouldering and they had to call it again. So he is faced with a bill of about $200 to put out a fire.

So these are some of the problems that we in the farming enterprise today are encountering, and I wonder if some information is forthcoming from the research department: how they can burn stumps, for example, without being fined; how they can burn brush in the Niagara Peninsula without being fined. I understand that in some areas it has to be burned in an incinerator.

They also tell us that if they are in the small-animal business, such as hogs or chickens, if they have any animals that die, they have to provide a special type of incinerator with a two-combustion chamber of some description that is very costly. And yet they can almost throw a stone to Lake Erie, where great big ships are going past, spewing out smoke as if it was going out of style.

So these are things that are concerning some of the farmers, and rightly so. Another thing that is concerning me is in The Dead Animal Disposal Act. It mentions small animals being disposed of through this Act. I have had complaints indicating to me that the people who have these licences to remove large animals refuse to come and get small animals, and it has become quite a problem with hog farmers and chicken farmers. Now, there are a few problems I would ask you to consider and to which maybe you can reply.

Another one that I am concerned about is the incidence of IBR in the many livestock herds throughout the province and whether we are beginning to cope with it. It is one of the diseases that is related to the respiratory system of animals and, as such, has been causing considerable loss to many livestock people throughout the area. I just wonder if we are coming up with some serum that is getting on top of it, so to speak, or not.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the remarks that have been made by my friend from Oxford. I think there is great concern regarding apparent red tape that can develop in the enforcement of some of these regulations that are designed for pollution control.

However, one of the large items of the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario is this matter of pollution research control and I would again direct my hon. friend's attention to pages 62 and 63 of the report of the Agricultural Research Institute of Ontario which does deal, Mr. Chairman, with pollution control and waste utilization in agriculture. Of course, much of this work has been done at Guelph in an on-going programme, involving the departments of microbiology, soil science, agricultural economics, nutrition, poultry science and the school of engineering.

With regard to my hon. friend's concern with the burning of stumps, and restrictions being placed on that burning, it is difficult to understand, because there have been numerous people throughout Ontario who have been required to dispose of diseased elm trees or old orchards and these kinds of things. I have made contact personally with the department, both at head-office level and at branch offices throughout the province and I have never found a time when they denied anyone a permit to burn this product. But there may be times when the wind is blowing in such a direction that it might adversely affect the people in a town or across a highway or an intersection, when they would have some reservations about burning at that particular time. I wonder if the circumstances dictating the extinguishing of the fire in this particular circumstance were due to those conditions.

I am not sure, but it does seem to me that if someone lit fire to a bunch of old stumps and it was not causing any particular harm to anybody, that it would be inappropriate to say: "You have got to put that fire out," just for the sake of putting it out in order to go and get a permit to light it the next day and continue to burn it. That does not quite make sense, and I hope this has not been the case.

In regard to small dead animal disposal, it is a problem. There is no question about this, since those who pick up dead animals find that it is simply of no profit to them whatever to pick up the smaller animals. It is a problem.

The association has discussed the proposal of levying a charge for picking up these small animals. Most farmers refuse to pay that. Many of them have advised me they are going to bury these animals rather than have them picked up and pay a charge for it. It is a difficult situation. I am sure my hon. friend does not want dead animals left lying around, no matter whether they are small pigs or poultry or calves or what have you. This is not in the best interests of health, neither human nor animal.

Mr. Innes: They will not let you bury them.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: What do you mean they will not let you bury them? On your own farm?

Mr. Innes: Apparently you have to put them in a type of solid container now. That is what I understand.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is news to me, I must confess, but we will certainly look into that. That is the first I have ever heard of it, because I do not think that is included in The Dead Animal Disposal Act. As far as I know they are buried.

Mr. MacDonald: It is what is known as a coffin.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We will have a look at it anyway.

An hon. member: Pollution control.

Mr. Chairman: On item 3, the hon. member for Oxford.

Mr. Innes: I wanted to make another comment. Recently the minister was viewing a new building, a new concept of a building that was built at Thamesford by a man by the name of Reg Kendall, and—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: It is in your riding. You were not there.

Mr. Innes: I happened to be away on other business. I am like you—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: You were rounding up the group for last night's school meeting.

An hon. member: Come on, get back down to earth. You are just being political again.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is what he was doing.

Mr. Innes: Are you finished?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Sure, I wanted to throw that little comment in.

Mr. Innes: Thank you, that is okay. I take it from where it comes.

This particular chap has inaugurated a new system of building farm buildings, and I think it is useful in other areas, too. The strange part of it is he asked the minister if he would impose on the then Minister of Trade and Development, Mr. Randall, and see if he could get a loan for him because this type of construction could be utilized in areas other than farming, but he found out that he did not have much success.

This man now has financial support from other sources and he is doing a really fine job and going ahead by leaps and bounds. What I am concerned about is why a person, by reason of being a farmer, could not get the ODC loan? Had he been in any other type of a business, it is likely he would have been able to get it.

I do hope that in this new legislation that is coming forth, the minister will put his right foot forward and say, "We have got to have some of ODC loans for farmers who can start up a new type of business that will be related to farming, not only in the production field, but also in the merchandising and processing field." I think he should really get up and make it known very forcefully.

Another thing that concerns me—reverting back a little bit to pollution again—he knows there are many dryers throughout the province which are drying all types of corn and soy beans and everything. The pollution people are very concerned with the elements that sometimes come off—they are very insignificant as far as I am concerned.

I would hope that his department would use its good offices to make sure that nothing will harm these operators who are trying to do the best they can and would be put out of business in a chain reaction across the province, because it could be very serious if this ever happened. There must be research provided by the large amount of money that we have in this vote that would help facilitate pollution control equipment that would help these people.

Mr. Chairman: Is item 3 carried?

Vote 105 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: This completes the study of the estimates of The Department of Agriculture and Food.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves that the committee of supply rise and report progress and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report it has come to a certain resolution and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS BROKERS ACT

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves second reading of Bill 19, An Act to amend The Real Estate and Business Brokers Act.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): The former Attorney General does not get away with his bills quite that easy.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): It was a good try.

Mr. Lawlor: That was a trick move, if I may say so. I would have the Attorney General—as I have said to him in private and I would like to get it on to the record—review what was said about this bill in principle, inclusive of the loan and trust corporations; some rather, I thought, devastating criticism in October 30, 1969, in Hansard—a number of pages. I will not repeat the critique of that particular day but the very theory that it is embodied in this legislation comes up again under this head.

We all know that a number of loan and trust corporations are setting up corporate charters in Ontario at this time, moving in a grand and even grandiose way into the area of real estate practice by way of subsidiaries. I know there is a substantial disturbance in the real estate profession itself as to the inroads that are being made. Since real estate is precisely a service, it does not fall within the ambit of The Combines Act of the federal government. There is grave danger, as things presently stand in this particular area of the takeovers in a large way. The trust and loan corporations are hiring salesmen away from the smaller brokers. I am surprised and I must tell the minister I would like to know to what extent this legislation, which was introduced just a short time ago, has been circulated among the real estate people as to receiving representations and possibly objections from them under this head.

I know of one real estate man—and I do not think it is any breach of confidence in mentioning his name in this House—who has made overtures to the former minister, and possibly to the minister, by the name of Bruce Conklin. He is a private real estate operator in the Etobicoke area and has the severest type of reservations about this sort of thing.

The legislation, as it is presently set up, offers a fair range of possibilities. If somebody who is a shareholder, a private individual—not, I take it at the moment, another company—holds shares in a corporation that is seeking a brokerage licence, 51 per cent of those individuals must themselves be brokers before that corporation will be accepted for registration under this Act and therefore permitted to trade in real estate.

That obviously cannot apply to the same extent with loan and trust corporations.

The loan and trust corporation no doubt will hold 100 or more shares in the subsidiary corporation that is set up precisely to trade in real estate; in turn, that corporation of course is held by a diversity of interests. It would be very difficult, I suspect, to find—or it would certainly perhaps be a bit ludicrous to seek to pull 51 per cent of the voting shares of the trust and loan corporation itself into a brokerage position.

But what I am a little worried about is that actually the section as redefined goes further. The corporation itself, which is a non-broker—such as a trust and loan corporation—can hold shares in corporation B, which is a brokerage corporation. But if it is a loan and trust corporation it need not make this type of disclosure or reveal the 51 per cent in order to qualify for the registration.

I am concerned about those other corporations, where corporation A seeks to hold any portion of corporation B, less than 50 per cent; apparently in that context neither loan or trust corporations nor any type of corporation is obliged to register under this Act, under those circumstances.

I am wondering therefore if this is not a hiatus in the section itself, and an oversight in providing for a kind of corporate control. If one or more persons hold a majority or a substantial interest in a loan or trust corporation, which in turn controls a real estate brokerage house, what is the position of those one or more persons holding such a substantial interest?

Secondly, can brokerage corporation B hold voting shares in any other non-real estate corporation operating in a diversity of other aspects?

In the previous legislation those who were operating in real estate were confined to real estate. There has been a precise exclusion of that again in this legislation touching loan and trust corporations.

I do not want to prolong this debate. There are a lot of intricate issues connected with it. I think I can get the main issues out, if the hon. minister would consider sending the matter into the committee and all these nice questions can be investigated more closely. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, there is something that occurs to me. In recent months I have been hearing the expressions of certain concern from some members of the real estate profession, and I was wondering—this is more by way of a question than a speech on second reading—the extent to which the minister has been in consultation with the Real Estate Brokers' Association, because they have been expressing some very serious concerns about the way that the present legislation is affecting them.

Independent brokers, by and large who operate on their own and in an unincorporated fashion, have been very worried that certain things in the legislation are proving pretty onerous in relation to competition and so on. Perhaps leading from that I will have some further remarks that the minister could clarify.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to enter the debate before the minister replies? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I think I could answer both the hon. members who have spoken very briefly, and I will certainly endeavour to do so.

First of all, let me say that the legislation permitting loan corporations—what we call loan and trust corporations—to become real estate brokers was passed in Ottawa in 1969-1970. The hon. member can find that legislation in chapter 17, Statutes of Canada, 1969-1970.

They gave to the loan corporation, federally incorporated, the right to be a real estate broker. Last year, in this House, this Legislature passed legislation under our Loan and Trust Corporations Amendment Act. He will find that in 1970 Statutes of Ontario, chapter 1, 1970, chapters 1 to 9. This gave to the loan and trust corporation the right to hold a broker's licence, a real estate broker's licence. The difficulty then arose, although the principle was well established both federally and provincially in that our Real Estate and Business Brokers Act says that a corporation cannot hold a broker's licence unless its shareholders, holding at least 51 per cent of its shares, are themselves real estate brokers.

The principle of giving the loan corporation a real estate broker's licence was well established at Ottawa in 1969-1970, in this Legislature last year, and we need to make that slight change in The Real Estate and Business Brokers Act. The trust company has always been excepted from that 51 per cent rule. The loan company we have put on the same basis. Unless we do this, Mr. Speaker, our provincial corporations will flee to Ottawa for their incorporation, and in order to put everybody on an even footing it is necessary to adopt this amendment. I am quite prepared to have this go to committee, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): The minister is pre-empting the children's hour.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Right.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Singer: No, I think we should go to the standing committee.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. minister direct it to go to the standing committee?

Agreed to.

Mr. Singer: Will you notify the brokers' association about it?

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Yes.

Mr. Singer: Because I know some of them are concerned.

Clerk of the House: The first order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion that this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the government.

ON THE BUDGET

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, in rising to deal with the budget, I think I should preface my remarks by saying that it is the first time I have had the pleasure of sharing network coverage with Her Majesty the Queen, so it would be only right, I am sure, to express my respects for the monarchy on this occasion. I trust that this is a conciliatory enough opening for everyone in the House.

It was, Mr. Speaker, a memorable day last Monday when the darling of the Chatham Chamber of Commerce, the Treasurer (Mr. McKeough), bulked himself up in his seat and began to speak to the budget document, having reached almost the top rung—although not quite the top rung—of the political ladder in his party. There may indeed come another time, Mr. Speaker, and we wish him well after a long tenure in the opposition.

The Premier (Mr. Davis) looked proudly on at the young lad, the man who now plays Cromwell to William Davis' Henry. Mr. McKeough had that confident smile, that cherubic grin, that slightly dissonant french-horn voice as he began to read the budget.

The fantasy world was pricked early, you will recall Mr. Speaker, when the Treasurer said inadvertently that his uncle 18 years ago had read his first and only budget in this Legislature—one of those slips revealing a keen glimpse of the political future.

Then, the preliminaries over, the minister entered into an hour and a half from the document. After the first 15 minutes some were sedated, others were anxious, and many in fact, Mr. Speaker, were disappointed.

Yet again, if I may say, the Achilles heel of the government was revealed—this time on view before the public of Ontario—the tremendous gap between promise and performance; that dull thud between expectation and reality which harasses every move of this government.

We are all inclined to be generous in this House—particularly with a new Premier—but the budget statement Mr. Speaker, was found wanting in virtually every single aspect. A sense again of a party that knows not how to govern. But let me point out, Mr. Speaker, with the time at my disposal, that there is an alternative party on this side of the House. And I want to provide for those of us in the New Democratic Party a 10-point critique of the budget, a sense of what might have been, and what can be, for a party like ours which has its bearings and knows where it is going.

Some hon. members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lewis: Point number one, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): The member knows the parties.

Mr. Lewis: The Treasurer called it a full employment budget. It was supposed to be a novel term. In fact, it is used by Richard Nixon in the United States. Mr. Speaker, it comes from Eisenhower. Eisenhower to Nixon to Davis. A strong stream of historical continuity. This kind of import which was put by the provincial Treasurer might have had—

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Eisenhower was a great golfer.

Mr. Lewis:—some relevance if, in fact, the budget chose to achieve full employment. Naturally, Mr. Speaker, one would assume that when Ontario has 200,000 people unemployed in the province, when there is a desperate crisis around jobs, one would introduce a budget dealing dramatically with questions of economic growth and employment.

So there was the predictable clarion call. Let me remind the minister of page 10 of the budget, Mr. Speaker. It said:

The new government of Ontario has promised the people of the province that it will combat the current intolerable level of unemployment with every means at its command. . . . To achieve this target, 150,000 new jobs are needed in Ontario this year. . . . I come now—

said the Treasurer—to the vital matter of tax policy—the key initiative in this budget to stimulate a revival of economic growth in job opportunities in Ontario. . . . I have, therefore, decided to concentrate our limited capacity to finance tax cuts on——a major move designed to produce a massive stimulus to business investment.

I note—

There is a speech writer with imagination run rampant, Mr. Speaker, for when the pages are closed, what have we? We have a five per cent tax credit on the purchase of machinery and equipment before March 31, 1973, in the Province of Ontario, and because the Treasurer anticipated a revenue loss of $125 million, he obviously felt that there would be $2.5 billion worth of machinery and equipment purchased. Twenty-four hours later, under scrutiny, what happened to this massive stimulus, this major move in the budget?

Ninety per cent of the machinery and equipment was destined to be purchased anyway in the Province of Ontario—no incentive at all required.

The corporation tax, as a percentage of provincial revenues, dropped as a result of the Treasurer's statement from 11 per cent in 1970-1971 to eight per cent in 1971-1972. Under questioning, the provincial Treasurer could not give us a single estimate of the number of jobs to be created. More than half of the machinery to be purchased will be purchased outside Ontario and not applicable to this province. More than half the machinery purchased will be purchased by branch plant corporations which will continue to exercise their control over our economy with tax credits provided by this government. Some of the machinery will automate jobs, thereby being of no evident value at all, and it is as though the five per cent sales tax need not have been paid.

Mr. Speaker, the entire programme evaporated under scrutiny. There was no major move. There was no massive stimulus. There was no key initiative. It was a breathtaking deception.

An hon. member: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: It was a $125-million gift.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): That is typical of the Tories.

Mr. Lewis: It was a $125 million gift to corporations in Ontario, courtesy of their friends and allies in the Progressive Conservative Party.

Some, who are unkind, would wish to ask how much might find its way back into the Tory party under the auspices of an election campaign. But we in this party, Mr. Speaker, are not unkind. We see no such relationship.

What would we have done to stimulate the economy and create employment in the Province of Ontario?

Mr. Speaker, if you want to increase consumer purchasing power, then we would have reduced the retail sales tax in this province by one full percentage point down from five to four per cent.

Some hon. members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lewis: It would have generated $150 million by way of increased consumer purchasing power in the economy. It would have meant much for most of the people in this province, rather than simply for the corporation, Mr. Speaker. It would have been easy to administer, there would have been no problems with federal conflicts, it would have been one of those factors greatly contributing to economic growth and jobs.

More important, Mr. Speaker, or as important, we feel that we are far too soft in this province on the corporate sector. We feel that in Ontario this year there should have been an additional point added to the corporation tax, rather than giving them this extraordinary $125 million handout. That additional point on the corporation tax would have brought us $35 million additional revenue to underwrite major social and economic policies of our kind of government. Now that is the way we would have dealt with a massive stimulus to the economy.

Mr. Speaker, that brings me to the second point I want to make in this 10-point statement. Because of the fixation of this government with the private sector—it has become for the Premier almost an obsession, akin to nothing else he has been addicted to for some considerable time, and he has few addictions—the public sector, Mr. Speaker, is debunked as a way of helping to create full employment.

But, Mr. Speaker, with great respect, the private sector of Ontario has failed, failed rather forlornly, and one wonders what this great government is about. They managed to create 60,000 additional jobs in the year 1970. The year 1971 requires two and a half times that number by their very budget statement, and nowhere is there any suggestion that they will be created.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps the single most important job-generating mechanism the government could have brought in was that of house-building—and then we look at the budget. Incredibly enough, the $500 million plan indicated in the Throne Speech was not even mentioned in the budget, not once. I would be interested to see where it is laid out, because we have looked at it rather carefully.

More than that, Mr. Speaker, the money that the provincial Treasurer has allocated for private housing investment in the budget is totally contingent on banks, on mortgage companies, on trust companies, on the capacity of people to pay down payments. In the area of the Ontario Housing Corporation, extraordinary though it may seem, there has been a decline of $1.2 million for the building of houses between 1970 and 1971. So much for your house building programme.

In other words, the extraordinary disappearance after the Throne Speech is borne out in the budget, and the hon. Minister of Trade and Development (Mr. Grossman) is confirmed as the master conjurer of them all, the Houdini of the cabinet. Not that he is svelte and supple. He is a man of some girth and prominence, but he has the capacity to have whole programmes disappear before the naked eye of this legislative assembly. With the minister's assumption of his portfolio, so went a massive house-building programme in the Province of Ontario.

What would we have done, Mr. Speaker? We would have sought to build, in the year 1971, 150,000 housing units in order to make up for the cumulative backlog of the last several years, as well as to meet current targets. And, as we indicated in the unemployment debate, as well as in this debate, for that end it is legitimate to borrow, because the return is immediate and the need is desperate.

Mr. Speaker, this brings me gently to the third point. In his budget the provincial Treasurer would dearly have loved to reduce taxes for low-income earners. There was a tear in his eye, I think some of us noticed, as he said he was unable to do so, and in the critical section of the budget document it read, page 24:

—the government of Ontario is convinced that the best way to achieve a powerful economic recovery is by reducing taxes... personal income taxes should be cut in order to bolster consumer purchasing power.

I am reading from the government statement.

Moreover, the only type of change we could make is a costly across-the-board decrease in rates. We cannot make the less costly selective reductions for low-income groups of the type we think are needed, and which would be in line with our long-run reform proposals.

That is a bit much to swallow with a straight face. The government would be wiser to admit that when in a crunch, it opts for a reduction in corporation taxes rather than giving a reduction in taxes to the people of Ontario generally.

We in this party are the first to concede, Mr. Speaker, that it is wrong to violate the fundamental programme of tax reform by a system of rebates and tax credits, but they have been handed out before. They have been handed out to groups which needed them desperately. The government has given money away by way of the basic shelter exemption. It has given a rebate to the farmers. It has given it to those on old age security.

Why was it not possible for the minister's government in this year to give a rebate to low-income earners in the Province of Ontario? Then the question becomes, what would we have done?

What would we have done?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Treasurer): By means test? How would the hon. member have done it?

Mr. Lewis: The Treasurer asks "on a means test?" Let me tell him how we would have handled it.

We would have introduced the tax rebate schedule to operate, just for this year, in advance of the Benson reform proposals and does the Treasurer know what we would have modelled it on? We would have modelled it on Ontario's tax reform proposals which he himself submitted a number of months ago. We would have embraced what he calls the Ontario low-income allowance, and what the government termed the Ontario refundable tax credit for people not paying income tax.

Both of those propositions seem to us viable. Both of those propositions seem to us legitimate. Both of those propositions seem to us urgent at this point in time, and we would have done it with pleasure and with resolution in advance of the Benson proposals because low-income earners in this province need it desperately.

Mr. MacDonald: The NDP government will.

Mr. Lewis: Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I am ready to admit that it would mean a loss in revenue overall of $105 million, roughly tabulating the minister's material. I am surprised he never uses his own material, some of it is worth salvaging.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: How would the hon. member have done it?

Mr. Lewis: I am going to come to that in a moment as well. Some of the material is worth salvaging, Mr. Speaker, and this is one of those programmes. Because to generate an additional $105 million worth of revenue—to pump prime the economy from the low-income earners that way in addition to a reduction in the retail sales tax—would have been a real economic stimulus worthy of the name, instead of this sham which the Treasurer introduced by way of budget.

One does it in one of two ways, Mr. Speaker. Either we negotiate with the federal government an additional line on the income tax form which results in the simple percentage return.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: So the hon. member could not have done it.

Mr. Lewis: How does the Treasurer know he could not have done it?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: The hon. member could not have done it.

Mr. Lewis: How does he know that we could not have done it?

Mr. MacDonald: It is tough sometimes.

Mr. Lewis: This government has not the imagination to try to negotiate certain things.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: The hon. member could not have done it.

Mr. Lewis: We will deal in the later minutes, Mr. Speaker, with why this government has such trouble dealing with Ottawa because of its present character and the way in which it behaves. Beyond that, the Treasurer could have handled it much as he handles the farm rebate programme, much as he handles the old age security programme—

Hon. Mr. McKeough: How would the member have worked in the means test then?

Mr. Lewis:—and the Treasurer could have worked out a needs test and the tax rebate programme. It is all outlined in his own document.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: The member is on the side of the separate income tax.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, it is a simple tax credit rebate system. I commend the minister to read his own material in order to divine its contents. It is a matter of some embarrassment that we should understand it and he does not.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: The mechanics are not available and the hon. member knows it.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, that brings me to the fourth point that I would like to make.

The government has announced a new formula for payments to mining municipalities. The Minister of Municipal Affairs, who is here today with his ruddy complexion, has indicated that it would result in 400,000 additional dollars for municipalities and school boards throughout the province. This is allegedly the first step in the direction of equity in mining revenues.

Let it be pointed out, Mr. Speaker, that it may mean some marginal relief, but it will not mean fundamental relief to the people across the province, especially in northern Ontario. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, by insisting that the northern municipalities bring their budgets to the Treasurer for scrutiny before he even dispenses the additional revenue, he is eroding their autonomy in a way they have not experienced for some considerable time.

Oh, they are centralizers all of them, and that is rather surprising at times for a Tory government. The "big daddy" syndrome. It does not begin to compensate for the exploitation of the last several years.

The parental allusion unsettles the Premier? The Premier sits with that amiable smile through most speeches.

Mr. Speaker, one wonders if the government has looked at the net profits after taxes of Inco, which I think exceeded $200 million in the year 1970. We wonder if they have looked at the net profits, after taxes, of Falconbridge and of Rio Algom and of Dennison Mines and of Texas Gulf. The same companies whom the Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs allows exemptions to process, smelt and refine their ores abroad.

In 1966 in Canada, Mr. Speaker, the book profits of the mining companies were $396 million, but the taxable profits were only $15 million, or four per cent—

Mr. MacDonald: Shame! Shame!

Mr. Lewis:—compared to 56 per cent for all corporations. And the mining companies, Mr. Speaker, have experienced the highest rate of return on investment in any sector of the economy in 1968, the second highest rate of return in 1969 and a comparable position in 1970.

What is it with this government? Whence such charity that comes from it, that it is prepared to extract only another $400,000 for northern Ontario and its mining municipalities?

We did not see people cavorting in the streets at the announcement. My colleagues from northern Ontario did not come back with reports of excitement stirring the north about the government's new policy.

Well, Mr. Speaker, what would we have done? We would have instituted a resource tax in this province, which amounts to an additional three per cent of the value of mineral production in Ontario. If that value is estimated at something in the vicinity of $1.6 billion, it would have meant an additional $48 million, with special relief to mining municipalities from those sums. Then resource taxation would be credible in Ontario.

In addition to that, of course, we would have had a full assessment in taxation of all mining property in Ontario.

You know, Mr. Speaker, while I am discussing mining revenues, perhaps I should talk of the north generally and what the government has done for the north. I suppose the most striking evidence in the document was the 11 cent reduction in the cost of a large case of beer in northern Ontario. We call it a policy of bottled tokenism in our party, Mr. Speaker.

You cannot buy northern Ontario for a fistful of hops, gentlemen, and that should be understood. Man does not live by beer alone, Mr. Speaker; there are other things with which northern Ontario is concerned. Lest none of the Tory backbenchers have yet noticed it, there is something called the price of fuel in northern Ontario. A spread of 10, 15, 20 cents from the south, depending on how far north one travels, without companies like Imperial or Shell or Gulf being called to this Legislature at any time, to justify their various expenditures and profits.

And what of the finished manufactured goods and the price spreads in northern Ontario, Mr. Speaker? And what of the freight rates, Mr. Speaker? How generous the government is to raise an additional $8 million by way of brewery revenue in order to lower the price 11 cents in the north—to which we do not object.

I wonder how much time the Premier has recently devoted to a study of the balance sheets of the breweries, which will now receive from this government an additional $2.5 million by virtue of this reform. This government's tax proposals have benefited the corporate world more than they would have believed possible with the coming to the throne of the Premier (Mr. Davis).

Look at the Ontario Development Corporation programme, Mr. Speaker, and the forgivable loans as a part of it. Until now, northern Ontario has received something like 13.7 per cent of the forgivable loans allocated. In this year's budget they will receive 14.6 per cent of the moneys allocated.

Mr. MacDonald: Breathtaking; breathtaking!

Mr. Lewis: That is the way the government views the north.

What of processing, Mr. Speaker? What of processing of the resources in northern Ontario to which there was a modest hint? The government will recall that the budget endorsed the principles of the Toronto-centred region plan, and how does one of those principles read? Let me remind the government:

Because of the location within the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence megalopolis, the Toronto-centred region plan proposal can increase its economic role in processing resources which currently originate in northern Ontario.

Mr. MacDonald: Shame.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Shame!

Mr. Lewis: So much for the processing of the resources in northern Ontario.

What perverse political antagonism has this government against the north? Again, an unkind soul suggested that because all the northern delegates voted for Allan Lawrence in the leadership race, the Premier was wreaking some kind of quiet political toll as a result. Why is it that the north cannot capture the imagination of this government? Hewers of wood and drawers of water forever!

What would we have done, Mr. Speaker? We would have a prices review board before which all price differentials must be justified in the major commodities, transportation and fuel areas. We would have a public inquiry into the freight rates and the transportation costs. We would have a major loan programme for northern Ontario and we would have processing by law at home in Ontario, if necessary through Crown corporations, to achieve our purpose.

Mr. Speaker, that brings me to point five, which is the special pleasure the Treasurer got in imposing a five per cent wage ceiling on the civil service. It is called selective discrimination. The government is singling out one of the most vulnerable sectors of the work force to impose wage guidelines which are absolutely unconscionable and indefensible.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Shameful!

Mr. Lewis: This government has been in negotiation with the civil servants for a number of months, and never once during the course of the negotiations did the government have the civility to tell the civil servants that they would be subject to five per cent guidelines. Section 12 of The Ontario Labour Relations Act talks about good-faith bargaining. Where was the good faith of the government in bargaining with the civil servants? Mr. Speaker, the civil service of Ontario goes to arbitration, and the provincial Treasurer says at a press conference that the government will not be governed by an arbitration award if it exceeds five per cent.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I said no such thing. I said no such thing.

Mr. Pilkey: He did so.

Mr. Lewis: What a unilateral piece of poppycock that was!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: They have been retreating with remarkable haste. Indeed the government has shown considerable capacity to retreat.

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): Do not mislead this House before a viewing audience.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Now the member is twisting words.

Mr. Lewis: I ask, Mr. Speaker, about the hospital workers whose take home pay often ranges between $65 and $75—

Hon. Mr. McKeough: He is twisting, distorting—

Mr. Lewis: Oh, oh. Have I touched a sensitive nerve in the provincial Treasurer?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: The member is twisting the truth.

Mr. Lewis: Have I touched a sensitive nerve?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: He is distorting the truth.

Mr. Lewis: Let us take the five per cent wage guidelines and apply it to certain of his cabinet colleagues, like the Prime Minister of Ontario, whose budget in his department went up from $407,000 to $684,000 over the one-year period. That is an increase not of five per cent but of 68 per cent. One wonders how many of the civil servants in the Premier's department were subject to the five per cent wage guidelines at the time of coming into employment.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, I understand the need for additional civil servants in order to handle the Premier's affairs. After all, as Martin Goldfarb, the very expert public relations consultant, has pointed out in more newspapers than the minister would care to remember, it is necessary to sell the Premier as one sells a can of tomatoes.

After all, to transform the Premier into a can of tomatoes is a job which—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Better than a can of worms.

Mr. Lewis:—requires many civil servants, some of them highly paid. The transformation would be remarkable indeed. Think of the way in which one's physical anatomy would have to be altered—one's hair perhaps. But then, as has been pointed out in many papers, the Premier can always call in Mr. Ivan to give him a $15 trim, off the top as it were, for the Premier's office.

A little embarrassing, what? The government of the $15 primp—trim; either one will do. I, alas, am one of those old-fashioned types who still goes to a barber. In a sense, the Premier is old-fashioned too—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): How much does the hon. member's cost?

Mr. Lewis:—he has to have his civil servants call Mr. Ivan, unlike the leader of the Liberal Party who goes to the salon and enters the celebrities' room which is a privy that some of us have not yet ventured into.

What would we have done, Mr. Speaker? There would have been no imposition of unilateral ceilings on the civil service. They are free to negotiate in the best traditions of collective bargaining, and whatever the arbitrator settled—if arbitration was engaged in—would be acceptable to a New Democratic government in Ontario.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: This leads me, Mr. Speaker, to the sixth point of the 10 I wanted to make.

The budget makes only the slightest of passing references to a capital gains tax. It is as though the government has forgotten about this potential source of revenue, waiting totally on the federal decision, typically catering to privilege, excluding itself from a source of revenue that is extremely important in the Province of Ontario.

What would we have done, Mr. Speaker, to put it fairly succinctly? Regardless of the federal decision to be announced by Mr. Benson, which is likely to be a 25 per cent capital gains tax in Canada, we would tax capital gains at full income tax rates. We would ask the federal government to gather that money for us, additional to the 25 per cent that they tax themselves.

If they would not do it, then we will set up the administrative apparatus to do it for the Province of Ontario. But I have no doubt that in that instance they would indeed cooperate.

Mr. Speaker, I point out that the Carter report in its analysis of a buck for a buck, indicated that over a period of time—one assumes four to five years—a capital gains tax at full income tax rates in Ontario could yield as much as $460 million if applied to 1971. The Treasurer nods his head in assent.

What right has the government of Ontario to exclude itself from such an important tax resource for so many years? The answer is: no right whatsoever. The possibilities of funding a number of programmes in Ontario are very great as we move to that eventual outcome, understanding, Mr. Speaker, as we do, that there must be a specific exemption for homes and for farms when applying the capital gains tax in Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take another point about this budget—it is a little particular perhaps; but necessary. Nor would we in this party wish to exclude Ontario from the field of succession duty. We are not as sure as the government of Ontario and the official opposition that that makes any great sense.

The taxation of transfers of wealth between the generations, Mr. Speaker, is one of the principal means to move toward a more egalitarian society, provided of course, we look after the needs of widows, widowers and dependent children, and do not force the breakup of family farms and businesses.

Ontario is now receiving something in the nature of $24 million over and above what it would receive by way of a 75 per cent return on the federal estate tax. We think that those levels are largely valid. We would even accept much of the budgetary increase in the succession duty levels which the Treasurer introduced, but we see no reason to exclude ourselves from a field of income which would range somewhere between $12 million and $24 million in Ontario at the very bottom.

Let me point out, Mr. Speaker, that the present level of federal taxation of estates is extremely modest. It averaged 9.3 per cent of the net value of dutiable estates in 1969, and will likely be less when the 1968 federal amendments take full effect. In the field of capital gain and succession duties we would vary dramatically from the government.

Point seven: The government sounded a bold trumpet about bringing nursing home care into OHSIP and all of us applauded that extension of medical care coverage although much of what was said worried us greatly. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, there is no reason in the world to delay the introduction of nursing home coverage until April 1, 1972. We have lost a full year during which time a great many people in this province will be excluded from that to which they are entitled.

Nor, Mr. Speaker, is it entirely clear to us why the government insists on imposing a $3.50 deterrent fee for nursing home coverage under OHSIP. The fact of the matter is that when looked at in the context of, say, those who receive old age security, $135 a month—even with the guaranteed income supplement—loses $105 a month.

I suppose it is part of the Conservative maxim that you must suffer a little before you receive, but it makes questionable sense to us and we see no reason why those who are most vulnerable in the society are always subject to such reluctant and begrudging assistance.

This year, Mr. Speaker, with the highest premiums in Canada, the Province of Ontario is budgeting in its OHSIP accounts for a surplus of $7.5 million. That is independent of any federal moneys. We do not use all the moneys coming to us federally for OHSIP, as the provincial Treasurer knows. Indeed, about 40 per cent of the money goes to something called the health resources fund, about which less and less is heard as more and more is allocated. The fact of the matter is that OHSIP is one of the most expensive programmes in this government. It is poorly administered; it is bureaucratic; it is inefficient. Indeed the organization of health care in Ontario is probably the least effective organization of any service to people in the province, with the possible exception of education itself.

Now Mr. Speaker, what would we have done in this area? We are pledged to provide a health care plan to the people of the Province of Ontario, at no more than $5 a month per individual and $10 a month per family, covering medical care, hospital, drugs and nursing homes. We would finance it, Mr. Speaker, largely by a shift from the regressive flat rate premium to an income tax based on ability to pay. Where this has been achieved, in the Province of Manitoba, it is worth noting that everybody in the province who receives an income of under $11,800 a year pays less by way of income tax to cover health costs than they paid by way of premium. That seems to us to be a very compelling argument.

But it is more than that, Mr. Speaker, it is more than that. In the last several years, in Canada and in the Province of Ontario, it has become readily apparent that if we reorganize the delivery of health services in the province, if we shift the focus from acute centred hospital treatment to community health services, like the Soo or St. Catharines, or what is proposed for Ottawa, or the Kaiser plan in California, or the health insurance plan in New York State, we can make enormous savings which can be transferred to bear the costs of health services generally.

Indeed the Ontario council of health—in a sense a creature of this government—analyzing the Kaiser plan in California indicated, Mr. Speaker, that a transferred saving for Ontario on a similar plan could amount to as much as $280 million. I am not precisely sure, Mr. Speaker, what part of that can be applied totally to Ontario, but everyone is agreed that the savings would be enormous. It is from a redirection of the delivery of health care in Ontario that we would finance much of our health services system.

That brings me to item eight. The budget deals in astoundingly inadequate ways with the cost of education and the costs of local and regional government.

You know, Mr. Speaker, it is as if we had no control over the juggernaut that was unleashed by the Premier when he was Minister of Education, and by the provincial Treasurer when he was Minister of Municipal Affairs. We have inherited the legacy of William Davis and Darcy McKeough, amiable gentlemen both.

The legacy is a system of costs of education which have moved astronomically upwards in certain areas—illegitimately—and which now that the guidelines have been imposed, intrude on the quality of education in some other areas. Why were the guidelines imposed at this point, albeit effectively in some areas? Because the whole system ran so much out of kilter while the Premier was Minister of Education, supervising its management.

The legacy to the people of Ontario is a lack of planning. To individual property owners and taxpayers it is an enormous burden. They are reeling under the fiscal blows, Mr. Speaker, and there is no relief to speak of. What did this budget do for the property owner and for the taxpayer in Ontario? It promises to assume 60 per cent of the costs of education, and that is all. The budget indicates it will not go further. It says it will pay an additional $4.8 million towards regional government, and under analysis that turns out to be $3.8 million for policing and $1 million for the regional government of York for special programmes.

And that, Mr. Speaker, will be no substantial relief whatsoever. The truth is, as the chart on page 71 of the budget shows, that every single year—with the exception of 1968—a sizable, sometimes indefensible, increase in property tax rates has been experienced by the people of Ontario, whether municipal or educational, or both, and the same will be true in 1971 under this government.

Now what is the NDP alternative, Mr. Speaker, that to which we are already pledged? We would move to the assumption of 80 per cent of the costs of education by the year 1975, that is, in the life of our first term of office. We have indicated clearly and carefully in this Legislature that we would find it by way of corporation tax revenue, capital gains revenue, resource revenue, and a natural growth of the economy over that period of time. The details have been spelled out, I think, in reasonable and appropriate fashion.

Mr. J. Renwick: The Minister of Highways and Transport (Mr. MacNaughton) knows the member is right.

Mr. Lewis: We would introduce a municipal foundation programme, Mr. Speaker, providing equalization grants for regional municipalities across the province. It is profoundly wrong for the government to introduce regional government without giving it the fiscal strength to meet the new expectations which the people in the regional municipalities have.

Mr. J. Renwick: A tremendous mistake.

Mr. Lewis: That, Mr. Speaker, brings me to what I consider the most important point I want to make about this budget—point number 9.

The language of the budget, Mr. Speaker, provokes deliberate confrontation with Ottawa. The statesmanship of early times becomes the partisanship of today. Here we have a government—look at their active, vital features—here we have a government, Mr. Speaker, anxious, defensive, vulnerable, casting frantically about for an election issue, and it resorts to one of the most predictable political diversions, turning its guns when in trouble, on Ottawa.

So this document, this fashionable budget document, is full of strident, unlovely and provocative language. The government economists shed their clothes to become political propagandists. And they are no longer working for the government; they have been transformed into servants of the Progressive Conservative Party.

The attack on Ottawa, Mr. Speaker, apart from its irresponsibility and its reckless toying with federal provincial relationships—the provincial Treasurer will be known historically as the great balkanizer of confederation—the irresponsibility of the language in his attack on Ottawa simply will not wash.

Mr. Speaker, the reality is that during the period of Pierre Trudeau's most nefarious economic legislation—those things which offended all of us most, the unemployment levels, the Prices and Incomes Commission, the willingness to use inflation as an excuse for the refusal to plan the economy—what was this government doing during that entire period of time? I remember the former Premier standing in his place and talking about the problems of inflation in the economy and admitting that, perhaps, there were restraints needed in certain areas.

Just a couple of weeks ago we asked the Premier whether he would institute an appraisal of the price increases in the gasoline industry. He said to us, "I do not institute a prices review in the private sector."

If the government wants to make a substantial attack upon Ottawa then it will have to explain why, during the entire period of inflation, it refused to countenance any restraint of prices, of profits, of interest rates, of rents, or of other forms of income.

Mr. J. Renwick: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lewis: All the government talked about was the possibility of restraining wages, and that is an insufficient basis on which to attack Ottawa today. It goes further than that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is not right.

Mr. Lewis: The government's attack on Ottawa would have been much more impressive if this budget had made every conceivable provision to buoy up the economy. If this budget had, in fact, created major employment. If this budget had, in fact, stimulated economic growth.

But the budget is doing none of that. The budget is an unsubstantial document. The budget has failed in terms of accelerating the economy and therefore, even though none of us in this party would apologize for a moment for the policies of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the Prime Minister's own position is profoundly vulnerable.

Mr. Pilkey: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lewis: The only party that apologizes for Pierre Elliott Trudeau in this Legislature is the Liberal Party, and one can understand that. They have a consciousness of foreign control that others have not yet experienced.

Mr. Speaker, if the budget were just—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: I am sorry. I should have said colonial dependency, or something of the kind.

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister without Portfolio): The Leader of the Opposition is blushing.

Mr. Lewis: The angry rhetoric of the budget, Mr. Speaker, if that were all, would not concern us. It is too transparent. We would bring you right back to the provincial battleground when the election is called. The divisionary tactics with Ottawa would not suffice.

But it all led to a section of the budget which we in this caucus, find the most disturbing part of all in this document. Let me read it to remind the government. The Treasurer says:

I wish to state now our clear intention to assume complete responsibility for the established shared-cost programmes in exchange for fiscal equivalence and to resist rigorously the establishment of new shared-cost programmes. In the long run, this solution will serve all governments better.

Mr. Speaker, in those words lies a greater threat to Confederation than all the other angry rhetoric of the document.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Nonsense.

Mr. Lewis: What are you prepared to do—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Listen.

Mr. Lewis: —is to pull out from your fiscal commitments to Canada. Let me take the provincial Treasurer back to more glorious days when he was a gladiator in combat at Maple Leaf Gardens and that famous night when all the young men seeking the golden fleece spoke to the assembled throng and the Treasurer had to show where his troops would go the next day. Would it be to William Davis or would it be to Allan Lawrence?

And it became pretty clear, did it not, when he read from the podium at Maple Leaf Gardens the following statement—it was thunderous, and it was effective, and even though he called some of us sham statesmen, I could not help but think, "Nicely done, Darcy, nicely done."

The municipal affairs minister told the delegates: We have heard some blustering talk in this leadership campaign about tough negotiations with Ottawa, about demanding a fuller accounting of federal assistance going to other parts of the country. I too will stand up for Ontario—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: —he said, pulling himself to his full height.

Well now I feel better. The members opposite are alive, Mr. Speaker. I was concerned for a little while.

Mr. MacDonald: They have finally woken up.

Mr. S. J. Randall (Don Mills): Why do you not joint us?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Justice): You must admit, it is an effort today.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: I thought maybe everyone was comatose.

“I too will stand up for Ontario,” said Darcy McKeough, “but I will not pawn the Robarts mantle of statesmanship and reconciliation for a bigger fistful from the federal till.”

Mr. Pilkey: Now what is the hon. Treasurer and Minister of Economics going to say?

Mr. Lewis: How do those words sit in the mouth today, provincial Treasurer? How do they sit in the mouth today? Well, there may be some anxiety on the part of the government, but all of them know what they are about.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We sure do.

Mr. Lewis: The government are skilled tacticians; they are worthy politicians. They know what they are about when they enter into federal-provincial discussions.

And what exactly is Ontario saying? It is saying that it is going to take post-secondary education, medical care insurance, the Canada Assistance Plan, hospital insurance—programmes equalling $1 billion in cost-sharing—and Ontario is going to opt out. What the government wants instead are the income tax points; what they are asking for, by way of tabulation, is 54.5 points on the income tax, rather than the 28 points they now receive. That is how it works out.

Quebec did it. But it was more a matter of symbolic bookkeeping, because the arrangement between the federal government and Quebec meant that Quebec did not get any more than they would otherwise have received by way of grants. But that is not what Ontario intends. What Ontario intends is to receive the income tax points, which continue to expand from year to year, and bring more and more money into the coffers of Ontario and undermine the fiscal core of this country.

It will destroy the fiscal basis of Confederation. The government has run around uttering that the federal government takes out between $1.4 billion and $2 billion more than it puts into Ontario, but it has no evidence for the statements. The documents that government has produced are hollow documents. Many of the journalists and people in the media have exposed them as hollow on countless occasions.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: One; Harold Greer!

Mr. Lewis: Well, I will read Harold Greer on this occasion.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Many! Harold is not many. That is interesting.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That is Lewisonian policy.

Mr. Lewis: Not only Harold Greer, but the research economists of the New Democratic Party—and that is good enough for me.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Now we know who writes the stories.

Mr. Lewis: And you know, Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Who is it that does his research?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I too should have the humble right of rallying the troops on occasion. We do not make as much noise when we are rallying.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They have not got that many.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, let me point out that, as every member opposite knows, even though the head offices of corporations that are taxable are in the province of Ontario, the sales run right across Canada. The former Premier said on innumerable instances that this province should pay to maintain Confederation. What did he say recently? "Ontario does not object to paying a price for Confederation." He says that. And: "Our equalization payments to other parts of Canada are part of Ontario's profound responsibility toward the health of the Canadian federation."

Where is that spirit now?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Dried out.

Mr. Lewis: What distorted ends are served by this destructive political logic on which the Tories now embark? Look at what happens. The government destroys national standards. That is evident. The possibility of a guaranteed annual income will be very difficult to achieve. The government will undermine the exchange of information among provinces; the regional disparity in the Maritimes and in the West would be more pronounced. Any federal fiscal policy that might be exercised in a positive way will be undermined. The assertion in the budget statement is so bald and categorical that they have left themselves insufficient room for manoeuvring. Their position is defiant and wrong-headed.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): They are going to destroy the country.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, what would we have done? We know that the federal government is in no sense angelic concerning fiscal relationships. We recognize the degree of inflexibility. But instead of going to Victoria or anywhere else, saying that we are committed to opting out, we would have gone to Victoria and said, "We are determined to make the cost-sharing arrangement work so that the country can work."

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: If one treats Confederation in that spirit, Mr. Speaker, in precisely the same way that one uses the strength of Ontario to keep Quebec in Confederation, then indeed there would have been a role for this government. Unlike the Tories, we have not yet lost faith in the capacity of the country to function as a country, rather than as 10 dismembered units.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: That leads me, curiously enough, to the last point I want to make: The Conservative Party in Ontario similarly lacks faith in the capacity of our own province to govern our own economic affairs free from foreign control.

The sole gesture in terms of economic nationalism in this budget, to cope with the influence exerted by foreign investment in Ontario, is that if one Canadian company purchases another, interest on the takeover is deductible. The entire imaginative process of government was exhausted with that heroic economic policy. I think the government opposite knows what we would have done.

We would have instituted a takeover review board, Mr. Speaker. We would have transferred funds by law—

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Nationalized!

Mr. Lewis: —into bonds of the Ontario Development Corporation for reinvesting in Ontario, with Ontario's money, a policy that Mr. Eric Kierans has given some substance to in the last few days. We would have made provisions to purchase equity in branch plants of multi-national corporations by individuals and by government.

In short, Mr. Speaker, we would have begun the process of repatriating our economy.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Within that context—

Mr. E. P. Morningstar (Welland): You will never have the chance.

Mr. Lewis: —take another look at the glorious budget. It is a pretentious document. It is not substantial. It is no instrument of economic planning. It has no grand sense of fiscal or monetary policy. It is just the old style of balancing the books—no new design, just a series of old gasps. What a balance the government has struck.

Let me remind you, Mr. Speaker—no tax relief for people, just for corporations. Little, if any, change in the property tax burden. No serious promotion of jobs or economic growth. OHSIP premiums as high as ever. Northern Ontario still a client state for southern Ontario. Diversionary trench warfare with Ottawa. Not a very impressive roll call for a new, or allegedly new, government.

With the same approximate deficit—because we accept that a deficit of that level, as the Smith committee on taxation pointed out, is well within reason and within limits—we would have reversed the priorities. We would have provided tax relief. We would have stimulated the economy. We would have exploited new revenue from new sources—no Utopia, just a great deal more intelligent and common-sense economic planning.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: And so, Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the critic for our party of Treasury and Economics, the member for York South, that the amendment to the motion of the Treasurer be amended by adding after the words "In advance of any such negotiations" the following:

Further, this House regrets the failure of the government to reduce the retail sales tax by one percentage point in order to stimulate purchasing power and to increase employment;

The failure to reverse the diminishing contribution of corporations to provincial revenues by a one point increase in the rate of tax;

The failure to implement the recommendation of the Ontario Proposals for Tax Reform, 1970, for tax rebates to low income earners;

The failure to commit Ontario to taxation of capital gains at full income tax rates as an extension of a federal capital gains tax;

The failure to derive much greater revenues from Ontario resource industries and to channel a larger proportion of these revenues to meet the needs of mining municipalities;

The failure to recognize that the imposition of the five per cent ceiling on civil service salaries is destructive of good faith collective bargaining and will be grossly unfair to many public servants;

The failure to commit the province to the assumption of a full 80 per cent of the cost of elementary and secondary education;

The failure to reduce the present regressive flat rate hospital and medical premiums to not more than a combined premium of $5 a month for single persons and $10 per month for families, additional cost to be financed from income taxes and the dollar savings from a significant extension of Ontario's preventive health services;

The failure to introduce the principles of a municipal foundation plan into the system of unconditional grants for regional municipalities, and above all;

The failure to adhere to Ontario's past role of supporting cost-sharing programmes which have made possible new initiatives in social and economic policies, and the development of national standards of service, which remain essential to the preservation of the Canadian confederation.

Mr. Speaker: It has been moved by Mr. Lewis, seconded by Mr. MacDonald, that the amendment to the motion of the Treasurer be amended by adding after the words "In advance of any such negotiations" the following:

Further, this House regrets the failure of the government to reduce the retail sales tax by one percentage point in order to stimulate purchasing power and to increase employment; to reverse the diminishing contribution of corporations to provincial revenues by a one point increase in the rate of tax;

To implement the recommendation of the Ontario Proposals for Tax Reform, 1970, for tax rebates for low income persons; to commit Ontario to taxation of capital gains at income tax rates as an extension of a federal capital gains tax; to derive much greater revenues from Ontario resource industries and to channel a large proportion of these revenues to meet the needs of mining municipalities; to recognize that imposition of the five per cent ceiling on civil servants salaries is destructive of good faith collective bargaining and would be grossly unfair to many public servants; to commit the province to assumption of a full 80 per cent of the cost of elementary and secondary education; to reduce the present regressive flat-rate hospital and medical premiums to not more than a combined premium of $5 per month for single persons and $10 per month for families, additional costs to be financed from income taxes and the dollar savings from a significant extension of Ontario's preventive health services; to introduce the principles of a municipal foundation plan into the system of unconditional grants for regional municipalities; to adhere to Ontario's past role of supporting cost-sharing programmes which have made possible new initiatives in social and economic policies and the development of national standards of service which remain essential to the preservation of the Canadian federation.

I am not at all certain whether we are going to continue with this debate—

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: We will continue then at 8:30 p.m.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, just before the motion is put, would the House leader tell us whether we return to Lands and Forests estimates tonight in the assembly?

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Yes, it is expected to go to the estimates of The Department of Lands and Forests.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): If we do not have some second or third readings or committee, or something like that.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Just so the hon. member will not be too surprised, we might have a second reading.

Mr. Singer: Thank you very much.

It being 5:30 o'clock, p.m., the House took recess.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1971

The House resumed at 8:30 o'clock, p.m.

MUNICIPALITY OF METROPOLITAN TORONTO ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves second reading of Bill 35, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, this is perhaps one of the series of annual bills that the government presents for regional councils, interestingly enough departing from the established precedent of the House in relation to having the council present its own bill and letting the bill wend its way through the private bills committee with public advertising and allowing certain persons to come before the committee and make representations. There is not really a great deal at stake here, except for the interesting provision that we are going to allow the sale of spirituous liquors in parks. It is very fascinating that the government has embarked on this brave adventure.

Notwithstanding the fact that my colleague from Owen Sound (Mr. Sargent) has talked about an interesting lounge that has been constructed at substantial public expense, completely outfitted with all kinds of facilities and trained staff in uniforms—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): The member is out of order.

Mr. Singer: —who are standing by—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): The member is right in order.

Mr. Singer: —ready and willing to go—

Mr. Sargent: The minister is the one who is out of order.

Mr. Singer: —to serve spirituous liquors within the confines of this august building. Now, I have no objection to the widening of the very curious and archaic restrictions as contained in The Liquor Licence Act. It seems a strange place, however, to include such reform in An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act. One would have thought reasonably that if the government was going to embark on a brave new programme to take the Victorian restrictions away from the concern that has surrounded our liquor laws in this province for a long time, one would have done it in the appropriate liquor legislation and not hide it within a specific Act.

As I say, I, and I am sure my colleagues, have no quarrel with the specific section that is in this bill. But one wonders about the hypocrisy of government which tucks this away in an apparently innocuous bill when they have not got the courage to even recognize that within the confines of this building there is an unrecognized and unlicensed bar, just up there—and I point to a place within a very few feet of us—of whose existence Mr. Frost not too many years ago said he was not aware, and that there are facilities constructed by government, at substantial expense to the taxpayer, which the government again refuses to recognize.

So substantially, Mr. Speaker, I ask the hon. minister who brings forward this bill, which we are not going to oppose, what is the philosophy of the cabinet in allowing this bill? What is the philosophy of the Tory caucus in bringing this bill forward without really recognizing the archaic nature of all of our liquor laws?

Why is it important, at this moment, to allow the sale of liquor in metropolitan parks in Metropolitan Toronto only? There are metropolitan parks, I suppose, in the new metropolitan regions in the Lakehead, in Niagara, which might have an equal claim to this kind of privilege. Is it a privilege or is it a right? Why is it not done for all of the municipalities in Ontario?

Why are all of the liquor laws not amended in reasonable fashion and brought before us so that we can logically and sensibly discuss them? What particular prejudice is the government setting aside when it brings in this section to this Act at this time? Why does the government not have a policy? Are they always going to nibble? Where is the new wave that they talked about at their convention? Are they going to have a policy for Metro in a park but not in the legislative assembly? Are they not going to have the same policy in Kitchener? Where is the new wave? Where is the government's imagination?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Right here.

Mr. Singer: The rest of it, Mr. Speaker, is really not very much. If Metropolitan Toronto wants to spend $50,000 for entertainment, I would think—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Why does the member not move a motion that the Legislature ask for it? The member will want to move for that.

Mr. Singer:—that this makes some reasonable sense. I wonder about the limit. The councillors in Metropolitan Toronto are elected in the initial instance by the various boroughs and surely one can count on their judgement to govern their expenses and make them reasonable. They are elected as we are elected.

There are no statutes that I am aware of that limit my friend, the Minister of Trade and Development as to how much he can spend on entertainment. I do not know about him, but his predecessor was one of the great spenders of all time. I do not know about this man, Mr. Speaker—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I never pick up the tab. I never spend on entertainment.

Mr. Singer: All right. His predecessor was certainly one of the great spenders of all time, and while we have no statute here that limited his predecessor perhaps the present minister has greater discretion than his predecessor had.

Why should there be a limit on the councillors of Metropolitan Toronto as to how much they can spend? The press watches them very closely, as they watch us. Why should there be a limit at all? Why can you not trust the discretion of the elected municipal councillor?

There can be a mall on Yonge Street—that is fine. This seems to be a good idea. But why should you exempt people from damage actions? This is something that bothers me, Mr. Speaker, if, notwithstanding any of the provisions of any general or special Act, no person should be entitled to recover any damages from the exercise by the metropolitan corporation of its actions under this section. That bothers me—no matter how bad they are, no matter how negligent they are.

One would expect again that the metropolitan corporation of the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto is going to exercise its powers with care and discretion and in a manner that is not going to damage anybody. Why does the minister need a saving clause? If they are negligent, if they hurt somebody, if they hurt a merchant there, if they hurt an individual there, why should they not be subject to an action for damages?

Why do we not trust our courts to determine whether or not in fact they have been negligent; in fact, they have hurt somebody? If the courts in their wisdom come to the conclusion that someone has suffered damages, why then should that right of action be removed by legislation?

As I say, I have no objection to there being a mall on Yonge Street. I think that is a very good idea but I concern myself very seriously, Mr. Speaker, about a clause that takes these things out of the courts. For those reasons, I have some substantial reservations about the merits of this bill that the Minister of Municipal Affairs brings before us.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: But the member will vote for it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Yes, thank you. Much of what can be said about the bill, of course, has been said by the member for Downsview. I want to start at the back rather than the front because, in regard to the closing of this street, I cannot help wondering why we have to go through such an elaborate procedure as we have had to in this instance.

Why do we have to hold such tight rein on the municipal council, particularly municipal councils the size of this one? It does not make much sense to me to talk on the one hand of autonomy and giving the municipalities some freedom to exercise some of the powers which they actually were elected to exercise, and then for us to have to pass laws to deal with each individual instance that comes before them that deviates in any way from the norm.

I think that it would be very useful if we were to grant municipalities the powers to do these kinds of things across the board; in any municipality; to take whatever steps they want to take to meet the demands of their particular electorates and citizens. I worry about having to stand in the Legislature and having to sit for that matter and pass legislation dealing with such matters as this.

As far as the closing of Yonge Street or any other street is concerned, I think that this is something that the individual municipality—it could be in any city or any town—has to come to grips with. I think that if they decide they want to do this sort of thing, they should be able to do it by right, not by special legislation, but by general legislation.

On the whole matter of the power to sell liquor and spirits, fermented or intoxicating, within metropolitan parks, like the member for Downsview, I think that if we are going to extend this right, it should be extended to all municipalities. It should be once again the right of the municipality to determine what it wants to do within its boundaries. If we feel it is right to do it in Metropolitan Toronto, then surely other municipalities across the province have similar rights and we should pass enabling legislation for all municipalities to do these kinds of things, I would hope.

I want to ask the minister if he would tell me why this change was brought about; why it was changed in this particular Act, and whether there is any reason to believe that this kind of legislation could not be made available to municipalities to use as they see fit in keeping with their own particular feelings and responsibilities to their own citizens? Surely, it would make more sense to do it in that area. Other than that, the same is true all the way through. The same is true of the expenditure of funds for entertaining. All the bill says to me, as I read it, is that it ought to have been contained in the general legislation that affects all municipalities and that the permission to do these kinds of things should be permission extended to everyone operating within the province at a municipal level.

That is the kind of authority that we should be giving out. I do not think we should be meting it out piecemeal. I do not think we should be giving it to one without the other. I think that if it is good for Toronto, it is good for anyone. In terms of this kind of legislation, if the elected officials are doing the job properly, then we have nothing to fear. If they are not, then we are not answerable for them; they are answerable for themselves. I suggest to the minister that perhaps he could tell me why it is not general legislation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): How did the UAW get into this?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, the only observation that I might have on this, although it is permissive legislation, I think that it only further points out the complete hypocrisy of this party—

Mr. G. Demers (Nickel Belt): Oh, come on.

Mr. Sargent: —in its whole approach.

Mr. J. R. Simonett (Frontenac-Addington): The member should smile when he says that.

Mr. Sargent: Over the years, every one of us here—

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): What about the member's hotel?

Mr. Sargent: Over the years we have, every one of us here, in our daily lives been exposed to booze. It is a fact of life that there is booze in this province. No matter where we go, it is part of everything the government does and every department here. Talk about a $50,000 limit. Removing the limit—you fellows—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Not my department.

Mr. Sargent: The government has had millions of dollars a year in entertainment and booze and the fact—

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): He is underestimating—

Mr. Sargent: We go through these travelling expense votes in the estimates. We have changed these things now from travelling expenses. The government does not call them travelling expenses any more. It calls them communication and transportation. Look in the estimates, from here on now, members will see no more travelling expenses. It is communication and transportation we are talking about now in the estimates. That is how the government is further hiding it from the public. Now in the estimates every one of us will see untold thousands and thousands amounting to about, I would say, $1 million a year in booze that the government spends here.

Hon. J. White (Minister of University Affairs): No wonder the people cannot take the Liberal Party seriously today.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Booze is not our problem. It is the government's problem.

Mr. Singer: It is all right in Toronto parks but not in London parks.

Mr. Sargent: We have further hypocrisy in the lounge my friend was talking about. I hope that the fourth estate will not be too concerned if I talk about that for a moment. We have every Prime Minister up there with his picture with all his buddies in the lounge. The minister has never been in it, I guess—no?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Where is that?

Mr. Sargent: The lounge here.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Press lounge? Does the member mean to say they have booze there?

Mr. Sargent: You see, that is just what goes on.

Mr. B. Newman: He is so out of tune with the times.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: How would the member know that?

Mr. Pilkey: The minister is shocked.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: My God.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): He is stunned as usual.

Mr. Sargent: They tell the people that they are in favour of playing it down; that they do not touch the stuff. The government is not in favour of booze, but it makes it about—

Mr. J. R. Smith: Is the member?

Mr. Sargent: I think it has its place, yes.

Mr. Singer: We are not objecting to that.

Mr. Sargent: The only reason, I think, maybe, that they are playing down the bar downstairs is that they cannot talk to a few of the press here and make good fellows of themselves.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There is no beer downstairs.

Mr. Sargent: Is the government going to allow the press in the bar downstairs? I do not know what is going to happen there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Mr. Sargent: I can take the minister down and open up, unlock the cupboard and show him that it is full of beer, full of booze in all the cupboards down there.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Can we get back to the bill, please?

Mr. Sargent: This is not Lands and Forests. I am glad the minister dropped in. This is not Lands and Forests. We are on second reading.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Maybe we could get back to the principle of this bill.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker we have such things in this province known as local option areas.

Mr. Pilkey: The member knows all about that.

Mr. Sargent: We have local option as a law in this province. So local option is a law in this province. So here we have some legislation, Mr. Speaker—I know this is painful to you, Mr. Speaker. I am sorry. I wish you would not have that look on your face. Yet we have this legislation which is permissive to serve liquor in parks—

Mr. Singer: In Metro Toronto only.

Mr. Sargent: —In Metro only. Now what happens to the park in the local option area? What happens?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Subject to local option!

Mr. Sargent: This supersedes the local option.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Oh, no.

Mr. Sargent: It does not? It does not say that here.

Mr. S. J. Randall (Don Mills): The member will have the hon. member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) on the hook there. High Park is going to be—

Mr. Sargent: We are nibbling at this liquor business all the way down the line. Last year we brought in legislation for giving licences to resort areas—which is very important to me in my part of the province—putting booze on wheels, as it were. We have yet to find out how many of these licences have been issued.

It is good talk. The Minister of Revenue and I are concerned in our area for having these people up there who cater to the travelling public tourist. Yet the resort licences are not effective. We are not getting them through.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We solved it all.

Mr. Simonett: How do you get a drink up there?

Mr. Sargent: After the next election it is going to be wide open. People are going to have it on a merit system. And you have got to be able to perform to get a licence, not be part of the Tory party and pay the right lawyer $10,000.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister without Portfolio): How about a means test?

Mr. Sargent: I am talking on the booze factor.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Ask the Minister of Education what vote we are on and he will tell you.

Mr. B. Newman: We are not on Lands and Forests.

Hon. R. Welch (Minister of Education): Second reading, Metro Bill. How's that?

Mr. Sargent: As far as this legislation is concerned we have the Bill Davis bottle club downstairs; we have this permissive legislation to serve liquor in parks; we have the resort area programme, which is not working yet to my knowledge.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Sure is; entirely wrong!

Mr. Sargent: There are not too many up our way. That was the motivation for it.

An hon. member: Give him a trailer.

Mr. Sargent: In this one thing I think the Prime Minister—now that he is here—should tell the House exactly what his position is in regard to the $100,000 bar downstairs? Is he going to tell the public there is no such thing down there, when the pictures have been in the press that—

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I really do not believe that there is a bar until the licence is issued. So there is no bar, wherever it is.

Mr. Singer: Stop quibbling. Stop quibbling.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Does the member for Grey-Bruce want a beer? Is that what he is saying?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Why does the member not get up and make a motion that—

Mr. Sargent: The booze is down there.

Mr. R. M. Johnston (St. Catharines): Let us go down and get into it.

Mr. Sargent: I cannot now.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Sargent: Now, Mr. Speaker, very seriously, this is getting beyond a joke. We have every area of our economy in our part of the riding, the business is resort and tourism. And we have these local options—a patchwork quilt where in five minutes you can be—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What about that ad—the million dollars for—

Mr. Sargent: He is out of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps we could return to some level of parliamentary debate through the Chair?

Mr. Sargent: In summary, Mr. Speaker, I want to get across that the Premier and his predecessor have been kidding the troops a long time in the issue. Now to show how this government operates—this should go in Hansard—the fact that many of you do not know that up in Artemesia township the people had a vote there and they voted 317 against having a licence in that area and 15 votes for it—so the people were against it. But three months later a friend of the Prime Minister opened up the operation there with a licence, even though the people voted against it. This is the way these people over here operate.

Hon. Mr. Welch: What has that got to do with this bill though?

Mr. Sargent: We are talking about giving licences to sell liquor in trucks in Toronto here.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: That is permissive legislation.

An hon. member: Without a vote.

Mr. Sargent: Here we have people who voted against a licence, but the government says "We will forget about your vote. We will put a licence in there anyway."

Hon. Mr. Grossman: No, the member is wrong.

Mr. Sargent: I give the minister my word that this is actually what happened. It is a fact of life. It happened. Now we have local option, Mr. Prime Minister, in this province and we have our city which is geared to the resort business. We cannot handle the tourists. They have got to go 10 miles outside the city to get a drink.

Mr. S. Farquhar (Algoma-Manitoulin): The deer and the wolves voted for it in the park.

Mr. Sargent: That is right.

Mr. Singer: Yes.

Mr. Sargent: The deer and the wolves are voting for it in the park.

This pinpoints the hypocrisy of the minister's whole approach to the area of business in our economy up there.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: We are going to vote against it, at least I am.

An hon. member: No, we are not.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Does the member want to bet?

Mr. Sargent: We will try it and see what happens.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Is the hon. member going to vote against it?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I guess the member for Downsview will give us a fair—

Mr. Singer: I will be here.

Mr. Sargent: This bill removes the limitation of $50,000 on the city of Toronto for entertainment. I am in favour of that.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: It is permissive legislation with regard to the city of Toronto. But I am against the fact that the consistency of policy of this government is ridiculous in this local option and liquor policy.

Mr. Singer: Hear, hear.

Mr. Sargent: Vote 4, section 2.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Vote 4?

Mr. Singer: Section 4, subsection 2.

Mr. Sargent: Section 4, subsection 2 says that "notwithstanding the provisions of any general or special Act, no person shall be entitled to recover any damages or compensation of any nature whatsoever from the Metropolitan Corporation of Toronto."

Mr. B. Newman: That is taking away the person's right.

Mr. Sargent: I would like to have the minister tell me why this is in there. I do not think it is intelligent insofar as any person who breaks a leg through these promenades or who loses a lot of money in business, because there is no recourse against the city. This is not fair. It is not right.

I think that the minister should say why this is in there, other than the fact that—and I force it down—the Premier has a right to the facts of life with regard to his policy on issuing licences for resort areas—in my area—and local option.

Mr. Singer: Attaboy!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Oshawa.

Mr. Pilkey: Mr. Speaker, I think it is quite obvious why the government wants to take the $50,000 limit off. With liquor in the park, obviously they are going to need more money. Does the hon. minister understand that?

Mr. Singer: Okay, the hon. member scored on that one.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The hon. member is missing the point there.

Mr. Pilkey: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to make a comment, too, on this question of damages. Surely, I suppose, if we are going to put in a promenade that the municipality of Metro Toronto needs some protection against damages that may accrue as a result of loss of business, and so on. I understand that.

But what I do not understand is that the individual, it seems to me, is not given the type of protection that is necessary. Obviously because the minister eliminates the north-south traffic he will not be eliminating the east-west traffic as far as this bill is concerned.

There could be people who are seriously injured in some fashion in this specific area and it may be that it is a result of negligence of Metropolitan Toronto. It appears to me that the individual should have some protection as far as the negligence of that municipality is concerned.

I just do not think that they should be completely exempted from all damages because the minister is trying to protect the interest of the city against the larger operations that may be adjacent to this promenade. I just do not think that it is fair to the individual in that respect.

I appreciate that this is permissive legislation for the municipality to put spirits and other things in parks, but it seems to me that—and I am not talking about the ghosts now, I am talking about fermented spirits—

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member had me confused for a minute.

Mr. Pilkey: But, in any event, it seems to me that the government is abrogating some of its powers to the council of Metropolitan Toronto. I suppose that is not bad, except why are other municipalities not put in the same favourable position, if it is a favourable position, to make the same determination in their respective municipalities?

I appreciate that this would have to come about as a result of an amendment, I suppose, to The Liquor Licence Act, and it should apply to all municipalities, if it is going to apply to Metropolitan Toronto. I just think the government is treating the other municipalities as second-class citizens in this province as opposed to Metro Toronto. I appreciate that the government wants to be favourable to Metropolitan Toronto, but what is the matter with Oshawa, for example?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Great city.

Mr. Pilkey: Right. Why does the council there not have the same permissive powers?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: All it has to do is ask.

Mr. Pilkey: Why should it have to ask? What this government is continually saying is that if we provide this permissive legislation, it looks as though we are forcing it on the municipalities. We do not want to force anything on to the municipalities, but if they ask we will legislate it. It seems to me that this is not taking any leadership in this area and it is typical of a Tory government in any event. Let them come to us, and we will respond. We will not act; we will respond. It seems to me that this is all the Tory government ever does. They respond to everything but they never act and until—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Local autonomy!

Mr. Pilkey: Why does the government not give a little leadership in some of these areas?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It is an authoritarian approach.

Mr. Pilkey: Is that an authoritarian approach? The government could make it permissive so that every municipality has the same right as Metropolitan Toronto.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We do not want to dictate. I thought that was what the members opposite wanted.

Mr. Pilkey: It seems to me that this would be in keeping with good government, giving every municipality in the Province of Ontario an equal opportunity.

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): Complete chaos. Local autonomy in local school boards—that was local autonomy gone mad.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to make a few comments on this, too, because it does seem strange to me why the government has to introduce such legislation for a specific municipality. Why would they not come along and encompass that in some other fashion so that it would be permissive in any municipality in the Province of Ontario? I can recall not too long ago that exactly what is mentioned in here was being done in my own community. In the days when they had a freedom festival—I should not say freedom festival, but emancipation day—in the city of Windsor liquor and beer were available in parks at that time. So it seems inconsistent that today, when they could have been doing it exactly the same way as before, now they are introducing legislation for one specific municipality. I can understand we are dealing solely with The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act and that is why it is in here, but there should be general legislation if the government agrees with the sale of intoxicating beverages in a park.

I wonder, while I look at this, whether this means the sale of beverages in an enclosed area, in a tented-over area, or in a confined space by putting up a snow fence, or is it going to mean that the individual may buy alcoholic beverages and walk through the park drinking it at his leisure as we do see in some of the jurisdictions to the south of us.

The other part of the bill that I would like to make comment on is section 2, or clause 4 section 2 of that clause, in which the individual's rights are being taken away by preventing him from suing in case of personal injury. I think that this would be contrary to the McRuer report. I think you are taking an individual's rights away when you deny him the privilege of suing as a result of the incompetence, possibly, of some municipal employee in setting up a promenade or a mall.

My own community did have a mall last year and it was, in my estimation, quite a successful undertaking. It took vehicles off the main street and it permitted the individual to walk freely in the downtown area. I think it was a forward step in spite of the fact that it was opposed by certain businessmen in the community. I do not recall at all, when they set up the mall in the city of Windsor, that they denied anyone who may have been injured the right to sue the municipality as a result of the injury sustained. I certainly would like the minister to reconsider clause 4, subsection 2, in the light of the McRuer report.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, the—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Sargent: With your permission, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Sargent: A question I—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister will reply to all the members who asked questions.

Mr. Sargent: I wish to qualify the question to him, though, by saying this, Mr. Speaker, with your permission. Would the minister or the Premier, if the city council of Owen Sound requested the same legislation, give them the same right they have given the city of Toronto?

Mr. Speaker: This question has been asked. The hon. member will—

Mr. Sargent: No, I have not asked the question.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

That specific question has been directed to the minister by previous speakers. I am sure he will reply to it in his reply. The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): There is good sense, Mr. Speaker, in what has just been said with respect to this clause which is a reduplication, curiously enough, of a similar clause to which we took considerable exception and even grave umbrage in a bill that came before us, through the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart), I believe, last week. It is the business of stripping human beings of their rights and lifting the liability from a corporation under this head, and not in any restrictive area, which I could see some justification for.

For instance, with respect to the loss of business by bringing in a pedestrian mall. I would think it would add to most businesses, but maybe some enterprises along Yonge Street or in the vicinity might be hurt. But this bill covers too wide an area. Suppose that in construction of the thing, negligent construction takes place with respect of the mall itself and somebody trips and damages himself severely and wishes to take legal action.

Surely negligence arising out of civic employees in that particular regard—such as slipping on snow or banana peels left negligently about by employees—is just ground for suit. Suppose they break watermains, flood basements, or do any other kind of thing? An enormous range of tort liability could be destroyed in instituting such a thing as this and what do you do? The legislation itself sets up carte blanche freedom from liability or from compensation of any nature.

Surely that is a questionable principle on which to work. Surely the draftsmen of the legislation and the minister, under whose supervision it is done, can have slightly more finesse than this sort of broad brush stroke approach to the civil rights of individuals.

The member is perfectly right when he insists that this sort of thing runs counter to the McRuer recommendations. If you cannot do better in your drafting and introduce nicer distinctions than this kind of legislation, which without discrimination, lifts the whole thing holus-bolus into the void of no redress—

Mr. Sargent: The minister had better take it back and do it over again.

Mr. Lawlor: Certainly! What we are getting before us is a considerable amount of legislation hastily drafted, thrown at us, and obnoxiously pursued.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to enter the debate before the minister replies? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, dealing with the bill and the principle of the bill in various sections. Under the first or section 2, it deals with the matter of permitting applications for the sale of liquor in parks. It does not authorize the sale of liquor or other matters in parks on its own. It is all subject to the provisions of The Liquor Licence Act. Under the provisions of The Public Parks Act there is a prohibition against the sale of refreshments of spirituous, fermented or intoxicating liquors in parks and, unless that is removed, the metropolitan parks are subject to the provisions of The Public Parks Act.

Mr. Singer: I wonder if the minister would permit a question?

Hon. Mr. Bales: In just a minute I will, yes. All this would permit would be the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto to pass a bylaw, which would then permit an applicant to make the normal application to the Liquor Licence Board to have an application considered with the normal provisions for the sale of liquor.

Now, the hon. member for Downsview has a question?

Mr. Singer: I wonder if the minister could advise us why, if it makes sense for Metropolitan Toronto, should it not apply to London, or Owen Sound, or Hamilton, or Kingston or any other municipality in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I would think that that, in due course, makes sense.

At the moment, there has been an application from Metropolitan Toronto. If other municipalities wanted to make that type of application, then fine. I think if there were a reasonable number, I would certainly consider general legislation. On the other hand, I do not think, at the moment, that we should bring in general legislation—

Mr. Sargent: The minister is not saying anything at all.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —until there is some request from the municipalities, because a number of municipalities do not want this type of legislation.

Mr. Deans: But they do not have to pass the bylaw.

Mr. Singer: They do not have to pass the bylaw if they do not want to.

Hon. Mr. Bales: That is right. If they do not, they can deal with it that way.

Mr. Sargent: Would the minister accept a question?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Would the member rather deal with it in Committee of the Whole later on? But if it is a specific question and if you wish to deal with it now in principle, I would be glad to hear it.

Mr. Sargent: I would just like to pinpoint, Mr. Speaker, that the minister says that he is getting this legislation approved now for the city of Toronto.

Hon. Mr. Bales: That is right.

Mr. Sargent: How can the minister draw the line with any other municipality, then? If it would be automatically followed, they would get it on request.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Not automatically, but it is the type of legislation that if a municipality, by resolution, passed that kind of a request I would want to give very careful consideration to it.

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. minister any further comments?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Yes. In reference to the second section there is a limitation at the present time as to the amount that may be spent for these various purposes. Where the population is not less than 500,000, the amount is limited to $50,000. Under the provisions of this amendment, three quarters of the council voting in favour of a larger expenditure may do so.

The matter of the mall on Yonge Street: this is a request from the council of Metropolitan Toronto. They want to establish it for a one-week period and they do have, at the present time, power to establish such a mall. Any municipality does. But, the limitations on claims are not included in the general legislation, and I would not want to make that general across the province, that is, freeing those claims. They have asked for this for a one-week period. I think that it is a good thing to permit it. They have specifically pointed out that they need that kind of protection against claims for loss of business in case any would arise, and yet, they assure me, the merchants in the area have approved this operation for the one-week period. Giving it that way, we will see how this operates and, as I said before, under section 379—

Mr. Sargent: How can the minister draw a mall up and see no recovery?

Hon. Mr. Bales: —they do have authority at the present time and I pointed that out to them. They have requested additional protection for this limited period of time and, on that basis, I think that is reasonable.

Mr. Sargent: It certainly is not reasonable.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Other areas have received this kind of protection for malls in the future for specific locations. On that basis, on that limitation, I think that it is reasonable to grant. On the points made by the hon. member for Lakeshore, I recognize the validity of them. That is the reason we have not wanted to simply include that exemption in the general legislation.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is for second reading of Bill 35.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Speaker, I just came into the House. I was down in the other committee.

Mr. Speaker: The bill has been concluded. The minister has replied. The motion is for second reading of Bill 35.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading or committee?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Committee of the Whole House.

Agreed to.

Clerk of the House: The third order—House in Committee of the Whole: Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

MUNICIPALITY OF METROPOLITAN TORONTO ACT

House in committee on Bill 35, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Mr. Chairman: Bill 35, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act. Are there any questions, comments or amendments to section 1?

On section 1.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman: I have a question on section 1. Is it the intention of the minister to carry this forward as rapidly as possibly and give it royal assent, and if so, what is the pressure on the government to give authority for the actions in this bill?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Chairman, the mall is to be established—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Section 1 is not the mall; that is the liquor.

Hon. Mr. Bales: We are dealing with the bill itself. It is all part of the whole bill. The municipality wishes to establish that mall for the period of, I believe, May 30 to June 5, and they have been anxious to have this legislation dealt with fairly quickly because they have to meet in metropolitan council and pass the necessary bylaws once this legislation has been authorized. That is the only reason we are bringing it forward and dealing with it as expeditiously as possible.

Mr. Nixon: I just draw to the minister's attention that we were scheduled to discuss Lands and Forests tonight. There are a number of officials here prepared to do so. We are going to have at least one amendment to the bill and it may take some time for the discussion. I am glad to know the reasons why the minister is putting it forward in advance of the ordinary business that had been scheduled.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 1 carry?

Mr. W. G. Pitman (Peterborough): I would just like to ask the minister one or two questions that come under general legislation on section 1. Am I to assume then that the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto have discussed and have passed a resolution for this bill to be passed by this Legislature, and it will then go back to the municipality of the city of Toronto?

I am trying to straighten out the steps that are being taken here. Am I to assume that a resolution has been passed in the city of Toronto asking that the Legislature pass this legislation? Then will they, in turn, pass a bylaw after this legislation has been put through? Could I ask the minister has he assured himself that the businessmen in Toronto who are going to be affected by this legislation have been fully consulted? Have there been public meetings? Has there been a sufficient degree of dialogue, at least in the minister's mind, with these men? Because I can say to the minister that he and the municipalities may find themselves in a real fighting war, after this is over next fall, if indeed it turns out to be a bit of a bomb.

I can tell him that in my own particular city we did put in a mall a couple of years ago and it bombed, and there was a tremendous row about it. They closed off the centre of the city and there was another route, through The Department of Highways, and it was given proper approval, I assume because it was a highway going through the centre of town. The point was that it had a great deal of very negative reaction. A number of businessmen were hurt: they believe they were hurt badly by it. I am just wondering if the minister is assured in his own mind that there has been sufficient dialogue with the businessmen who are in that specific area.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, this mall is for a limited period of time, seven days, the period May 30 to June 5. The matter, I am assured and I have discussed this—

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order. I have lost the context of this debate because section 4 deals with the mall.

Mr. Pitman: I am trying to get at what is happening to the bill.

Mr. Singer: That was on second reading. We are now doing it section by section. If we are dealing with subsection 1, we are dealing with liquor in parks; subsection 2 is liquor in parks and section 4 is the mall. If we can get into some order, Mr. Chairman, it would be easier to follow.

Mr. Chairman: Actually, it was indicated to me that it was just a quick, brief question and we allowed it, but it is really out of order. Section 1 then is carried.

Section 1 agreed to.

On section 2:

Mr. Chairman: The member for Humber was on his feet a moment or two ago.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Chairman, first of all I want to apologize for missing most of the debate, but I was down discussing waste management. This is one of the shortcomings of this system; one has to run back and forth and therefore misses the words of wisdom that were passed in this House by previous speakers.

If I repeat anything that was already said, I apologize.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): The hon. member would have no effect anyway.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): The hon. member heard what his deputy leader said a moment ago about second readings?

Mr. Ben: I heard no part of the debate.

Mr. Lawlor: He was playing a little game.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Lawlor: Why not tell him to keep his mouth shut sometime?

An hon. member: Could we have a little order?

Mr. Ben: Oh, I am patient.

Mr. Singer: Listen to them nattering away again. They do not even know what they are nattering about, but they are nattering.

Mr. Pitman: The member's deputy leader had some very succinct comments about how we should deal with the bill.

Mr. Singer: That was on second reading.

Mr. Chairman: The discussion is on section 2.

Mr. Singer: Give the member for Humber a chance.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Could we have some order?

An hon. member: Go ahead.

Mr. J. Renwick: Is he speaking as an individual or as a member of the party?

Mr. Singer: The member for Riverdale is suffering from his usual complaint again—obnoxiousness.

An hon. member: Is the hon. member waiting for some explanation to come down from on high?

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Sock it to them! Come on, give it to them.

Mr. Ben: I am quite patient, Mr. Chairman. I can stand here just as long as the next man, and I intend to stay here until I do get silence.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: I will just wait here—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! Order! There are too many side comments. Let us hear from the member for Humber.

Some hon. members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pitman: We are trying to direct the member for Humber.

Mr. Chairman: Not really.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Come on, let's go.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Get hold of yourself there.

Mr. J. Jessiman (Fort William): Try again.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Go ahead.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, I am just letting all this be recorded in the annals of Hansard so that the people can see who is wasting the taxpayer's money.

Mr. Sargent: Give the Hansard girl a chance.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. Renwick: All the people who read Hansard will know who is wasting time.

Mr. Ben: Everybody was anxious to hear the Speech from the Throne—

Mr. J. Renwick: Try to keep to the point.

Mr. Ben: —and then the budget to determine whether there would be any goodies predicted which would cause people to say this was an election Throne Speech or an election budget. And when the budget came down, most people said, "We are not going to have an election right way—"

Mr. J. Renwick: Keep the hon. member on the topic, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Ben: "—because there are not that many goodies in it." But now when one starts to analyse the situation, he will discover that the goodies were not blatantly displayed—

Mr. J. Renwick: This is not the budget debate.

Mr. Ben: —for the average man on the street—

Mr. Pilkey: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order—

Mr. Ben: —but were neatly hidden away for the benefit of big business and the booze barons.

Mr. Chariman: On section 2, please.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: We have already seen—

Mr. Stokes: Would the member for Downsview call his colleague to order, please?

Mr. Ben: We have already seen how people buying capital equipment are not only going to get a five per cent rebate—

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Mr. Ben: —but if they are using that money for pollution control equipment it is going to be 10 per cent.

Mr. Lawlor: We knew in advance that the member was not going to stick to the point.

Mr. Ben: We have seen—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): The member for Humber is out of order.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Mr. Ben: We have seen—

Mr. A. K. Meen (York East): What has the hon. member seen?

Mr. Chairman: We had second reading. We passed second reading. If the member was not here, this cannot be helped. We are really discussing section 2 of this Act only—the sale of spirituous liquors.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, that is exactly what I am discussing.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Section 2.

Mr. Ben: When, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Singer: Serves him right for calling second reading.

Mr. Ben: —the provincial Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) introduced his budget, he made it appear that the price of beer in Ontario was going to be equalized by raising slightly the price of beer in southern Ontario and lowering it in northern Ontario.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: What has that got to do with section 2?

Mr. Ben: It is on section 2. Does the hon. member mind if I get to it my way?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Yes, we do.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Come on.

Mr. Ben: It transpired, Mr. Chairman, that the brewery industry was getting a bonus of some $2.5 million.

An hon. member: How much?

Mr. Ben: Two and one half million dollars—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Mr. Ben: Section 2, Mr. Chairman—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: —is for the brewery industry. You can see how they tried to soft-pedal this, Mr. Chairman, when they even got you to the point that you would try to hush opposition members who try to make this public.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Oh, come on!

Mr. Ben: That in essence is what this section is—another subterfuge for expanding the brewery industry. Parks at one time—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order. As you know I enjoy this sort of dialogue up to a point—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Monologue.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —but with great respect, the member for Humber is completely out of order. His leader has supported the principle of the bill. The only issue in debate is the wording in section 2, which has nothing to do with the cost of liquid refreshment whether it be in the form of beer or otherwise, and the observations being made by the member for Humber now are completely out of order, and, Mr. Chairman, I think he should be so told.

Mr. Chairman: The Chairman is in agreement.

Mr. Jessiman: And we from northern Ontario are very much—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order please! Unless the member gets to section 2 now we will have to call him out of order and call in the next speaker.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, I would inform you that under the rules of this House I take instructions from the Chairman, and not from the Prime Minister. I do not belong to his party.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I can rise on a point of order if I want to.

Mr. Ben: If I take instructions from anybody other than the Chairman, it is my own leader.

Mr. Chairman: And we are discussing section 2.

Mr. Ben: We are discussing section 2, and I want to point out to you that I really hurt the Prime Minister over there—

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member's own leader supported the present bill.

Mr. Ben: —because the truth of why this section is in here has come out and it has stung him. Parks are supposed to be for children, parks are supposed to be for people.

An hon. member: For promenading, for playing in.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It is a conspiracy for the breweries.

Mr. Chairman: Order please! That was the principle of the bill which was discussed some time ago. We are discussing in Committee of the Whole House the wording and the meaning of section 2, not the principle.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member for Downsview is embarrassed and is leaving.

Mr. Stokes: That is something.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, I am going to move that this section be struck out and I am entitled to state my reasons for so doing.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: For goodness' sake; one would think they had lost their brains.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! I might point out that you do not strike it out, you may vote against it.

Mr. Ben: Fine, I am just going to say that at least I can give the reasons why I will vote against it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Against what?

Mr. Ben: Against this particular section.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It cannot be struck from the bill.

Mr. Ben: There is the Prime Minister giving direction again. The Chairman just pointed out that I can vote against it but not move to strike it out.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Does the member not agree with the Chairman?

Mr. Ben: Well, the Premier instructs the Chairman what he wants him to do for him.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I agree with him.

Mr. Chairman: I would point out again we are discussing the principle.

Mr. Ben: We are not discussing the principle, we are discussing section 2—now smarten up, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Do not tell the Chairman what to do!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: We are discussing whether or not we should support this section, and I was saying why we ought not to support it.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Minister of Health): There is no discipline in that party.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: What does he know about Parliament? The biggest boob that this government ever pulled was appointing him.

Anyway, as I say, parks are for children, not for drunks.

Mr. Pilkey: Is this a Liberal policy.

Mr. Ben: We have enough trouble with people being drunk in parks and we do not even sell any liquor in parks.

This House is supposed to safeguard the interests of the municipalities. When city council asked this Legislature to approve the extension of Maple Leaf Gardens over College Street, the Legislature would not grant such approval and they stopped the expansion. There was no question on that occasion of whether it was asked for or not; the city asked for it and this Legislature saw fit to deny it.

So this is garbage and nonsense that is spewed here, that it is the city that is asking for it, or it is Metro that is asking for it. We have already set a precedent in this House, that it is not enough that a municipality even be it the city of Toronto or Metro Toronto, ask for legislation; we must concern ourselves with the propriety of the bill and the decency and the morals behind it. All of a sudden we have got to the point where we are supposed to pass anything because somebody asks for it. That is this government's attitude and the attitude of the Prime Minister, and they are trying to hush people who oppose that kind of principle.

Mr. J. Renwick: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Ben: Oh, you and your points of order.

Mr. J. Renwick: —the bill has been approved in principle.

Mr. Ben: The bill has been approved in principle, and please remind him, Mr. Chairman, that we are now discussing section 2, whether it should carry or not. And Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the inclusion of this section.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We came to that conclusion a short while ago.

Mr. Ben: One of the biggest Metro parks in Toronto is High Park and it happens to border my riding. High Park is there for youngsters to go in winter to toboggan; it is there in the summer for them to sail, to fish, or to walk along the nature trails. They even have a nature school there. Now this section will permit the establishment of liquor outlets in that park.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Bales: Could I help the hon. member? High Park is not a metropolitan park.

Mr. J. Renwick: Thank you.

Mr. Pilkey: Very good. He did not know that.

Mr. Pitman: Why did the minister not say that in the beginning? That is what it was all about to begin with.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ben: Maybe, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs finds that the Islands—which are Metro parks—are not used for the same purposes as High Park.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What does the member mean?

Mr. Ben: Maybe in his view it is justifiable to have outlets on the Islands, because the Islands indeed are the responsibility of Metro.

Mr. Pilkey: They are used for people, the same as High Park.

Mr. Ben: They are used for people. And people have the right to take their children—

Mr. J. Renwick: Except Bill Temple is in High Park.

Mr. Ben: —into an atmosphere such as presently exists in Metro parks and not have to concern themselves—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: With what?

Mr. Ben: —with being offended and their children being offended by the people who are inebriated.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Who said anything about being inebriated? The member's colleagues—

Mr. Ben: This is not going to bring it about? We have over 100,000 alcoholics in the Province of Ontario—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Who is being hypocritical now?

Mr. Ben: —and extending liquor outlets is not going to create any more? The hon. Minister of Trade and Development cannot forget that he was one time the chief booze purveyor for this province, and he still has an alcoholic mentality. I do not think he has ever sobered up.

Mr. Chairman: Order please! We are on section 2 in Committee of the Whole House.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I never sobered up? I never got drunk tonight either!

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Mr. Ben: I will tell you now I just ate and ran.

Mr. J. Renwick: I have a question.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): This is a new high for the Liberals.

Mr. Ben: Mr. Chairman, simply because something originates from the city or from Metro does not justify its passage by this Legislature.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! That principle was decided on second reading. Now as I say it is out of order, please. If the hon. member was not here we cannot help that; we cannot hold up the business of the House for that reason. We passed the principle of this whole bill, including section 2, a few moments ago so I rule the hon. member out of order. The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Ben: What you are saying is that I cannot speak against any section of the bill, because it was all passed in principle, is that right?

Mr. Chairman: We passed the principle of this bill a few moments ago. The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the minister if, in a few concise words, he would explain to us the limitation imposed in this section by the words "subject to The Liquor Licence Act"?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, under the provisions of the section, metropolitan council may pass a bylaw authorizing sale of liquor within a metropolitan park through the normal application to the Liquor Licence Board. The application there would have to meet all the requirements for a liquor licence.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Which would also eliminate High Park.

Hon. Mr. Bales: In other words it would have to meet whatever their provisions are as to the establishment or type of establishment, the surroundings, and so on. This does not authorize the use of liquor anywhere in parks under any conditions whatsoever. It is limited to the normal situation wherein you make an application and conduct your affairs accordingly.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, that is precisely the point I would like to spend just two or three minutes elucidating with the minister. One of my colleagues informed me —because I am not familiar, of course, with the requirements of the Liquor Licence Board —that, for example, in the city of Toronto at the present time, unless you are above the ground floor, it is extremely difficult, with the minor exceptions which have just been made, to have a drink of spirituous beverage in view of other people.

Is it intended that there be special regulations published by the Liquor Licence Board governing the sale of spirituous beverages within these parks in Toronto or are the existing regulations to apply?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I understand the existing regulations will apply.

Mr. J. Renwick: I take that to mean that the minister does not have any knowledge of any special regulations which may be published by the Liquor Licence Board for the purpose of dealing with this departure in arrangements?

Hon. Mr. Bales: That is correct.

Mr. J. Renwick: Am I also to take it, Mr. Chairman, that there have been no discussions between the Minister of Municipal Affairs and the members of the Liquor Licence Board about this question?

Hon. Mr. Bales: That is correct.

Mr. J. Renwick: There have been no discussions of any kind?

Hon. Mr. Bales: My discussions have been entirely with the officials of Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, would it not have been perhaps wise if the minister had spoken with the members of the Liquor Licence Board to determine whether or not this type of legislation would require some modification, however minor, in the rules which are applied by the Liquor Licence Board in other circumstances—bearing in mind that, I think all of us would agree to an extent, this is a departure by the provincial government from the enunciated policy with respect to the sale of spirituous liquors in the province?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, I do not agree with that. I think in this instance it is an application, as I anticipated, for sale of liquor in a regular restaurant, I presume in a park, if there is one.

Mr. Sargent: Why does the minister not tell us the background of the whole thing?

Hon. Mr. Bales: That is it.

Mr. Sargent: What is the motivation for it—case in point?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Metropolitan Toronto has entered into an agreement with a restaurant on the Islands, and I presume the restaurant is open and operating at the present time although I have not been there. They may wish to permit that restaurant to make an application to the Liquor Licence Board. If so, and if it is heard in the normal way, and if it is granted, then the liquor can be sold there. The metropolitan council can consider that type of situation for any of their metropolitan parks if they so wish, if this legislation is passed.

Mr. Ben: Ontario Place?

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, if I may just follow up the same particular point, if the member for Sudbury would let me. Are we speaking about the fact that something called sidewalk cafes in the city of Toronto will be part of the licensing arrangements within the Metropolitan Toronto parks? Or are we speaking simply about the traditional form of enclosed restaurant or lounge where a licence might be granted in a particular metropolitan park?

Hon. Mr. Bales: This legislation does not restrict the type of outlet it might be. That is subject to the provisions of The Liquor Licence Act and their regulations. But, on inquiry, I was advised that the only establishment that they had in mind at the moment was a regular restaurant which is on the Island.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, may I just pursue this point? I really do not want to be technical about the problem and I approve of the principle of it, but I do not quite understand it because this particular section says that we are going to grant the council power to let from year to year, not any premises on which a particular restaurant may now be established so that restaurant could make an application to the Liquor Licence Board, what we are agreeing here to do is to lease the right to sell spirituous liquors.

Now, I would therefore understand it to mean that if the metropolitan council is going to lease the right to sell spirituous liquors, that the applicant for the licence will have to therefore be the metropolitan council to the Liquor Licence Board because they must get the licence to sell before they can then lease it. I again say to the minister I am not trying for one moment to be technical or obtuse about the problem but the section as drafted says that in addition to whatever other powers may be exercised, the council has the power to let for up to 10 years the right to sell, subject to The Liquor Licence Act, spirituous liquors. So, what we are in fact saying, it seems to me, is that the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto will make the application to the Liquor Licence Board to get a licence to sell spirituous beverages in a metropolitan park, and having obtained that licence they will then sublease the right to sell liquor to someone else.

Now my concern is about where the profit falls in the operation which we are being asked to confirm here at this time. I can quite understand that it may well be that there is some prohibition against an existing restaurant on the Toronto Island which leases premises from Metropolitan Toronto in an ordinary restaurant capacity feeling there was some inhibition somewhere in the statute against them applying directly to the Liquor Licence Board for a licence, and that this was to remove that problem and you would have an ordinary liquor-serving operation on the Toronto Island.

That seems to me to be entirely different to this Legislature granting to the Metropolitan Toronto council the right, as I take it in legal language, to sublease the right to sell. Because if Metropolitan Toronto obtains the licence which permits them to sell spirituous liquors in, for example, municipal metropolitan-council-operated restaurants, and they then purport to sublease that particular right, it does seem to me that the element of profit-making comes in very prominently insofar as who can bid for that licence, how many people can bid and what are the terms and conditions under which the sublease of the licence would be granted.

I again emphasize that it raises in my mind a very substantial question as to what exactly we are doing by this bill.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I may—

Mr. Sopha: If you listen to me first, you might reply to both of us.

Hon. Mr. Bales: All right!

Mr. Sopha: The member for Riverdale has of course the most highly developed capacity in the House to make sound tortuous and complex, a problem that is fairly simple.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Maybe it is to you, just to you!

Mr. Sopha: I cannot tell from the language, in what I concede to be a very badly worded section, what the last two lines refer to "under such regulations as council may prescribe." I cannot tell whether that refers to the letting of the premises referred to in the first two, or whether it refers to the conditions under which alcoholic beverages will be dispensed. I think that ought to be clarified.

Let me deal with the second first. I thought that under the laws of this domain, alcoholic beverages were dispensed throughout Ontario under the jurisdiction of the Liquor Licence Board and that they passed regulations there-to. If that is so, if that last derivative phrase refers to the dispensation of the beverages, I am unwilling to accord that power to the metropolitan council. There is a limit to setting up Alsaces in Ontario.

I say nothing about the principle of the bill—I am glad it is confined to Metropolitan Toronto—but I want to make this point, that there should be no jurisdiction whatsoever in the metropolitan council to govern in any way how the beverages are dispensed. That should be under the Liquor Licence Board. The danger of course is that if the regulations under The Liquor Licence Act are silent, they might turn to this section and begin to make regulations because of the silence of the other statute.

Now it is perfectly proper, of course, that if this passes, the council shall have power to prescribe the regulations for the letting. Then the point of the member for Riverdale becomes very apposite, and we would want to exercise control in that sector because we do not want any trafficking in licences or anything of that nature.

So I would plead with the minister to have his legislative draftsmen have a look at this section and see if the language cannot be clarified, to see whether or not it cannot be sharpened, because I assume the minister is a man who means what he says and wants to say what he means. This section simply does not do it. It is obscure in the extreme and we have adequate time in managing the affairs of the province to put down in words to convey that notion that we want to convey from a legislative point of view.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, the power given to the municipality here when it passes bylaws is to enter into an agreement with some person for permitting the sale of liquor in an establishment in a park, subject to the provisions of The Liquor Licence Act. The Liquor Licence Act must govern in reference to the application for the right to sell on those premises. They would have to comply with all of the regulations under the board, as to the dispensation and the method and so on.

Mr. Sopha: Let us move the last eight words up. Let us move them up to about "i.e., before—"

Hon. Mr. Bales: I think that we considered the point the member is making. I think it is quite clear that you have got to be subject to The Liquor Licence Act. It is quite clear in there that that right to sell is subject to The Liquor Licence Act. I think those words should be where they are; it would make it very clear that the right to sell is subject to that other board.

Mr. Chairman: Can section 2 stand as part of the bill?

Mr. Ben: What if there happens to be a vacuum in The Liquor Control Act—

Mr. Singer: The Liquor Licence Act.

Mr. Ben: The Liquor Licence Act! What if there happens to be a vacuum in The Liquor Licence Act to cover a particular situation? The wording of this section would permit Metro to fill that vacuum.

Hon. Mr. Bales: If their application for licence does not fall within the provision of The Liquor Licence Act and its regulations, they will not get a licence.

Mr. Ben: Perhaps the minister does not understand. The word that the hon. member for Sudbury was referring to was "regulations." In other words, the section as worded now empowers Metro to pass regulations governing the sale of the liquor after the licence has been granted. I suggest respectfully this is what it says and it would specially hold if there was a vacuum where the point was not covered in The Liquor Licence Act. I am not saying that they would govern whether or not a person had a licence. I am saying that they could set down regulations on how that licence was used after it was granted.

Hon. G. Carton (Minister of Labour): They would still be subject to the Act.

Mr. Ben: That is what it says, "Under such regulations as the council may prescribe." Tell us what those words mean if they do not mean—

Hon. Mr. Carton: They are subject to the Act.

Mr. Sopha: They should come after the word "sell."

Mr. Ben: —prescribing regulations. The minister put them there for some reason, I trust.

Mr. Sopha: They should come after the word "sell."

Hon. Mr. Bales: They can sell that—the right to sell—but the selling is subject to the provisions of the Act. The other regulations would pertain to the rest of the operation of the establishment.

Mr. Sopha: The minister does not even use—forgive me, if he even uses the words "Subject to The Liquor Licence Act and its regulations" that would clarify it; so that—

An hon. member: He does not have to.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I would take no objection to that.

Mr. Sopha: —a court might not look at it and say, "The Legislature did not intend the regulations of The Liquor Licence Act to apply, but they intended the regulations of the metro council to apply."

Mr. Lawlor: This is becoming a pettifogging debate and I am shortly going to leave if—

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, I think that is quite a reasonable amendment and I will accept it.

Mr. Sopha: All right, I will so move it.

Mr. Lawlor: He is in no ordinary mood, carping, casuistic.

Mr. Sopha: Legal boondoggling.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, I will agree to that and I will move that we put it in.

Mr. Chairman: We have heard the amendment. Is it clear? Is the amendment clear?

Mr. J. Renwick: No. What is the amendment?

Hon. Mr. Bales: The amended Act, if I may, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Sopha: And its regulations.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): I think we should oppose that.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —would then read—

Mr. Chairman: Order please!

Hon. Mr. Bales: It would read:

In addition to the powers that may be exercised under subsection 1, the council has the power to let from year to year or for any time not exceeding 10 years, the right to sell, subject to The Liquor Licence Act and its regulations, spirituous, fermented or intoxicating liquors within the metropolitan parks under such regulations as the council may prescribe.

I will move that amendment.

Mr. Ben: The minister misses the point if he wants the words "under such regulations as the council may prescribe" to remain in there.

Mr. Sopha: Yes, I have abandoned that.

Mr. Ben: The member has abandoned that. It still permits them to change The Liquor Licence Act regulations.

Mr. Sopha: I settled for wider things in this, the 12th year.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That does not sound like the member for Sudbury.

Mr. Ben: They can still make their own regulations within the scope of The Liquor Licence Act?

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, they cannot.

Mr. Ben: The minister is giving them the power to pass regulations on how it may be dispensed—that is the size of it? Yes! Because at the present time The Liquor Licence Act does not prescribe the size of glasses. That section was repealed.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Tell these lawyers to quit.

Mr. Chairman: Order please. We will place the amendment. Any discussion on the amendment?

Mr. J. Renwick: Yes. I would like to discuss the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick: We think that it is lousy draftsmanship to include it—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Who is “we”?

Mr. Lewis: All of us. Unanimously.

Mr. J. Renwick: —because it is quite clear that a reference to The Liquor Licence Act connotes within that term any regulations made pursuant to that authority—

Mr. Pitman: Exactly.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, having demolished the amendment, but having agreed to support it in principle, I would like now to return to the substance of the argument in my own tortuous way.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. Renwick: I assume, Mr. Chairman, that there is a restaurant on the Toronto Island at the present time. I assume that that restaurant does not have the right to sell spirituous beverages at the present time. I assume that the restaurant is there by reason of a lease, entered into between Metropolitan Toronto and the particular company that operates that restaurant. I also assume that there is some prohibition, at the present time, against that company which operates that restaurant making independently an application to The Liquor Licence Board for a licence to sell spirituous beverages within the restaurant in the normal way that a restaurant on Yonge Street would make such an application. I assume that to be the situation.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Because it is in a public park.

Mr. J. Renwick: Right, because it is in a public park!

I assume, therefore, that what we are endeavouring therefore to do, is remove that block against a company, which by reason of a lease from the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto, presently operates a restaurant, to make a direct application to the Liquor Licence Board, for a licence to sell liquor in accordance with the usual provisions of the Liquor Licence Board. That is, either within a self-contained restaurant, in a lounge facility, or within the relatively restricted limitation which now applies to something called sidewalk cafes:

Now, if those assumptions are correct, and I take it to be so, because the minister nodded, then I am simply saying to him that why are we granting to the metropolitan council the right, in some way or other, to put up for sale the right to sell liquor in those premises?

Because it does seem to me, if I may take the phrase—the short phrase of the member for Sudbury—it does seem to me to permit metropolitan council to put up for tender the right to sell liquor. Because what you are saying in this section is that “the metropolitan council will have power to—” and you use the word “let”. The word lease is a little bit more significant, as “power to lease the right to sell”, and I do not think that metropolitan council can lease the right to sell liquor under The Liquor Licence Act, unless the metropolitan council itself makes the application for the licence.

Now, if that is the case, I think it is a point—

Mr. Singer: He was right, rather tortuous.

Mr. J. Renwick: —which deserves clarification. Either the bill is amended, or the minister should explain to us under what terms and conditions—having regard to the last part of the clause, where it says “under such regulations as the council may prescribe”—what are the terms and conditions under which there is going to be either a bidding for, or a trafficking in, the right to sell liquor in the metropolitan parks. Because I am fully, as our party has said, in agreement with the proposition that the Liquor Licence Board, to bona fide licensees or to the metropolitan council if it wants to run restaurants itself, should be able to make the application.

Mr. Sargent: The member is repeating himself.

Mr. J. Renwick: But I am very much concerned about the proposition that in some way or other, the actual right to sell would be the subject of some kind of trafficking in that operation. Now, surely that deserves a direct and straightforward reply from the minister.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, if the municipality does pass a bylaw, authorizing or permitting the sale of liquor within a metropolitan park, then if it wants more restaurants established it either puts them up for tender or it can have a restaurant of its own and make the application. But one way or the other Metropolitan Toronto will not be making the application—that is my appreciation of it—except when they themselves operate the restaurant.

They would be deciding whatever number of restaurants are required in a particular park, and if the bylaw has been passed for that then they can make whatever regulations or arrangements they wish in entering into those agreements, or establishing their own restaurants.

Mr. Chairman: Section 2. We have an amendment we had better place.

Hon. Mr. Bales moves that the words “and its regulations” be inserted after the words “The Liquor Licence Act.” Shall the amendment carry?

Amendment agreed to.

Section 2, as amended, agreed to.

Section 3 agreed to.

On section 4:

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, I am going to conclude my remarks by moving an amendment to section 4, that subsection 2 be deleted from that section.

We addressed ourselves to that subsection on second reading and I think the comments made at that time by myself and by many other hon. members are most pertinent. There is no reason whatsoever, Mr. Chairman, that the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto should have exculpating legislation which would excuse them, at the expense of the citizen, from their negligence.

If in construction of the mall, which we believe is a good idea, either the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto or the city of Toronto is negligent—for example, supposing a barricade collapses and seriously injures an individual and the barricade has been erected by servants of either municipality. This section would eliminate the right of that citizen who was using the mall in good faith from resort to the courts to have his rights determined.

I can understand, perhaps, a section that would say, “No merchant could sue for loss of business by reason of the creation of the mall”; but why the section should be so broad and so all-embracing that you are taking away from the citizens who use that mall their ordinary right of resort to the courts against what may be the negligence of either the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto or the city of Toronto, or any of their servants, is absolutely inexcusable.

I can see no basis, Mr. Chairman, on which that subsection 2 as it is presently worded should stand as a part of our legislation. Therefore, sir, I move that section 4 be amended by deleting therefrom subsection 2.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Singer moves that section 4 be amended by deleting subsection 2 therefrom.

The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, I support my colleague from Downsview because, although I know this is a housekeeping bill, I know the time factor is not a longer time. But there is an old saying in business that if anything can go wrong it will. And regardless of the good intent of the minister in getting it through to enable this project to go ahead, I say that the fact that no person shall be entitled, it says, to recover any damages or compensation of any nature either from Metro or from the city of Toronto arising from this exercise or this gamble, as it were, or this caper, any way you want to put it, I say, Mr. Chairman, in supporting this amendment that this is completely unacceptable.

It is unprecedented, and it is definitely discriminatory in that you would allow any group of people to have a project like this and bar anybody from recovery. I think that any fair businessman in the House would not want to see this thing go on the books.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further on this motion? The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, surely the minister can, with his advisers, come up with some adequate limitation to cover the problem which his advisers have—

Mr. Singer: Created for him.

Mr. J. Renwick: —encompassed in this bill without drawing it in such a way as to invite the kind of deletion proposed by the member for Downsview? One can just simply by extrapolation think of situations where Metropolitan Toronto should in fact, by reason of the exercise of the power granted by this Legislature, not be open to suit.

But even the minister, I would think, and his advisers would agree that this is drawn so broadly that he leaves a party such as ours, that always wants to be reasonable in this kind of a situation, little alternative but to support with great regret the amendment proposed by the member for Downsview. Is there not some limitation that comes to the mind of the minister that would make this—which is reasonable in intention but very poor in the terms in which it is drawn—acceptable to the assembly?

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, just a brief word. As Mr. Chairman knows, I am an idolator at the altar of succinctness, and having set forth my initial remarks on second reading on this very point, the member for Downsview being even more succinct than I was on the point—though not nearly as charming—a little more acerbic but succinct nonetheless—and that is what I am after. I will be even more succinct and sit down.

Mr. Chairman: Any further comment on this amendment? The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the points that have been made but I think under the circumstances, this section, as it is drafted now, is adequate. The point is that if it were to be in general legislation we would not want to grant it. Under the circumstances—

Mr. Sargent: It is a blank cheque you have given them.

Hon. Mr. Bales: No. No. Just be careful.

Mr. Singer: If you hurt just one citizen of Toronto, whether it is in general or particular legislation, you are to be condemned.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Each citizen is very important. This is for a limited period of time and I recognize—

Mr. Sargent: It is wrong. The principle is wrong.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —that difficulties may occur. But there is protection here and there can be protection—

Mr. Singer: Where?

Hon. Mr. Bales: —inserted if there is a pre-existing condition that has nothing to do with it. Under the circumstances, I believe—

Mr. Sargent: How could a lawyer draw that up?

Hon. Mr. Bales: —that this section should remain.

Mr. Chairman: Those in favour of Mr. Singer's amendment will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the nays have it.

I declare the amendment lost.

Call in the members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, we have given careful consideration to the points that we want. We want to make sure that there is not even any remotest possibility of anybody being unfairly damaged or injured. I move an amendment to subsection 2 of section 4, that the words in the third line of the subsection "of any nature whatsoever" be deleted, and in the fourth line after the words "city of Toronto" that the words "for loss of business or for loss of access to Yonge Street" should be added.

Mr. Singer: Good amendment.

Mr. J. Renwick: Terrific amendment.

Mr. Chairman: You have all heard the minister's amendment. Shall the amendment carry?

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. Sargent: It is an admission of sloppy drafting of law.

Mr. Chairman: Order please! Shall the section, as amended carry then, or stand as part of the bill?

Section 4, as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Any other comment, question or amendment to any other section of this bill? If not, shall the bill, as amended, be reported?

Bill 35, as amended, reported.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report one bill with certain amendments and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Two amendments in one bill?

THIRD READING

The following bill was given third reading upon motion:

Bill 35, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Going to get the Lieutenant Governor?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Under the old standing order, the hon. member would be quite correct. However, under the new standing orders, that rule does not apply.

Mr. Sargent: We were close.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the adjournment of the House.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, before the House adjourns, perhaps the House leader can advise us as to what the business of the House will be on Thursday.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): It will be the estimates of The Department of Lands and Forests in the House and The Department of Energy and Resources Management in committee.

Mr. J. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I assume there will be no second readings.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): The member does not assume anything, not with this government.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, I think I must reserve some latitude.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: I shall try to give the members as much notice as possible.

Mr. Singer: Is it all right to watch the hockey game now?

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): But do not get yourself paged.

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10.25 o'clock, p.m.

Statements by the ministry.

Hon. A. A. Wishart (Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Welch) is in the city of Peterborough this afternoon addressing the annual conference of the Ontario Municipal Recreation Association.

He has asked me, in his absence, to bring to the members' attention the report of the study commission on recreation services in Ontario, a copy of which has been placed on the members' desks.

This government recognizes that society is rapidly changing, and as technological changes advance leisure time for our citizens will increase. The study committee, appointed in 1969, was asked to consider the ways in which community recreation services should be made available to the citizens of this province, and to suggest strategies for the further development of community recreation and leisure time programmes.

The report offers recommendations for the development of recreation systems at the local, regional and provincial levels of government, so that these services and these programmes may be relevant to the interests of those they serve and provide enjoyment and satisfaction to the participants.

The comments of The Department of Education on the recommendations are to be found adjacent to the recommendation.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Trade and Development): Mr. Speaker, as announced in the Speech from the Throne, the policies of the Ontario Development Corporation will be broadened to give preference to Canadian-owned companies requiring financial assistance.

In his recent budget address the hon. Treasurer of Ontario (Mr. McKeough) announced a five per cent tax credit for investment in machinery and equipment as an incentive to companies in Ontario. The measures that I am announcing today will further encourage Canadian enterprise and ownership.

The incentives under the Equalization of Industrial Opportunity programme will be amended to provide increased aid to Canadian-owned industry establishing new plants or expanding. Canadian companies that qualify and are in slow-growth areas will be eligible for performance loans of 50 per cent of the cost of new plant and equipment.

Presently loans are provided on the basis of 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ per cent of the first \$250,000 and 25 per cent of the balance. In effect the new policy will provide an incentive bonus of from 50 per cent to 84 per cent to Canadian-owned companies, depending on size of investment, over what will be available to non-Canadian companies.

For example, where the cost of new buildings and equipment is $250,000, the performance loan for a Canadian company under the existing programme is calculated as follows: thirty-three and a third per cent of $250,000, which is $83,333. Performance loan for Canadian company under proposed new programme: 50 per cent of $250,000, which is $125,000; bonus for Canadian company in the performance loan, $41,667; percentage increase over the performance loan under the existing programme, 50 per cent.

A foreign-owned company would continue to be eligible for the present performance loan of $83,333.

Another example of how Canadian companies will benefit under this plan is as follows: If the cost of new buildings and equipment is $1 million, the performance loan under the existing programme for Canadian companies is calculated as follows: thirty-three and a third per cent of $250,000, which is, $83,333; 25 per cent of the balance of $750,000, which is $187,500; therefore the performance loan under the existing programme is $270,833.

The performance loan for the Canadian company under the proposed new programme is 50 per cent of $1 million or $500,000.

Therefore the bonus for a Canadian company in the performance loan is $229,167 and the percentage increase over the performance loan under the existing programme is 84.6 per cent.

A foreign-owned company would continue to be eligible for a performance loan of $270,833.

A new small business loans programme will be introduced as well. The aim is to assist small companies to expand, to create employment, to establish or increase exports, to replace imports and generally to stimulate economic growth in Ontario. As a general guideline, a small business will be defined as one in which the owners' investment does not exceed $300,000. Preference will be given to labour intensive industries.

Whereas term loans under the existing programme are confined to the slow growth areas, this new programme will ensure that small businesses located anywhere in the province will also be eligible. Thus small Canadian-owned industries, regardless of their location within the province, will be considered for term loans of up to $50,000. Such loans may run for as long as ten years at ODC's prevailing rate of interest.

The types of companies eligible will be broadened to include not only manufacturing concerns, but also some segments of service industries which are closely allied to manufacturing, such as canning industries and other segments of the food processing industry, machine shops, printing and allied trades.

A Venture Capital for Canadians Fund will also be established. This risk capital will be available to small Canadian-owned businesses with good growth potential in Ontario.

The fund is intended to assist companies capable of introducing new technology and products that will diversify our economy. ODC will work in close co-operation with the Ontario Research Foundation and other scientific organizations for this purpose.

The fund will also be available to small Canadian businesses to establish or increase markets abroad. Canadian companies wishing to enter into joint ventures with foreign manufacturers and needing risk capital to match the capital available from their prospective partners will likewise be eligible. All companies seeking this venture capital will have to demonstrate that they have had difficulties in obtaining this risk capital elsewhere in Canada. Normally venture capital investment by ODC in any one company under this programme will be up to $100,000. Mr. Speaker, we recognize the risks involved in this kind of financing but we know that by expressing such tangible confidence in Canadian ventures we will be providing opportunities for skilled Canadians to develop the Ontario industries of the future and to enter world markets.

Also this should make such companies less susceptible to foreign acquisition. A new section will be set up in ODC to administer the Venture Capital for Canadians Fund.

This fund, like the other forms of expanded financial assistance offered under the new programmes for economic development will foster Canadian growth and enterprise.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Would the minister advise—

Mr. Speaker: I think the questions on this particular statement could be brought up under oral questions. The hon. member may have an opportunity under oral questions.

Mr. Sargent: There is nothing to say that under a ministerial statement you cannot ask for verifications.

Mr. Speaker: Under the oral question period.

Mr. J. Jessiman (Fort William): The member should go back and retire.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, could I at this time answer a question that was asked previously in the House?

Mr. Speaker: No, we will enter upon the oral question period and at the appropriate time I will call the hon. minister.

Oral questions.

VENTURE CAPITAL FOR CANADIANS

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, further to the statement made by the minister a moment ago, can he tell us the total amounts allocated to the various sections of the programme as he has announced it?

For example, how much is it intended that the government will put into the so-called venture programme, and how much would go into the redesigned EIO programme?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, there is a figure in the estimates at this present time at $7.5 million. That can be used for any of these programmes and if, as, and when more money is required, we will be welcoming any company which can qualify under these terms and we hope there will be many of them. If more money is available, whenever it is needed we will go to Treasury and/or the Legislature where necessary.

Mr. Nixon: Is the programme in essence in any way different from that which was inaugurated under the minister's predecessor Mr. Macaulay which I think drew to a close in 1966, under which circumstances $100 million was available for the venture fund?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I have not studied that, Mr. Speaker. I could not tell the hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary question: Would it be possible for those industries which were turned down in their applications in recent months to reapply? I am thinking particularly of the canning industry, which was not covered under the recent regulations. If so, what would the applicable date for reapplication be?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We hope to receive applications at any time, beginning this moment.

Mr. J. B. Trotter (Parkdale): Can they reapply?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Of course, everyone can always reapply, and of course they would be welcome.

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. Leader of the Opposition any further supplementary questions?

Mr. Nixon: No.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary questions. The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): I would like to ask the minister, Mr. Speaker, if as a result of the announcement made today any additional funds will be made available to the Northwestern Ontario Development Corporation; and will the terms of reference be broadened to include primary industry, such as mining and forest products industry?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the funds will be available in NODC the same way as they are available to ODC, under the same terms; and there will be—

Mr. Nixon: The same people run it?

Mr. Stokes: No additional funds?

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): No additional grants?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There will be additional funds, but there is no intention to expand them beyond those industries which I have mentioned.

Mr. Stokes: As another supplementary, is there anything in this announcement made by the hon. minister today to indicate that it will enhance the possibilities of further development of secondary industries in northern Ontario?

Mr. Jessiman: One hundred per cent.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Yes, there is Mr. Speaker, and that will become apparent very shortly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview on a supplementary.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister can tell us whether any forecast has been done by his department as to how many jobs this is likely to supply in the next six-month period?

Mr. Nixon: Some extra jobs!

Mr. Stokes: Tell him it is under review.

An hon. member: No jobs; that is the answer.

Another hon. member: It is a silly question.

An hon. member: Certainly, it is a silly question.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The answer, Mr. Speaker, is no.

An hon. member: No jobs, no jobs.

Mr. Singer: All right. Can the minister tell us what he meant by saying that after the $7.5 million has been spent, "If there is more money available, we will supply it?" What exactly does that mean?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If that is what I said, I certainly gave the wrong impression. It is if any more is needed.

Mr. Singer: If any more is needed, what is going to happen? Is it going to be available?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I said it would be made available. We will go to Treasury and/or the Legislature, depending upon the time when the money is required.

Hon. E. Dunlop (Minister without Portfolio): If this House votes it—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Is the member unhappy about this?

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I just want to find out how it is going to work; that is all.

Mr. Jessiman: Does the member not want more jobs?

Mr. Singer: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the minister could indicate where in the budget the amount of over $7.5 million can be found.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I do not recall saying, Mr. Speaker, that there was an amount over $7.5 million, but that there was a figure in there, I believe, of $7.5 million.

Mr. Singer: Then where is the extra money going to come from?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Oh; I have just finished saying that twice.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford on a supplementary.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister indicate whether the redesigned EIO loans will go into other than presently designated slow-growth areas? In other words, has he expanded the slow-growth areas in the province?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Not at this time.

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Is the minister aware that the industries that could benefit from this action, at least 95 per cent of them, are located in non-slow growth areas of the province at the moment?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, that is possible, although the hon. member apparently does not appreciate the aid to small businesses which I have just announced and which will cover the entire province, and with debenture capital, I should say.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce on a supplementary.

Mr. Sargent: Would the hon. minister agree that this is patching the leaky boat of the Treasurer? And would he tell me why in the small businessmen's loan section there is not a forgiveness factor the same as there is for big business? There is no forgiveness factor at all. And secondly—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: May I answer that one first, Mr. Speaker? It is obvious that if we are going to spread this across the whole of the province there must be some incentive—

Mr. Sargent: That $7.5 million would not last a week.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Is the member talking about the amount now or is he talking about the programme?

Mr. Sargent: Everything.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, one thing at a time.

Mr. Sargent: Go ahead.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The reason that the EIO programme does not cover the whole of the province is that there must be some incentive for industry to go outside of the large areas, otherwise all of the money we could make available would not be enough for those industries which would want to establish in Toronto, Hamilton, London and places of that nature. It is designed to give additional incentive to go out to slow growth areas.

Mr. Sargent: How does the minister relate giving forgiveness loans to large American industry, and to small businessmen's loans there is no forgiveness factor?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I just went to a great extent to give examples how it would be more helpful for Canadian industry than it would for non-Canadian industry.

Mr. Sargent: Well, I do not believe the minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Does the hon. member have a question?

Mr. Sargent: A further supplementary. In the venture capital loan programmes, what is the term of the venture loan?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Generally, about 10 years.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary question. The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): A supplementary question: Would the minister be prepared to make available to the House the conditions that are attached to the receipt of the loans that are made? And also, what changes have been made to safeguard the workers in the areas to ensure that there will be an overall employment increase as a result of the government action in this field?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, this is done under our present programmes. I know what the hon. member is referring to—he is referring to a specific instance which he mentioned in his speech the other day. He was totally wrong and I will bring him the facts shortly on that. I had it all ready today but I did not want to keep the members listening to me for two hours. He will be advised eventually.

Mr. Deans: I was not even referring to that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, we do it now.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough East on a supplementary.

Mr. T. Reid (Scarborough East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, could the minister tell us whether or not small Canadian-owned book publishing companies in Ontario will be eligible for any of these loans?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Any company which will qualify under the terms which I have just mentioned.

Mr. T. Reid: A supplementary question: Do the terms which the minister has outlined include Canadian-owned book publishing companies or do the terms not include them?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I have just answered that. If a particular firm would come under some of these terms, we will take it into consideration.

Mr. Sargent: Does the minister not know?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I must point out that there is no fixed formula. What we have to do is treat each case on its individual merits. We will help any Canadian-owned company which it is possible to help if it helps the economy any place in this province.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I ask the minister why was the farming industry not included in this redesigned programme?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would think that canning industries, which are part of the food processing industry, would be helpful to the farming community. If the hon. member could come up with some formula by which we could be of any further assistance, in addition to the assistance given to the farming community at this moment, we would be very pleased to hear it.

Mr. Lewis: By way of a supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister going to continue the habit of granting loans even under the redesigned programme to communities and areas which violate the principles of his government's Design for Development as has been the case hitherto?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I thought I had made that clear when the same line of questioning was followed some time ago, I think last week. The fact remains we would be very happy if we could deal with these individual cases within the framework of the Design for Development. The fact is, particularly at this time, there are many thousands of people, some 200,000 people, out of work in Ontario and our first job is to get them employed regardless of any of these overall plans.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I have talked to some members of the NDP caucus and some members of the Liberal caucus, as well as members of our own caucus on the basis of some of the applications they have made and some of the pleadings they have made to bring some industry into their areas. Their requests in many instances are quite reasonable and we have not turned them down on the basis that they do not fit into some general overall policy of the government. At this time we have got to put people to work first.

Mr. Sargent: We will see how many the minister puts in in Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: By way of a supplementary: Accepting the bravado of the minister, he can then show the House, I am sure, into which areas some of these loans will now be going and how many jobs will be created? He will be able to tell us that, I take it, because he answered so heatedly.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Accepting the pessimism and the unhappiness of the leader of the NDP, I could tell him that anyone who is interested in the economy of Ontario will be happy with the result of this programme.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! We have now taken up almost a third of the question period with supplementaries on this one. It has been an important statement and I felt that there should be sufficient supplementaries. I will permit one more supplementary.

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister, if I am to take it that he is prepared under this programme to consider farmers who are incorporated?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, this government is prepared to consider any industry, any company, which needs help, provided we can help it in a practical manner and continue it as a viable, or make it a viable, industry. If the hon. member has some suggestions to add to this, we would be very glad to receive them.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

SITE OF NEW TORONTO AIRPORT

Mr. Nixon: I would like to ask the Premier if he has any further announcement on his negotiations with the government of Canada having to do with the establishment of a new airport. Most specifically, has a decision been taken by his government to freeze the sale of certain properties in areas of the province?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there is nothing further to report to the members of the House since the last time I was asked about this matter, I believe on Monday.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question; News reports that the government ministries concerned had taken action to freeze properties as of Tuesday of this week are therefore incorrect?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, to my knowledge there has been no action taken by this government to freeze properties.

EFFECT OF MARK REVALUATION ON ONTARIO LOANS

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Treasurer: Can he inform the House as to what the threat of the revaluation of the German mark would be in the light of loan position in deutschmarks, which I now think is $138 million?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Treasurer): Between ourselves and Hydro it is closer to $200 million. I do not think it is correct to describe it as a threat, Mr. Speaker. The member can read the papers—

Mr. Nixon: The threat that the costs may increase, I should say!

Hon. Mr. McKeough: That the costs may increase? Alternatively, a year from now the costs may decrease.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): How did he get to be Treasurer?

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, have the minister's economists reported to him the additional financial undertakings that a revaluation of 10 to 12 per cent might impose on the province?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Well, first it depends on when the loan happens to be due. Some of the money is due in three or four years; some of it is not due for 15 years. What we are concerned about, of course, is what the cost of money, of our money vis-à-vis other money, will be 15 years from now and that is rather difficult to figure out.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary question. Was the Treasurer correctly reported or not when he said that our costs had already increased by 20 per cent?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: It would be fair to say that on the last revaluation our cost of the deutsch mark was revalued by about nine per cent. By the same token the value of the Canadian dollar, vis-à-vis the American dollar—which is what we are really talking about—has risen by some seven or eight per cent, so we are really in effect right where we were when we borrowed the money.

Mr. T. Reid: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister inform us whether the loans are payable in deutsch marks, Canadian dollars or US dollars?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Deutsch marks I think. Yes, in deutsch marks, except the Euro-bond loan, which is payable in US dollars.

Mr. T. Reid: Would the Treasurer not state that it would have been a wise move to hedge against exchange rate fluctuations by having half the loans payable in deutsch marks and the other half payable in Canadian or perhaps US dollars?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: No, I think you have to look at the total borrowings of the province and Hydro which are in the range of some $3 billion. Of that amount, something less than $200 million is payable in deutsch marks; something over $1 billion is payable in American dollars. I should point out to my hon. friend that of course, one of the main reasons Ontario moved into the European market in 1968 was because of the availability of funds. Funds were not available in this country, at that time, at a suitable rate. I may say that when we did move into the European market to establish that market, which we have found to be very beneficial since, both to ourselves and to Ontario Hydro, we did so following the lead of the government of Canada and at their urging.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce, with a supplementary.

Mr. Sargent: The minister refers to the German loan programme, but does the minister agree that in retrospect any future borrowings—due to the fact that we spend $100 million to keep an army over there, or troops over there—does he think it is smart for us to be borrowing money from them and trying to keep troops over there too?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I do not think that is supplementary, but again I would have to reiterate the concern of this government that we do not be associated with the narrow-minded parochial attitude of the member for Grey-Bruce about world affairs.

Mr. Sargent: If the minister thinks that burning him in effigy was hot, I think the hot seat he is going to be on is going to be great!

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have a further question?

POSSIBLE AID FOR DENTURISTS

Mr. Nixon: Yes I do, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Health. Is he preparing a review, or perhaps an approach to regulation, if not statute, that would assist the denturists in the province in their efforts to have a distinct position in the provision of their services; and second, how was that OPP raid on a denturist in North York authorized? Surely such a raid should have been undertaken by the Metropolitan Police?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Minister of Health): As to that second question, I think that should be addressed to the Attorney General (Mr. A. F. Lawrence). I myself have no knowledge of the background insofar as the jurisdiction, investigation, or the raid itself are concerned.

With regard to the first part, all the health disciplines in Ontario are being reviewed at this moment, specifically in an effort to define their scopes of practice and define the nature of their professions or calling. The denturist is one of that whole group.

This arises, as the Leader of the Opposition will recall, from the report of the committee on the healing arts and the statement of principles that was developed from that. So we are at the stage, to put it another way, of beginning our preliminary draft in developing new legislation for all of the health disciplines individually.

QUEBEC LEGISLATION ON ONTARIO FARM PRODUCE

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of Agriculture and Food has returned to his place, I have a question of him. Has he seen a draft of the legislation before the National Assembly of Quebec concerning the control of the importation of eggs and other farm produce from Ontario; and second, has he any special information about the border control inspection offices that evidently the government of Quebec has decided to set up on the road boundaries with this province?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): No, Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the legislation, nor have I heard anything about those reported checkpoints.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to defer my right to ask the first question to the hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

PHYSICIANS' BILLINGS TO OHSIP

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I have several questions of the Minister of Health. In his recent studies of the results of the OHSIP computer, has he found that there have been physicians who have been billing at a rate in excess of one third of a million dollars annually?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, the figures that are coming out are statistics that are incomplete at the moment. As my friend will understand they relate only to the OHSIP figures and not to those physicians billing through the designated agents.

As to gross amounts, I hesitate to give the figures that I have seen because they are gross. They do not explain to what extent the particular doctor is billing in or out, or has been billing in or out, of the OHSIP plan. They do not give any figures in relation to his overhead, nor do they explain the extent or nature of his staff for supportive services.

I think it is fair to say that I have seen figures which would suggest that the gross payment out of OHSIP—I am not dealing here with the doctor's income—that the payment out of OHSIP under the name of at least one doctor has gone into the six-figure range, as I recall it—not quite a third of a million, but in the six-figure range.

Mr. Shulman: And is it correct, that this would represent only a portion of his income, because in addition to this he will be receiving money through OHSIP from the various insurance companies?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: That would vary from case to case, Mr. Speaker. It is possible that when one looks at the raw figures that the printout shows, one does not know whether it is a doctor who is by practice billing 100 per cent or 95 per cent or 50 per cent in relation to OHSIP or outside the plan. It is impossible to tell from the raw figures.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, the question I am asking is not the amount he is billing outside the plan. Is it not correct that the computer just shows the amount of billing that goes to OHSIP itself in contradistinction to the amount that goes through OHSIP to the various insurance companies? The computer has not yet brought in the various insurance companies, has it?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Yes, the point the member is making is quite correct.

Mr. Shulman: The second question I would like to ask: Is it correct that the figures from the computer show that the number of certain procedures, such as tonsillectomy, has gone up by some five times in the past two years?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I cannot recall, Mr. Speaker, with any accuracy, which procedures have gone up how much.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Question period was never meant to be this. I was on the committee.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: But I do not know that tonsillectomy is among those groups which have shown a marked increase.

Mr. Shulman: As a further supplementary, Mr. Speaker, may I ask, is it correct that a large number of procedures, not just tonsillectomies, have shown massive increases in this period of time?

Mr. Sopha: One of the biggest grievances around here; the member never gives anyone else a chance to ask a question.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: No, Mr. Speaker, I cannot accept the term "large number." Some procedures have shown a significant increase which obviously warrants investigation by the department.

Mr. Shulman: My final supplementary, if I may, Mr. Speaker: As a result of the minister's preliminary studies and that of his officials, have certain officials in his department come to the conclusion that there is gross overcharging through OHSIP which may amount to as high as $100 million annually?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: No, Mr. Speaker, I do not think anyone has categorically come to an analytical answer as to what overcharging may be or its percentage. All I can say, Mr. Speaker, and I have said it before this, is if there be $1 overcharged insofar as the taxpayer's money is concerned, it really is as significantly, from this department's point of view and from the government's point of view, as if there was $1 million. I do see evidence, Mr. Speaker, of laxness in particular cases. I hope, within the next weeks and perhaps within the next months, to be able to give the House and the public generally a total profile on where we have problems with OHSIP in general and in particular with regard to billing.

Mr. Shulman: If I may, Mr. Speaker, would the minister make available to the House the print out of the gross that he has from the computer?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: Under the legislation, Mr. Speaker, I am limited. As I recall it, under the Act, and I was reading it recently, I can only do statistical analyses for the House. I am not permitted under the legislation to deal with particular doctors, or particular patients, or both.

Mr. Shulman: Without names?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I shall address myself, Mr. Speaker, to making a statistical report to the House as soon as I am capable of doing so.

Mr. Shulman: One last question, if I may?

Mr. Speaker: I think there are sufficient supplementaries on this particular question.

Mr. Lewis: Let Mr. Speaker begin the rotation now.

Mr. R. M. Johnston (St. Catharines): The member has got his answer. Why does he not sit down?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker can begin the rotation now.

Mr. Speaker: Right!

At this particular point, the hon. Minister of Trade and Development has the answer to a question previously asked.

Mr. Sopha: That is funny. I was just about to ask a question.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury is now about to get an answer.

Interjections by hon. members.

TERMINATION OF OHC TENANT'S LEASE

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, on May 4 I undertook to report back to the Legislature with respect to an OHC tenant, one Mr. Michael Carson.

As in so often the case, some of the hon. members in the opposition have possibly received incorrect information. First of all, I would inform the House that Mr. Carson will not be required to vacate his premises before May 11, 1971.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There is nothing generous about it at all.

Further, following the usual practice of OHC for tenant families who are ordered to vacate, the corporation is making arrangements with local agencies to assist the Carson family in finding alternate accommodation. The decision to terminate Mr. Carson's lease was taken by OHC's board of directors approximately one year ago, only after several tenants complained about his behaviour, which in one case caused the court to bind him over to keep the peace.

Mr. Carson was given a month's notice to vacate the premises. When the notice was disregarded by Mr. Carson—

An hon. member: Mr. Carson was getting mad.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —the corporation applied for a court order of possession on September 21, 1970. The lease was on a monthly basis.

The application was not allowed to proceed on the grounds that it did not reveal the reasons for terminating the lease. The case was submitted to the court of appeal of the Supreme Court of Ontario and the Chief Justice of the province and two of his colleagues reversed this decision and granted an order for writ of possession to the corporation.

Following the Supreme Court decision, Mr. Carson and his solicitor indicated to the corporation that he would be applying to legal aid for further assistance in appealing the case to the Supreme Court of Canada. It should be noted that legal aid paid for his costs to that time.

To allow time for appeal, the corporation took no action to obtain vacant possession, since last November.

Mr. Bullbrook: The government does not publish that information.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The corporation was notified by Mr. Carson's solicitor more than a month ago, that funds for an appeal were not available. Mr. Carson was aware of the decision of the court but gave no indication that he would be moving from the premises. So, at the end of April, the corporation acted on the order of the court and Mr. Carson was notified by the sheriff that he would have to vacate.

Mr. Speaker, I have reviewed all of the pertinent information concerning this case.

In my view, the public interest would not be served if I were to intercede in this instance.

An hon. member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trotter: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, is not the real reason why Mr. Carson is being evicted because he is president of the Ontario Housing Tenants' Association and has annoyed the employees of Ontario Housing Corporation?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: For the information of the hon. member for Parkdale, that would be reflecting on the courts.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the Ontario Housing Corporation works in a very co-operative fashion with many tenants' associations involved in their housing.

Mr. Trotter: Is this for all of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: As a matter of fact, I have looked into this very thoroughly. The corporation has been in the process, over a period of time, of encouraging such tenants' associations.

Mr. Trotter: Then why has the government thrown out the Carson family?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Because that has nothing to do with this man's eviction notice. I have read out to the hon. member that there were complaints against this man by other of the tenants in the housing development in which he was involved. There were many complaints. They did not want to live with him. He was, as a matter of fact—and I pointed it out—bound over to keep the peace because of it. It is one of those situations where the man is better living someplace else.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Any excuse would suffice!

Mr. Trotter: By way of a further supplementary question: If he is still unpopular with other tenants, how is it that he is elected president for all the Ontario Housing tenants?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Trotter: This man is elected president. How come?

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: We wonder how the member got elected too. Did the majority elect him?

Another hon. member: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I did not speak of how many tenants and I did not speak of his popularity or lack of popularity.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon member for Parkdale is very vulnerable on that question.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There are tenants in the development in which he lived—as a matter of fact, if he was so popular why did they have to go to court a couple of times and have him bound over to keep the peace?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

HOSPITAL FACILITIES IN SUDBURY

Mr. Sopha: I have a question of the Minister of Health which is in two parts.

Is the minister aware that one of the gravest social problems in the Sudbury basin is the physical condition of St. Joseph's Hospital, which in effect is not only an environment of physical danger to the patient but which in its characteristics posits something comparable to the surroundings Florence Nightingale must have practised her nursing art in?

Secondly, if the minister is aware of this, may I ask him what steps he personally is taking to stimulate the Ontario Hospital Services Commission into making the necessary decisions and instituting the action that will see an early start on the building of the new Laurentian Hospital to furnish facilities for the hospital care of people in the Sudbury basin?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I know, Mr. Speaker, that as of yesterday I was discussing this with the chairman of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission. He did not suggest to me that there was any misunderstanding or holdup or bureaucratic problem with regard to the development of Laurentian, or indeed any of the hospitals up there.

I have a general concern with the Sudbury hospital situation, and I am going up there to look around myself late next week or at the beginning of the week after.

Mr. Sopha: A supplementary question: Is the minister aware that there is acceptance of the fact, in the Sudbury basin, that some $7 million will have to be raised locally for the building of Laurentian Hospital? If he is aware of that, is he aware that the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Bales), in his unveiling of the proposal for regional government, did not even include a section dealing with hospital expansion?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I do not really see the relationship between the two, because it is a broad and total provincial policy to balance between—

Mr. Sopha: Seven million dollars will have to be raised locally.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: The formula that would be applied, whether it be in a city or in a region or otherwise, as I recall it, will be the same. In other words, the responsibility for local fund-raising will be the same in Sudbury or in relation to Laurentian as it would be with any other hospital in the province.

I myself, at the moment, cannot follow the distinction between the municipal structuring and the burden on the local citizen.

Mr. Sopha: A further supplementary: Surely the minister must be aware that the intention of financing the local portion was through the tax levied against assessment? Was he aware that that was how the $7 million was going to be raised?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: No, Mr. Speaker, I was not aware of that.

Mr. Sopha: The hon. minister is better informed today.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Middlesex South.

ARVA LIFT SYSTEMS

Mr. K. C. Bolton (Middlesex South): Mr. Speaker, I have a threefold question of the Minister of Trade and Development.

1. Has the minister been informed that Arva Lift Systems will shortly lay off 48 employees from the London area?

2. Has he been informed that Arva Lift Systems plans to sell its patent rights and operations to American interests?

3. Is the minister aware that the reason given by the executive vice-president for these drastic decisions is the failure of the ODC to deal efficiently with their request for financial support?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the first question, "Have I been informed that they will lay off 48 employees?" I should advise the hon. member the first time we heard of this was when the official of the company came in this morning and threatened to do this unless the government advance them money.

Also, in answer to question 2, the answer is the same. He threatened that they will sell it to American interests unless we come forward with some funds.

Mr. Nixon: How much did the hon. minister give them?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: And as to the reason that they give—that we fail to deal efficiently with their request for financial support—that is, of course, a matter of opinion. It is going before the full ODC board, next Monday I believe, and it will be dealt with at that time. But it was only since I received the short notice from the hon. member—for which I thank him very much—that I made the inquiry and found out these threats were made this morning.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Lands and Forests has an answer to a question asked by the member for Huron-Bruce.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: There are five minutes left in the question period. Order.

ABOLITION OF FISHING LICENCES

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: On Tuesday, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Huron-Bruce asked me a question about the refund of fees for angling licences. In reply to the question of the hon. member regarding prosecutions for angling without a licence prior to April 26, 1971, the Interpretation Act makes it clear that in respect to liability and prosecution for an offence, a change in the law does not affect previous offences and that previous offences are to be prosecuted in accordance with the law in effect on the date that the offence took place.

While it is the government's intent to refund licence fees, it is not the government's intent to legalize breaches of the law prior to the announcement. Accordingly, there will be no refunds of fines paid or withdrawal of pending charges.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

WATER POLLUTION IN OTTAWA AREA

Mr. H. MacKenzie (Ottawa Centre): I have a question of the Premier: Is the Premier aware of the existing differences of opinion between the OWRC and the Ottawa-Carleton medical officer of health as regards the level of pollution at the beaches on both the Rideau and the Ottawa Rivers in the Ottawa area? In view of the Minister of Health some time ago saying he would support the medical officer of health, would the Premier endeavour to quickly resolve the problems arising and issue a statement?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I shall certainly attempt to do so.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

HARBOUR CITY PROJECT

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Trade and Development: Why did the special projects branch of the department refuse to send a representative of the minister to discuss Harbour City at the public meeting called by the Toronto Planning Board last night?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, they did not refuse to go; they acted on my instructions. We should not get into a public debate on this at this time because I had just met, just a few weeks ago, with the executive of Metro. We discussed certain matters, as a result of which I asked for a complete report and study on what has gone on up until this time, because obviously I need to be briefed—

Mr. Lewis: Oh, shame. Well, according to the member for Don Mills (Mr. Randall) everything is hunky-dory.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I did not say it was not hunky-dory. I said, as the Minister I want to be briefed before I give any opinions.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Until such time as I meet again with Metro, I do not think we ought to be getting into a public cat-and-dog fight over it. We want to discuss it in a proper fashion. I will meet with Metro and we will discuss it in the way I think two governments should get together and discuss these matters. If, as and when as a result of those discussions we come to some conclusion at that time, of course the public and this House are entitled to know.

Mr. Peacock: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Why is the public or the planning board not entitled to share in the information that the minister has left with the Toronto executive committee as to whether he will set up a Crown corporation and other matters?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, that was one of the things which concerned me. I wanted to know why the planning board is not privy to all of these discussions and—

Mr. Peacock: What did the minister find out?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I want to find out precisely what the relationship is between the planning board and Metro and our government in this matter—

Mr. Lewis: He probably wants to review it all. Just a little review.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —because before this government comes to any conclusion it wants to know the facts, and I want to know the facts.

Mr. Lewis: I thought the conclusion was obvious.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well that is all right, but I am responsible for it now and I want to make sure I understand what I am responsible for.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I should say there should not be any complaints from any other source, because so far only this government has put its money where its mouth is. We are the only ones putting money into it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! Does the hon. member have a supplementary? Perhaps he would say so, so I would know.

Mr. Trotter: I did. There was too much noise.

By way of supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, am I to understand by the minister's remarks that his department is no longer in favour of Harbour City?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: He cannot come to any such conclusion, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Trotter: Is the minister in favour or is he not?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I have given the House the information that I have been able to give it to date. I am not saying I am not in favour; I am not saying I am in favour.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: So far we have not been able to get the city to say they are in favour of it either.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: Has the minister finished? Sit down for a while.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We have carried out the only constructive action on this so far.

Mr. Lewis: What a reversal this is.

An hon. member: Is this in your riding?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would like to know that the other partners involved are interested in going ahead in a constructive fashion at the same time.

Mr. Speaker: I think there have been sufficient supplementaries. The hon. member for Sarnia.

Mr. Lewis: No. No.

PENALTIES UNDER THE LIQUOR LICENCE ACT

Mr. Bullbrook: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Secretary.

An hon. member: The question period has now expired.

Mr. Bullbrook: He is getting a question for a change. Can he hold out any hope for the people of Ontario that he might amend The Liquor Licence Act to do away with those stupid iniquitous penalties of $5,000 for not serving a hotdog on Sunday or permitting drunkenness? Could he help us in this respect; and if he cannot, can he persuade the Attorney General to direct the OPP to stop the vendetta against the licensees under that Act?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Order! Order!

Mr. Lewis: He is now a cabinet minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Mr. Bullbrook: The $5,000 to $25,000—

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Pilkey: It is a good question.

Mr. Speaker: I think the question as phrased—

Mr. Bullbrook: When will the government come into the twentieth century? We are here—

An hon. member: But he might not find the member there.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! I think the question as phrased was hardly a proper question, but the hon. minister may answer if he wishes. He need not, if he is not inclined to.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I will reply to the question—the matter is under review.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Renfrew South.

OHSIP COMPUTER EQUIPMENT

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the hon. Minister of Health.

Mr. Sopha: They have just rearranged the furniture.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Yakabuski: In view of the fact that the Key Edit system developed by a Canadian company, Consolidated Computer, is used extensively for processing of health insurance claims by insurance organizations in Canada, the United States, England and Germany, why has this company not been successful in selling or having OHSIP use its product instead of the American-built equipment they use today?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence: I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that that question go on the order paper.

Mr. Pilkey: Yes, I guess so.

Mr. Nixon: I would say so.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): My question, Mr. Speaker, is of the provincial Treasurer.

Mr. Sopha: Do not give up.

Mr. Pilkey: No sir, stay right with it.

FINANCIAL AID TO MUNICIPAL TRANSPORT FACILITIES

Mr. Gisborn: Would the minister inform the House of a definition of the reference in the Throne Speech to financial assistance to municipal transportation facilities?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I have no doubt that my colleague, the Minister of Highways (Mr. MacNaughton) will be giving that information to the House in due course.

Mr. Gaunt: We have lots of time.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin.

An hon. member: They have not said where they stand on the Spadina Expressway yet.

Another hon. member: Right in the middle of road.

DELAY PROCESSING ODC LOANS

Mr. S. Farquhar (Algoma-Manitoulin): I have a question of the Minister of Trade and Development, relating again to his earlier statement.

Would the minister agree that much more important than more dollars for additional plans or additional loan funds is the need to do away with the interminable delays in processing of applications for loans, usually winding up in refusals, at least, in northern Ontario—

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Minister of Highways and Transport): More appropriately, where does the member's party stand?

Mr. Singer: The minister knows where I stand.

Mr. Farquhar:—and is he taking any action with respect to the curing of this ailment in the branch?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I do not necessarily agree with the hon. member's contention that this is a very difficult problem in our department, in ODC. However, the branch is being reorganized. There is more staff going into it because of the additional programmes we have just announced today. So far as I am concerned, money is still the major factor involved.

Mr. Speaker: The question period has now expired.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, if I may.

Before you proceed, may I ask Your Honour to define as soon as you can to this House the extent to which hypothetical questions soliciting opinions—questions that are totally provocative in character, and are asked for no other purpose—may be asked; and when, Mr. Speaker, the questions soliciting answers on matters of urgent public importance are going to be the rule of this House?

Mr. Sargent: Who is the Minister to make the rules?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I am not trying to make the rules of this House on this same point. I am asking the Speaker to indicate whether he will or not.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: The minister could not run the Treasury. How can he run the Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Sopha: At the same time that you are considering those weighty and profound matters raised by the Minister of Highways and Transport, would you also consider whether his objection was stimulated by a consciousness among the ministry that they are going down the drain?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member has just proved the minister's point.

Mr. Speaker: I will certainly take both the point of order and the comment under consideration.

I might say that the standing orders of this House do clearly indicate that questions shall have some degree of urgency and shall have some degree of general public importance. I think, too, the standing orders indicate quite clearly that no facts should be stated in putting those questions, but to try to keep the oral question period strictly within the confines of the standing orders would be a very difficult thing, to say the least.

I believe the practice in the House in the past has been to permit a fairly great degree of laxity, shall we say, and latitude in putting the questions orally before these various ministers.

The hon. members themselves know full well it is their time—the three-quarters of an hour—that is being consumed if they are going to waste the time of the House with certain questions which are not proper.

I might say to the ministry that they also at the same time have the privilege of refusing to answer those questions if they think they are not proper.

I will take the entire matter under consideration and make a definite ruling at a later date.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson, from the standing committee on private bills, presented the committee's report which was read as follows and adopted:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill Pr8, An Act respecting Brock University.

Bill Pr19, An Act respecting the City of Hamilton.

Bill Pr21, An Act respecting Triangle Swine Enterprises Limited.

Bill Pr24, An Act respecting the City of Sudbury.

Your committee begs to report the following bill with a certain amendment:

Bill Pr26, An Act respecting the City of Guelph.

Your committee would recommend that the following bill be not reported:

Bill Pr12, An Act respecting the Town of Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Your committee would recommend that the fee, less the actual cost of printing, be remitted on Bill Pr8, An Act respecting Brock University.

Your committee would recommend that the following bill, having been withdrawn, be not reported and the fees be remitted:

Bill Pr5, An Act respecting the Town of St. Marys.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko presented the 1969-1970 annual report of The Ontario Department of Labour; the 1970 annual report of the Ontario Cancer Institute incorporating the Princess Margaret Hospital and the 11th annual report of the Ontario Energy Board for the year ending December 31, 1970.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I would draw to the attention of the hon. members of the House, in the event that they have not noticed it, that on their desks are three examples of the work of the community services programme as outlined in the estimate, including the important "English as a Second Language" classes within our citizenship branch: a study outlining the community information services programme and of course the expenditure relating to the Indian community projects for the year ending March 31, 1971.

Hon. Mr. Wishart, on behalf of hon. Mr. Welch, tabled the report of the study committee on recreational services of Ontario, 1970.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

USED CAR DEALERS ACT

Hon. Mr. Wishart moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Used Car Dealers Act, 1968-1969.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: The purpose of this bill is to extend the provisions of The Used Car Dealers Act of 1968-1969 to include new car dealers. As a result consumers will be in a position to seek assistance from The Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs in new car transactions regardless of whether or not a used car is involved. And I might point out to the hon. members of the House that in almost every case a used car is involved.

CROWN TIMBER ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Crown Timber Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading the bill.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to bring Crown timber on private land into Crown management units, to permit the direction of forest product cuts on licensed areas to needy industries and to add flexibility to the regulations.

ADMINISTERING OF LIE DETECTOR TESTS

Mr. Trotter moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to control the Administering of Lie Detector Tests.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Wishart: Mr. Speaker, before you call the orders of the day, I would inform the House that the Lieutenant Governor is waiting to give assent to a bill.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario entered the chamber of the legislative assembly and took his seat upon the throne.

Hon. W. Ross Macdonald (Lieutenant Governor): Pray be seated.

Mr. Speaker: May it please Your Honour, the legislative assembly of the province has, at its present sittings thereof, passed certain bills to which, in the name of and on behalf of the said legislative assembly, I respectfully request Your Honour's assent.

The Clerk Assistant: The following are the titles of the bills to which Your Honour's assent is prayed:

Bill 1, An Act to amend The Wills Act.

Bill 3, An Act to amend The County Judges Act.

Bill 4, An Act to amend The Crown Witnesses Act.

Bill 6, An Act to amend The Justices of the Peace Act.

Bill 35, An Act to amend The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Clerk of the House: In Her Majesty's name, the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor doth assent to these bills.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor was pleased to retire from the chamber.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

CORPORATIONS TAX ACT

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves second reading of Bill 26, An Act to amend The Corporations Tax Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, considerable has already been said about the principle of Bill 26 in the budget debate up until this time, and on a number of occasions apparently outside of the House when the Treasurer has attempted to defend the most important inclusion in the principle of this bill, which in fact would grant a tax credit on the basis of the corporation tax of five per cent to those corporations making investments in new machinery after the initial date. In these discussions it has become apparent that the amount of new employment that will be based on this so-called full employment budget concept would be negligible, if in fact it can be counted at all.

The commitment of $126 million that is to be infused into the corporate structure is based, really, on the philosophy of Herbert Hoover who was valiantly attempting to have the economy of the United States "turn the corner"—I believe that was the phrase—"turn the corner toward prosperity" back in 1931 and 1932. His idea at that time was to make the corporations of the United States healthy, so their prosperity would trickle down to the man in the street who was suffering so severely from the Depression.

We can thank God that our present levels of unemployment and economic underdevelopment are not nearly as severe, they tell me, as those which were experienced in those years of the "hungry Thirties." But still, the concept of trying to improve the economic circumstances by infusing special tax credit money into the corporate structure is as futile now and as misdirected now, as it was so many decades ago.

The government opposite has made much of the fact that the hon. Eric Keirans has left the federal administration on the basis that federal policy is designed to aid the corporations and not make employment for the working people in the country. I think probably the criticism, valid as it might be federally, is specifically valid to this particular section of the budget and as it is enacted in section 4 of Bill 26. This is specifically designed to invest public funds in machinery and not in employment.

Our experience in recent months and years has been that corporations are all too willing to replace their labour force—their working staff—with machines. Usually these machines are of a type that is imported from outside Canada in the first place, so that even the labour associated with the development and production of the machines themselves does not accrue to our benefit.

There is substantial detriment, as well, to the fact that making this a corporation tax credit means that other businesses do not have the advantage of the five per cent rebate if in fact they are not corporations. We were treated to an announcement today by the Minister of Trade and Development of a special fund to improve the situation of small businesses that are going to share, along with the standard EIO programme and another special venture fund, in a commitment of only $7 million.

It appears, then, that the government concern for small business, while it does appear both in the budget and in the programmes announced today, is a minimal one indeed. It amounts substantially to window dressing that in the relief associated with this five per cent tax credit, non-incorporated businesses evidently will have no share of it whatsoever.

There is also the point that in standard business practice, even in the corporations which will benefit from this five per cent credit, a review of their capital budgets normally takes place in the fall of the year, as they look toward the market prospects in the year following. This means then that decisions, while they might be speeded up by the availability of this five per cent credit, will in many cases be postponed well beyond the situation of unemployment which has concerned the government opposite and all members of the House so extensively.

The Premier himself, in the Throne Speech that was read to us by His Honour at the opening of the session, indicated how important he felt the unemployment situation was in this province. We await with a great deal of interest the Premier's own contribution to that debate, if in fact we ever return to it, although it has now been on the order paper, without debate, for many weeks.

We in the Liberal Party feel that it is a wise move for the government to make a substantial commitment in dollars to the improvement of the economy of Ontario, but we are convinced that the machinery that is brought forward in Bill 26, which will channel the $126 million into the corporate structure, is inadequate. It does not follow, let us say, the experience of this jurisdiction and other jurisdictions over the years where public policy has been designed to improve employment and economic prospects.

We feel that the commitment of these funds will not be in the best interests of the taxpayers or the citizens—the residents of this province. We intend to vote against the principle of the bill for that reason.

We think that the government opposite is using this large commitment of public funds in a way that is not going to even approach the solution of the problems which they themselves have delineated in their budget statements and in the speech from the Throne.

Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that this figure of five per cent in connection with production machinery has occurred in debates in this House over the last four years. The sales tax itself, imposed many years ago, was for a considerable length of time not applied to production machinery because it was felt that this additional tax would impede the kind of economic and industrial expansion that we would all hope for in a growing economy in this province.

As a result of some of these pressures, there was a short period when the five per cent tax was removed. I remember the fanfare of this removal, and it was supported on all sides. But it was only for a few months before the then Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton) decided that the five per cent sales tax would be reimposed, even on the types of production machinery that were designed to control pollution. There has since been a number of programmes that were designed to assist industry in purchasing and establishing the antipollution machinery that must go along with an industrialized community that is also very concerned about the quality of its environment.

The tax credit, of course, is associated only with capital expenditures, and if this bill is to be approved and accepted by the House, even though we in this party are opposed to it in principle, it may therefore have the effect of decreasing, rather than increasing, the number of jobs available, as industries convert to a more capital intensive approach to their production operations.

If there was ever a programme designed to assist those corporations which realize that it is to their benefit to get away from a labour intensive situation, this is obviously it. This is surely a misdirection of funds that should be made available by the budget that we have been debating over the last few days. The direction of these funds should be toward the improvement of the employment circumstance.

It is a shame that government policy, based on Conservative philosophy, is going to result in the rather tragic loss of the impact of this large sum of money, which is estimated will be fed into the corporate structure if this bill becomes the law of the land.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, that the government opposite will regret proceeding with the specifics of the bill. I think they are going to find themselves, if it does pass the House, that after it has been in force for a year it is not going to meet the goals they have set themselves. They are ill-advised and mis-directed in moving forward with this approach which was enunciated in the budget.

Mr. Speaker, there are other provisions in the bill that can be discussed on other occasions, and since we are discussing it in principle I will not refer to specific sections. There is one other aspect of the bill, however, that is designed to improve the opportunities that corporations would have to buy out other corporations without the control of these corporations being lost to foreign interests. That is the provision which would permit corporations to deduct the costs of these transactions from their corporate tax.

It has been pointed out by the Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) and others that this sort of a provision is standard in American corporation tax law, and that it is time that Canadians had the same advantage.

I believe it should be made abundantly clear, in the statute itself, that these provisions apply only to those corporations that are under Canadian ownership and management. I do not feel that it is clear enough in the bill that is presented to us, that this sort of an advantage for Canadian corporations will be inherent in the law which eventually we expect will be proclaimed in the province.

The government opposite has said that its aim is to provide special assistance for Canadian corporations. And in this we agree, and are prepared to support it. But surely the provisions in the actual clauses of the bill should be more specific and clear in enunciating that concept so that there will not be the additional special relief for corporations that do not fall into the category of Canadian ownership and control.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, while we have considered some alternatives, such as reference of this bill for second reading, we feel that our best approach is simply to state our disapproval of its principle and its concept and to vote against it when given that opportunity following the conclusion of the debate in the House.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough West.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It would be inappropriate for me to belabour our position on this bill further than that which we have indicated at the time of the budget reaction and subsequently in the budget speech.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that we too will oppose the bill in principle as must have become evident over the last number of days and that we will want to see the House physically divide on the bill. We think there is a matter of some considerable principle at stake: namely the willingness of the government to grant $125 million, unexpectedly and almost gratuitously, to the corporate sector which does not need that money to do that which it is already committed to do.

It is a very peculiar behaviour of government that this Tory regime is willing to give away—and that is simply what it is: an outright gift—such an astonishing amount of money to one small, unrepresentative sector of society, and at the same time to deny to the rest of the citizens of this province the tax rebates or tax credits or redistribution of wealth which might conceivably have created jobs or spurred economic growth.

In other words, of all the major reforms which the government pretended the budget contained, this was the only one which might be called major. This is the one which is also found most seriously wanting and it is one with which we cannot possibly agree.

Mr. Speaker, the opposition to it consists of many counts. I will not go into them in further detail. They are firmly on the record. But let me remind the minister, who was not a part of the extraordinary game-playing that occurred, of what followed the introduction of the budget.

The Treasurer introduced this item of the budget in a way which would have led the House to believe that $2.5 million worth of additional machinery and equipment would be stimulated by this reform. It was then discovered, on the day the budget was handed down, that the Dominion Bureau of Statistics had put out a report no more than three or four weeks ago on the extent of investment in the public and private sector which demonstrated that the purchase of machinery and equipment in Ontario, over the year 1971, would total $2,891 million.

From that we then subtracted the government and institutional categories, which amounted to $157.6 million, and on the urging of some of the government spokesmen frantically searching for an explanation, we eliminated that portion covering utilities, which amounted to $782 million, and came to a remaining figure of $1,951 million.

To that, however, we had to add in certain kinds of utilities. Having exempted Ontario Hydro, we had to add in Consumers' Gas, Union Gas and Bell Canada, all of which are corporations paying taxes in Ontario specifically designated as eligible by the government in its budget. And we had to add certain major repairs which are depreciable. Putting it all together we came up with a figure of $2,250 million worth of machinery and equipment which would have been purchased anyway. When faced with this figure, the economists on the part of the government—not the Minister of Finance or the Minister of Revenue, but the civil servants—admitted that that amount of machinery and equipment was guaranteed and that what we were really talking of was an additional $125 million tax rebate to stimulate the purchase of an additional $250 million worth of machinery and equipment. That is a dollar for a dollar.

A more generous concession to the corporate world can hardly be imagined. And when asked, as the government was frequently asked, whether this could possibly create a single additional job or whether it would be in any sense stimulating to the economy in a significant way, the government was unable to give us any information at all. In other words, the tax rebate venture was like so many other parts of the government budget—an 11th-hour decision.

It was thought at the time to be imaginative and spectacular. It turned out to be hollow and disastrous and it is obviously something which cannot possibly win the support of opposition parties in the House.

Mr. Speaker, I go further. It should not even win the support of a number of sensitive, thinking, feeling, concerned back-benchers, like the member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. R. G. Hodgson), who fits that description impeccably. It should not command the support of any of those back-benchers, Mr. Speaker, because it must surely offend some of them that the government would give away $125 million to the managerial elite, if I may use that term, in Ontario, when there are seven to seven and a half million other people seeking some benefit from this government. We therefore oppose it in principle on second reading.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Humber.

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to rise to speak on this particular matter because I thought that my leader had expressed what had to be said about it. But a phrase used by the hon. member who just sat down induced me to stand up and try to add my few words to our position.

The phrase that he used was "an outright gift" and Mr. Speaker, indeed, that is exactly what the government's action amounts to—an outright gift. The point I wish to stress in this debate is the government's false philosophy or attitude that one stimulates the economy through the increase of the purchasing power of the consumer by giving money, not to the consumer, but to big business at the top.

Somehow, they have the fallacious idea that through those means some money will finally trickle down to the little man on the street, and he will then spend this money to buy consumer goods and thereby create a market for the manufacture of more goods. Getting money into the hands of the ultimate consumer through this trickling down method, Mr. Speaker, is akin to delivering ice cubes from Algeria to Cairo by passing them hand to hand across the Sahara Desert.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener) There is really something.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Is that original?

Mr. Ben: Mr. Speaker, somehow these economists must have at one time, having been brought up in the age of the establishment in its full bloom, preached that the way to stimulate an economy was to give to the haves, so that a little bit could trickle down to the have-nots. In an era, Mr. Speaker, when all the wealth was divided between the have-alls and the have-nothings, there was a chance of it trickling down because there were no people in between with savings. But nowadays, in times of financial difficulty, simply putting money into people's hands, putting money into the hands of all the people, does not guarantee that they are going to spend that money. Some of them are going to exercise their right to do without and save that money, especially during times of Conservative rule when they can justifiably expect conditions to be still worse.

There is no guarantee the government is going to stimulate purchases by putting money into the hands of the people. Furthermore, putting money into the hands of corporations is not always a guarantee that they are going to spend it. The hon. member who preceded me, the member for Scarborough West, has already pointed out that even though the government is making this magnificent gift to big business, they will be buying no more machinery than they would have bought under normal circumstances. They are therefore getting a gift.

What guarantee is there that they will spend any of that gift? They can keep that money in the treasury as undistributed profits, or they can declare a dividend to the shareholders. If the second alternative occurs we have no guarantee that the shareholders are going to spend that money. In fact, because they are shareholders, one can logically believe that they do not have to spend the money. They have enough money for their present needs and they have money to invest.

The market being as it is these days, nobody is very anxious to invest. In all probability, that dividend cheque will just be added to the amount they already have in the bank. They will not be buying any more consumer goods.

Furthermore, being in a position to be shareholders, and having enough wealth so to do, is a pretty good indication that they certainly would not have to buy any white goods—any refrigerators, stoves, or such—because they already have those items. So there again there is no guarantee that spending will be stimulated or that purchases will be stimulated.

If the government wants to stimulate the economy by injecting money into it, the only guarantee that money will be used to do things that one can find these days is by having the government undertake a programme of public works—a programme of construction. When the government does it itself, then it knows that something is being done, but it just cannot rely on the private sector to undertake a programme of construction just to help the government get out of a financial bind.

The only way the government can ensure that the people who need spending money get spending money is to place it directly in their hands and not give it to somebody way on high, on some distant, unreachable pinnacle in the hope that, as the provincial Treasurer said, it will trickle down and then everybody will get a piece of the action. I do not buy that philosophy, Mr. Speaker. I do not care how many great and prominent economists present or past suggested that to be the solution. In this day and age, in the kind of economy we live under, it just does not hold water.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): No great economist ever did, not in the past, nor in the present, nor ever conceivably in the future.

Mr. Ben: I think, as the leader of the NDP said, it is nothing but an outright pre-election, vote-getting gift to big business in the full knowledge that the money will not trickle down to the man on the street but flow in copious quantities into the coffers of the Conservative Party in Ontario. For that reason we on this side at least will be opposing in principle this bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have to keep my remarks brief. I will try to present them in point form and say that the bill is a dismal reflection of the claims made by the Treasurer in his budget for the major tax reduction that he heralded to us in this House last week.

In the budget statement of the Treasurer he described this bill as the key initiative in the budget to stimulate revival of economic growth. He went on to describe it as a major move. He called it a massive stimulus to business investment, he said it would relieve inflationary bottlenecks and, finally, he called it a major new incentive. The effect of the bill is to reduce taxation of corporations in the province by an estimated $125 million.

One of the other things the Treasurer went on to give great stress to in his budget paper A, in which he discusses economic policy management, was what he calls the tax drag on the Ontario economy imposed by the federal government, and I quote that section:

The federal government continually runs a full-employment surplus in Ontario. Since 1962 the federal surplus has increased rapidly. It has also grown relatively faster than potential gross provincial product. By 1969 it had increased to $1.5 billion or 4.5 per cent of potential gross provincial product.

And all of that buildup in the Treasurer's statement which was read in this House—the statement which precedes budget paper A in the budget book—was designed and described to us as a major offset of that federal tax drag. What we have, therefore, by way of contrast in the figures at least, is a $1.5-billion federal drag on the economy of Ontario offset by a puny $125 million. I do not necessarily accept the analysis that is set out in budget paper A, but the government at least has done very little to counter or offset what they describe as one of the major holdbacks to expansion in the Ontario economy.

The Economic Council of Canada, in its latest report, its seventh annual review released last fall, pointed out that the goods-producing industries—these are the industries which invest in machinery for which the tax-credit is most likely to be given—have experienced no change whatever in unemployment in the past 20 years, at least insofar as its share of total employment in Canada is concerned. About one-third of employment in the country 20 years ago was accounted for by the goods-producing industries, and at the end of the period being examined by the Economic Council that proportion was still about one-third.

In the mining field, in which there is a great deal of investment in machinery and equipment, the Economic Council pointed out that there was extremely rapid growth in production but there was no increase in employment up to 1968, although investment per person employed had risen four times; employment in the decade of the Seventies was not expected to increase in mining at all.

So that in terms of being a stimulus to employment, the tax reduction provided in this bill in a large sector of the economy—mining—will be of little effect; and in the most employment-active part of the manufacturing sector, the goods-producing industries, it is not likely to prove of much benefit either. For most of those persons who risk unemployment there is little likelihood that jobs will be opened up for them by these measures, Mr. Speaker.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics labour force survey for the beginning of this year showed that across Canada young persons 14 to 24 years of age accounted for 45 per cent of the total unemployed, and 43 per cent in the year before. So their proportion of the total unemployed in this country has been rising, and it has been rising faster than the overall increase in unemployment in recent months.

It is this same group, Mr. Speaker, that will have the least opportunity for employment in the goods-producing industries. Probably the opportunities for employment for these young people lie more in the service-producing industries than in manufacturing, because as we have stressed several times in this debate, and the leader of the New Democratic Party has stressed in his budget address, large amounts of investment are being made these days, but are opening up very few jobs.

One particularly striking instance that comes to my mind from a visit I made to the town of Fort Frances some weeks ago is that when when the Boise Cascade Kraft mill is completed, at a cost of $45 million, there will be approximately some 67 new jobs created for that $45 million investment. Some of those 67 new jobs are going to be jobs transferred from another division of the company, the Ontario-Minnesota Paper Company in Fort Frances, where, because of other investments in modernization, jobs will be lost.

So, as an employment stimulating measure, the bill before us, Mr. Speaker, will fail. It would have been much better had the same amount approximately, of tax loss been put on the consumption side of the provincial balance sheet rather than on the investment side. The result would have been more certain and it would have been more immediate.

For these reasons, also, Mr. Speaker, we will oppose the bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, nowhere will this bill be greeted with greater enthusiasm than in the mining industry. In vigorously opposing this bill, one is entitled to wonder aloud just what the quantum of the contribution, which will be made in the election campaign by the International Nickel Company to the Conservative Party, will be.

One would wonder how much those Texas millionaires that control and operate Falconbridge Nickel Mines, how much their largess will be translated into coin of the realm. In respect of Inco, I would be surprised if they give less than $100,000. I would think they would be pikers if the Conservative war chest got less than $100,000 from the International Nickel Company of Canada. That is a guess, but it is a fairly shrewd one.

Falconbridge, the little brother, which in the Sudbury basin is usually related as one is to four—it is one-quarter of the size of Inco—would probably give one-quarter of that amount.

It is amazing, as one contemplates the world about one, how solicitous, how grandiosely solicitous governments are for the captains of industry. You can have royal commissions report by the scores and most of them will gather dust on the back shelves of some cellar, in some legislative archive somewhere. But let there be a royal commission on the banks, as there was headed by a former Chief Justice of Ontario, and government members break their necks and catapult over one another in a great frenzy to get the recommendations translated into legislative form.

So it was with the ceiling on bank interest. The historian Brebner said, in a phrase of such delicacy that I always relish his words, that the poor very seldom get into the office of a Prime Minister but his office is always open to the president of the CPR. So has been the syndrome of the history of this country. Once again this minister, in initiating this piece of legislation, gives a bonanza to those who scarcely need it.

Eric Kierans last Sunday night on television pointed out that in the mining industry only 16 per cent of the profits are liable to taxation. I almost weep when I file my own income tax returns and I see the bite that they take out of me; I weep against the knowledge of the wide-ranging tax concessions that we give to the mining industry: depletion allowances, capital costs allowance, write-offs of every nature. And yet the Financial Post and the Globe and Mail—which is the same thing; the Financial Post and the Globe and Mail is the same publication—they use the rhetoric of 52 per cent corporation taxes, and say: "Is it not horrendous, it is not terrible, 52 per cent of our profit."

I am a student of corporate reports. I have yet to pick up a corporate report which shows the provision for taxes to come anywhere near 52 per cent. The human being of course, has not got the depletion allowance though his body is wasting as he leaves the middle years, as he gets on the north side of 50. He has no such provision. He has not got the capital cost allowances, he has not even got the travel expenses. He has not got all these garnishments that the corporate structure have in order to lessen their tax liability.

Ultimately it has been said, and very accurately, that the corporate structure pays no taxes at all. If you think about it for a moment you see the validity of that proposition. They do not pay any taxes. Human beings and only human beings pay taxes.

The corporate structure is a tax-gathering arm of the corporate state. It is an agent of the state, to gather taxes from the consumers of the product and the price of the product is a reflection of the tax burden, and in that sense they do not pay any taxes at all.

Well, I have looked at Inco's annual report; let us see if I can summon up the figures. They made something like $900 million after all their expenses. They paid something like $40 million in taxes. Somebody can work out that percentage. Then, of course, in the annual report they list all the allowances that they have.

So does Inco, one of the giants, one of the great, one of the most intelligent corporations, does it need the lousy five per cent that this government is offering them?

On another and more important side, of course, nowhere will greater anxiety be created than among those who work in the mines, those who toil in the ground in order to create Inco's vast profits. The United Steelworkers of America in Sudbury have been conscious for a long time that automation is overtaking them, that there is a viable threat to their jobs, the jobs of those for whom they are the stewards, as a result of the employment of sophisticated technology underground. Is that the kind of thing that this government wants to foster? Does it want less people working in the extraction of that wonderful resource that a bountiful providence has endowed upon the people of this province?

Is that the government's intention?

I represent perhaps the only community in Ontario where presently, today, there is full employment. I can think of none other. We do not have those anxieties, the stresses that inflict themselves upon other communities where the breadwinner is without work. Is it the intention to reduce that level of employment?

They have adapted a drill that is four feet wide and can drill a manhole through the hardest rock in the world; They have elaborate mucking machines; they have all sorts of aids in the extraction of the ores. Do they need an additional five per cent, that aggressive company that has had the midas touch, that has been able to turn out millions of dollars of profit with great skill and dexterity? It is very questionable to me whether that type of economic reform, so-called stimulus, is appropriate to the climate of our times.

Yet one must stand back in admiration of the gall of the barons of the mighty industry. One must admire them. They realize the extent of the tax concessions they get in this country. They are mindful of them.

They know if Falconbridge stock sells at $150 a share, if you want a share, Mr. Speaker, give your broker $155 and he would probably want 10 on the top for the privilege of buying it for you.

There is Inco now, with 80 million shares plus in the hands of the public; it sells at something around $42. The vast dividends; oh, vast dividends that they paid out over the years!

Dome Mines—let me pause for a minute—Dome Mines, there is a tremendous example. Some day I am going to look up and see, since its initiation, how much in dividends Dome Mines of Timmins has paid out. It is in the tens of millions of dollars. It must be something of upwards of $50 millions in dividends it has paid out. Yet until the inauguration of the Canada Pension Plan, it did not even have a pension for its employees.

In the whole of Ontario, until the inauguration of the Canada Pension Plan only two mining companies had pensions—Inco and Falconbridge. After 35 or 40 years of work, getting the sweat and energy of the workers, they tossed them out on the scrap heap.

Ten years from now, I predict, our young will look back on these decades of the twentieth century and they will wonder if the society was rational. They will wonder if we were kooky. With the vast wealth from our great natural resources that we put in the hands of a few, whether we had our wits about us. That is vital to the principle of this bill.

What moral right, I ask in this, the most important place in Ontario, what moral right has Stephen Roman to sequester to himself upwards of $40 million from our uranium resources and for him to say: "That is mine. The rest of you stay away." What moral right has Joe Hirshhorn got to hold up the American Congress to build him a monument next to the Lincoln Memorial to house his $25 million art collection which he summoned to his side out of our uranium resources? Joe Hirshhorn, who probably does not know a Rembrandt from the south end of a bull going north. What right has he got?

Look at the list of them. The Hollingers, the Timmins', Harry Oakes, the Bickells, W. H. Wright, who bought the Globe and Mail and gave it to George McCullagh out of our gold resources in northern Ontario. Of all the egotism—not a strong enough word—egotism, self-indulgence, unbridled and unrestrained, that the few could come along to our resources and say, because of the management skills, of the expertise, of the organization of the capital, "They belong to us. They are ours."

Now if you took all those things together—all those management skills—if you took them all together and you wanted to come to a fair figure to pay them for their efforts, if you gave them a million dollars they would be overpaid. They would be overpaid for a lifetime of work.

And yet this bill, unmindful of the fact that the mining industry is already satiated with tax concessions, such as the force-fed geese the Bourbon kings used to rear for their own appetite, this bill wants to give them yet another one. You have to admire their gall.

Comes to my desk just this morning the report of the directors of the Ontario Mining Association for 1970-1971—just this morning—where they say this:

The Ontario Mining Association continues in the belief expressed in a brief to the Prime Minister of Ontario respecting the anticipated effects on Ontario's economy of implementation of the white paper proposals. It was stated:

"The white paper provisions are not likely to cause an early cessation of mining, nor even an ostensible drastic change in the operation of mines. The effect, in all probability, will not be apparent for five to 10 years, when the lack of incentives will have curtailed exploration that is needed to maintain sources of mineral supply, which will not have been found. It is to be sincerely hoped that that anticipated tax legislation will neither penalize nor discourage the risk-taking inherent in the mining industry to the detriment of Canada's economic future."

You have to admire their gall!

As the Duke of Wellington said to the man who said to him, "Good morning, Mr. Smith"; "If you can believe that, you can believe anything."

They say there is a danger—you see the basis they put it on—there is a danger that the tax programme will affect incentive in the exploitation of our natural resources.

Mr. Speaker, the truth is that the greedy jaws of that American eagle to the south of us, the greedy guts of the American eagle, will ensure the continued exploitation of our mineral resources for two major reasons. One, they need it in their elaborate manufacturing system. The other reason is it is handy. We are next door, where our mineral resources in the raw state may be readily transported to feed the insatiable appetite of their manufacturing economy.

The mining association need have no fear of any diminution in the exploitation of mineral resources in this country. And yet, the same mining association, of course, every year they publish a brochure which, unhappily and depressingly, comes to my desk where they are falling over themselves with joy that we manage to export $4 billion of minerals in the raw state each year—$4 billion. They think that is a mark of achievement. I happen to think that it is the gloomier and seamier side of the organization of our economy and, as Mr. Kierans aptly pointed out Sunday, the continued exploitation and sale of mineral resources in the raw state ensures that there will be a diminishing labour content in the future.

So I ask, do they need a tax concession such as this will give them? Certainly not, they are already surfeited with tax allowances.

As for the poor mines, the poorer mines, the exploitation of gold bearing deposits, the moral value of which is questionable—fortunately the hon. member from Timmins, the member for Cochrane South, is absent. One wonders why we still mine gold. But for them the federal government has an independent programme called the EMGA, which again was a great concession.

I said before in the House—there may be some newcomers who did not hear me say it; it might bear repeating—that there is one group, the Little Longlac group, that managed to accumulate over the years $13 million from EMGA—Emergency Gold Mine Assessments. They attempted to use the $13 million to buy a gas company, Northern Ontario Natural Gas. So apart from the assistance to them in continuing mining development for gold, they felt the Canadian people owed them the bonus of a natural gas company. They were forestalled in that by Power Corporation and United Accumulative Fund.

Well Mr. Speaker, that has been a syndrome of our life in the seven decades of the twentieth century—the giving of wealth to the few. The rich get richer and the poor get poorer. But the poor have no spokesman. They are inarticulate. They have recently been deserted by our friends to the left in their striving to become respectable. They are all working like corporate executives now. You look at that fellow McDermott of the United Auto Workers and he might be taken as a vice-president of IBM, unless he showed you his card. It is a mad scramble for respectability in which they are engaged.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): He is doing a hell of a lot more for people than the Liberal Party is doing.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): I thought the hon. member was over picketing in Detroit.

Mr. Sopha: I say to my friend, the Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs (Mr. Wishart), it was the only convention ever held in the history of Canada—

Mr. Pilkey: They are doing a lot more for people than the Liberals who created unemployment.

Mr. Sopha: —where they had to call the police to keep order. Laxer was lucky to escape with his life.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Is that right? Does the hon. member believe in capital punishment?

Mr. Sopha: The fact is that the poor are inarticulate. There are never any briefs for them. They have no spokesman.

Mr. J. Renwick (Riverdale): We are the only ones who speak for them.

Mr. Sopha: They have no highly paid lawyers. They are not at the sessions where these things are ordained. And of course to state that fact means to herald what is going to happen in this decade, because governments can no longer get away with this. Out there on the street corners, in the country stores of this nation, there is a growing consciousness that this type of concession, this unjustified gift to the few, no longer suits the temper of the times.

So I say, for those two major reasons and especially for the reason that I would betray the stewardship of the people I represent here if I did not take the opportunity to call to the attention of the House that this type of legislation poses a great and present threat to the continued prosperity of the Sudbury basin and that it might very well mean a diminution in the number of jobs that are available.

I also point out to this minister that whereas he thinks it is great largess against the ringing praises of the Treasurer as he introduced it—you will recall some of them, “surrounding a syndrome of stimulus to employment” and that type of thing—there is another and grave side of the picture to this, whereas the attempted cure might prove worse than the disease it is attempting to effect a remedy for. For those reasons and for the rest of the reasons, I put, I find that to be responsible at all I must be in my place at the time the division bells ring in order to vote against this statute. We cannot get a crowd. We cannot get the ear of the Treasurer, the man responsible for the initiation—we cannot get his ear. The Premier, of course—that is another thing; I am going to do a study some day soon of why the Premier leaves at the end of question period. We just cannot get his presence.

But we are going to get them all in here when the division bells ring. We will get them in then. They will have to stand in their place in order to justify to the people they represent in their own consciences why they would support this legislation. They will come in like the sheep that they are—oblivious, unmindful, with a consummate mindlessness about the nature of the debate. Some of those backbenchers, they would not need a brain at all; all they need is a pair of legs to walk in. They will come in and the party whip, the member for Victoria-Haliburton, will tell them we are voting for this.

An hon. member: The former whip!

Mr. Sopha: I meant the former whip.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I am no longer the whip. I have not been for well over a year and a half.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): Is there one?

Mr. Breithaupt: He does not want to take any blame.

Mr. Sopha: I was not surprised at that, and a lot of other things that are going to happen to the member for his support of the Attorney General and Minister of Justice (Mr. A. F. Lawrence). That is only the beginning.

Hon. E. Dunlop (Minister without Portfolio): He had not been for a year and a half, he said.

Mr. Sopha: All right. I resume my seat in saying that I am one of those residents of this country. I am one who is developing an increasing ire against this type of thing and this obscenecy of this place and its government and the people who wield power in this province to those that inhabit those tall buildings on Bay and University, and the granting of concessions to them. I have said many times, many times, and it has never been disputed, that those buildings downtown are a reflection in physical form of the wealth that we produce in northern Ontario. That is how they were created and that is how they were paid for. There is nothing in this budget for the low-income earner—two sentences about the development of northern Ontario, two sentences and nothing else. Yet with indecent haste the new Minister of Revenue comes in here in order to persuade this place to adopt its usual stance of subservience to those in the corporate world that wield the real power in the economy.

Mr. Breithaupt: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Speaker, I must admit personally I enjoyed the last talk as the member for Sudbury railed against the corporate sector. For a while, I thought he was running for the leadership of the Waffle group within our party.

Mr. R. M. Johnston (St. Catharines): Elmer the Waffler! There is a departure.

Mr. Makarchuk: However, in reality, Mr. Speaker, I notice that with regard to the people he was railing against, the people sitting on the other side, in Manitoba they are joining hands. Even in Brant county, where we have a by-election, we had a Tory candidate phone me Saturday morning. He is—shall we say, in the character of George Grant—and he says: "I am going to run because a local Tory candidate was anointed. The federal vote is going to go to the Liberal candidate and, then when the provincial election comes, we are going to switch to the Tory candidate."

Incidentally, it is in the leader of the Liberal Party's own wigwam where this is happening.

Mr. Sopha: The member knows the Tory party will not be back.

Mr. Makarchuk: I may add that with the great concern expressed about International Nickel and Falconbridge, Mr. Speaker, I am sure they will make contributions to the Liberal Party as well as the Conservatives. So on the one hand, it is nice to hear this but, on the other there is the reality, and it has no relation to what is being said over here.

To the principle of the bill, Mr. Speaker, that we can provide jobs in Ontario, there are things that certainly can be done but it is not going to be done by the handing over of $125 million to the industry, to the corporate sector.

If the minister was really concerned about it, he could have insisted on giving $125 million in either direct or indirect grants, or loans, to the service industry, to the tourist industry. These are the industries that have a high labour content. As it is, the minister gives the tourist industry a promise that he is going to hand out $1 million, whereas the other industries get $125 million.

Now I am sure the multiplier effect in the service industry, or the amount of money or the amount of jobs that would have been generated if that money went into either the tourist industries or the service industries or even into the public sector, as an example in the expansion of the facilities of the hospital at Orillia or building another similar institution in Orillia, the government would have created many more jobs with a greater benefit to the people of Ontario than what it is doing now.

If the government is going to give it, and it is going to give it to the industrial sector, perhaps it could have insisted that it goes only to secondary industries or industries that are involved in manufacturing, and not into the primary industries. These, of course, have a higher job content and this is what the concern is all about.

The government could have put the $125 million into housing itself. In looking at it in terms excluding the land costs, it is found that $125 million will build something roughly like 8,000 housing units which would provide—using the government's own multiplier effect—roughly 32,000 jobs. There is a definite way in which this money could have been spent to ensure or reduce the level of unemployment in the province.

It was available to the government. They could have done it and they refused to act because it goes against some kind of principle, some kind of grain. I am not sure. Basically, the matter is that the government is not really concerned about those people out there right now who do not have work. It does not really have any empathy for them.

The government should bear in mind, Mr. Speaker, that just about every civilized western nation, with the exclusion of Canada and the United States, has managed to cope with the problem of unemployment. We hear great complaints about the mismanagement in Britain, about the great problems in Britain, and yet if one looks at their unemployment they see it is 3 per cent.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Look at Scotland!

Mr. Makarchuk: Yes. Look at Scotland.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): The member must not get pushy.

Mr. Makarchuk: This is a depressed area, Mr. Chairman. I am glad the member brought it up. In the depressed areas of Britain, unemployment has reached the level of 4.7 per cent. But the point is they are not even sitting there and the national average is below 3 per cent. Look at Sweden? Look at Germany? Look at Holland and Denmark or Switzerland where they have an over-employment problem. Now, they are using certain economic techniques that are available to us here in Ontario and we could use them too.

Furthermore, we should bear in mind that most of these countries do not have the natural resources or the power available to them that we have here. We have numerous advantages. Again, it is a matter of economics. It is a matter of government planning. It is a matter of government intervention into the functioning of private enterprise and the government is not prepared to do this thing.

They are prepared to let those people be out of work, and what they are doing is sort of paying lip service. They are looking for headlines in the press and hopefully, through deception, they hope to get themselves re-elected. Well, they are wrong there, because the people are not buying that kind of garbage any more.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Kitchener.

Mr. Breithaupt: Mr. Speaker, I was interested, first of all, in looking at and reviewing the comments that were made in the budget speech by the provincial Treasurer, when he said on page 25: "This tax credit approach to stimulating investment, economic growth and job opportunities in Ontario, has major advantages over alternative measures." I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that this approach will do neither one, nor any one of the three things which the provincial Treasurer said it would do.

It seems apparent that we have here a provision in the granting of this five per cent investment tax credit that is nothing more than a political football. We saw the retail sales tax imposed on production machinery and equipment. We were told that this was going to be in order to make sure that this government was covering all the areas available to it equitably, but the end result was that after a year the reasons why the tax did not work that were pointed out in the debate on that bill, proved, in fact, to be true.

The tax was taken off initially. It was then reimposed, and of course finally we are back to the same situation as we were then. We have a government that is unable to plan in advance the results of the taxes which it does choose to impose.

This tax credit does nothing for unincorporated businesses and I think that that should be made apparent to the perhaps some 21 government members who are over there now.

You know it was interesting to me this afternoon, during this debate to watch the government benches fill up so rapidly. There are three times as many as there were at the start of the debate because only seven were in their places, seven out of 68. Seven persons who are involved, at least, in listening to the reasons why this is bad legislation.

When the division bells ring, the back-benchers will come in and pound their desks like trained seals as soon as the magic words 'small business' may be heard. Indeed, their response, as they yelp and almost salivate to those words, would delight the mind and work of Pavlov himself.

So of these members who mouth a certain interest in small business, we have in effect seen the real background of the government that they supposedly support. That government is prepared to grant in this tax credit situation a benefit not to the unincorporated small businessman, not to the individual taxpayer but rather in an archaic view of economic policies, this government is prepared to let these benefits trickle down supposedly, so that eventually persons other than their immediate friends will receive some benefits.

We are well aware, Mr. Speaker, that most of the corporations do not review their capital budgets until the fall of the year. The decisions to acquire new machinery and equipment are not going to be made until that time so the effects of this credit are not going to be felt until 1972.

The provincial Treasurer in his earlier comments gave us some idea as to what really was behind the kind of window-dressing that this bill represents. He admitted under certain questioning that in fact most of the equipment that was going to be purchased and for which these rebates were planned, was going to be purchased anyway. We were giving a benefit to people who did not need it for something they were already prepared to do.

We were giving a benefit to people who, as has been pointed out, might well choose to make political contributions when, in fact, they did not really need that additional credit.

They were going to spend this money. They were going to invest these $5 billion over the next two years, and this whole abeyance of tax, of up to $125 million for each of these two years, was in fact a gift. A gift perhaps with strings attached. Only time will tell that.

To make the benefits of this kind of incentive available to unincorporated as well as incorporated businesses, would have been an intelligent thing to do. It obviously has not happened and the government ought to remove the retail sales tax from production machinery, rather than give this kind of a credit approach.

I was interested in looking at the budget paper A, dealing with economic policy management and when it appears as appendix B to the budget, I would point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that it refers generally to the outlook for 1971, and if you look with me at page 161 of this budget, this is what it says:

Almost 100,000 new jobs must be created in 1971 to absorb the normal increase in the labour force. However, to reduce the unemployment rate to three per cent or less will require the creation of 150,000 new jobs.

Well these are the government's own figures. These are the figures that they see are going to be required in order to take care, not only of problems of economic growth, but also of problems of seasonal and technological unemployment.

But what in fact does this piece of legislation do? Admissions have been made in this House, not only by the provincial Treasurer, that in fact there is no real knowledge as to how many individual jobs may be created by this legislation. The credit extends to equipment which has to be in place and in use by March 31, 1973. This deadline is going to be too late and is certainly going to result in the fires of inflation being further fuelled, as inflation may well be the problem in the next fiscal year.

What this government could have done was to have stimulated the construction industry, which is relatively labour intensive. The government could have, and indeed should have, removed the retail sales tax from building materials—and I might add should have encouraged the federal government to do the same.

The credit of five per cent will not help smaller companies who cannot rely on internal sources of financing from their returned earnings. These are the companies that have to go to financial institutions with rates of eight or nine or 10 per cent. These are the institutions which are going to be requiring additional benefits and guarantees, additional burdens and participations, and five per cent here and there; and these are the institutions which are in fact not going to be giving the kind of credit financing which is necessary to allow smaller industries, whether they are incorporated or not, to grow as they should.

Well the tax credit is one for capital expenditures. I think that this tax credit is going to have an actual affect of decreasing, rather than increasing, the number of jobs available.

We have seen industries converting to more capital intensive and less labour intensive methods. The member for Sudbury has pointed out his own personal experience and knowledge in the development of mining equipment. We have been told about the various other kinds of labour-saving devices, as they are called, and these kinds of devices which this particular bill is going to favour are not going to be providing the additional jobs which this budget says are necessary within the province. We require more assistance of course, to industry. But the industry that we must be assisting is labour-intensive industry.

There are four good reasons why this is a bad bill. The first one is that it is only granting benefits to incorporated organizations—corporations. It is not giving anything to the small businessmen this government says it favours.

Secondly, it is providing a benefit as a tax allowance to people who already were prepared to spend this money and develop these kinds of programmes over the next two years. It is, therefore, a free gift of the taxpayers' funds, and is not needed in any way to effectively stimulate the economy.

Thirdly, we are seeing machinery being purchased and in place over this two-year term, but there is no requirement that this machinery have any particular Canadian content. We are not seeing in any way Canadian manufacturers being positively stimulated to develop their own kinds of programmes and growth, so that in effect they can give benefits to other Canadians who are purchasing equipment.

And fourth, and indeed by far the most important, the failure is clear here that jobs which are badly needed within our provincial economy will not be provided by this bill. There is no point in pretending otherwise. The press have seen through the fiasco of job development that was called for in the housing promises in the Throne debate. The public have seen through it, too, and I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that the press and the public as well will see through this kind of an approach which is an ineffective and foolish way to attempt to stimulate the economy. I have given the minister four reasons why this is a bad bill. I believe every one of them is valid and because of every one of them I will oppose the bill.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Wentworth.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As was said by my leader, we will oppose the bill and I do not think it comes as any surprise to the minister. I am sure he recognized on the day that the budget was brought down, that the measures which he was proposing were not acceptable to us; that we felt that if it was the opinion and desire of the government to stimulate the economy that this ought to have been done by other, what we consider to be more constructive, measures, the likes of which might have been the reduction of the sales tax.

We feel, quite frankly, in looking at the measures that are being taken by the government, and I mentioned it to the Treasurer some time ago, that it is a disturbing fact that the Province of Ontario is relying less and less on corporation tax as a major source of tax revenue. This year, they have reduced from 11 to eight per cent that portion of the total tax revenue of the province which will be required to be paid by corporations, while at the same time increasing the individual income tax by one percentage point in the total tax revenue. It is further disturbing that corporation tax has sunk to such a level that we now raise more money in this province from medical-care premiums than we raise from the corporate sector as its share of the total cost of operating in the province of Ontario. It is a statement for all to see in the Ontario budget, that in the year 1970-1971 corporation tax accounted for $414 million; this year it is projected that corporation tax will account for $290 million.

It strikes me as odd that the minister should decide at this point to remove the five per cent tax on machinery, which is the equivalent of $125 million, which just happens to be the exact similar amount that the corporations sector will not be expected to pay this year, which shows to me that the government has very little faith in the growth of the Province of Ontario. If you take a look at the two figures you find that the difference between what we raised in corporation tax last year and what is projected to be raised this year is $124 million. It shows pretty clearly that this government does not believe that this supposed stimulus of $125 million is going to produce one penny more in total profit to the corporations of the Province of Ontario, because if it were, we would then have shown, as a result of that, additional taxes via corporation tax. It is quite obvious that this is then, simply, a handout.

Now, it could be argued, or it might have been argued, or it might even have been supposed by some, that the reason for having done this was a decline in corporation profit to a level where this particular refund was necessary.

I want to say to the minister that in the year 1967 we derived something in the order of approximately $200 million from the corporation tax, and in the year 1967 corporation profits, before taxes—this is a total national figure, so I cannot be entirely sure how much of it is applicable to Ontario, but I suspect a considerable portion—in the year 1967 corporation profits, before taxes, was $6,774 million. In that year we in the Province of Ontario received slightly less than $200 million from corporation tax.

This last year, 1970, corporation profits in Canada—and I again suspect similar profits would show in the Province of Ontario—were $7,364 million and in this year we are going to receive an amount similar to the amount we received in 1967. It is not because of the inability of the corporations to pay, therefore, that the government is in the process of reducing the amount that they must be, by tax, forced to contribute to the overall economy of this province; and if it is not for that reason, then it must simply be because of favour, because there can be no other.

The two obvious things to look for are an indication that this expenditure by the people of the province will derive some return—and there is no indication in the budget projections of that; or that the corporation profits have so diminished that it is necessary for us to take these steps—and there is no indication of that.

Now if we had, as a province, wanted to take some steps to preserve and to ensure the people of this province some opportunity of increased purchasing power, then we could have used this $125 million to subsidize the incomes of the aged, to bring them into line with at least a reasonable standard of living; but no, no, we do not do those things; that is unacceptable to this government. We might have reduced the retail sales tax by a percentage point or two in some way and use all of this and perhaps even more to reduce that and to allow people to have more money to spend and stimulate the economy; but that is unacceptable to the government. I seriously wonder, in reading over the budget paper, the philosophy behind this particular taxing move and the intent that was expressed by this government as to what this was intended to do, whether it was very clearly thought out.

I can see no earthly reason why the individual taxpayers of this province should be expected to contribute additional moneys to the operation of this province when the corporate sector is going to get a rebate of about 30 or better than 30 per cent of what they previously paid, and I suggest to the minister that this is not acceptable to the people of this province and not acceptable to this party.

It is time that we took a realistic approach to the providing of funds for the operation of this province and it is time that we insisted that every sector of the province contribute in accordance with its ability. It is perfectly clear from the statistics available that the corporate sector is able at this time to continue to contribute at least at the level that it previously contributed and perhaps even more.

It is also perfectly clear at this time, if you care to look at the increasing tax burden on the individual in the Province of Ontario, that the individual can no longer absorb additional costs and what I say to you is this: that at some point after the forthcoming election, I feel sure that if the Conservative government were to be returned to office, they would feel it necessary to recover that $125 million and more from the economy and that this would not be done by increasing the burden on the corporate sector but rather would be transferred to the individual taxpayer, to the retail sales tax, to the gasoline tax, to the medical care premiums and to the liquor taxes. And I suggest to the minister that the people of this province and the people in this party are not going to abide by this. This is not how one deals with the difficulty of putting money into the economy. If you want to have people living a reasonable existence, if you want to have them with sufficient expendable incomes, then you have to meet the problems of the everyday man in the street rather than the problem of the corporate magnate, and that is exactly what is being done and we will oppose this legislation.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, there are a few points I would like to make in rising to oppose this bill. First of all, I think we should remember in the discussion of this bill that the Treasurer's statement was that he and his government are interested in the production of the industries of this province, and that the need to make Ontario competitive on the foreign markets was one of the basic reasons he gave for using this type of tax credit to stimulate the economy. Well, this is perhaps a noble intention and indeed, we do not have to hesitate in saying that we are all interested in developing good export markets.

However, I think we must look at some of the statistics and some of the figures over the past year to see, indeed, where the problem exactly is.

The gross provincial product in Ontario rose from $32.5 billion to $35 billion in 1969 to 1970, an increase of 7.8 per cent. So our productivity has gone up by 7.8 per cent. Increased production is where the Treasurer put his emphasis at the time this was introduced. In my view, the production capability in the Province of Ontario is already here. There are many plants working on short hours at the present time. Some have not called back all the people whom they have laid off in the last six months and consequently we find that short-shifts are the order of the day in many production plants.

If people are working on shorter hours, the production capability is not being used to its full potential. Indeed, there is need for some stimulation so that these people can work full lengths of hours. So let us look at our export markets in the past year. In 1969, the exports from the Province of Ontario were $6.85 billion. They rose in 1970 to $7.7 billion, so our export market actually increased by 13 per cent as our unemployment rate went up, in Ontario, from 3.1 per cent to something over four per cent of unemployment—4.3 per cent.

In my view, the problem is not in the need for increased production for the export market but in the inability of the consumer to have the money at his disposal to buy consumer products here in the Province of Ontario.

I think a very good example of where the problem really is was in the explanation given to the members who visited north-western Ontario in the legislative tour a few years ago. It was in a sawmill operation, I believe, Kimberly-Clark's operation at Sioux Lookout. There, the manager of the operation told us that his operation, presently, was very marginal. The profit was not up to company expectations. They employed 100 people at that particular sawmill. He told us that as soon as the money was available and it was economically feasible, they must automate the production and they could then run the plant with 25 employees instead of 100 employees. The other alternative was to close it down completely and put 100 people out of work.

As long as the operation is marginal and showing a small profit, they are keeping the 100 employees. Now, this device put forth by the government here may well be the straw which will allow them to automate that operation and reduce their employees from 100 to 25. This is not, in my view, the type of stimulation that this government should be giving to big industry.

The problem, of course, is that the labour force increased by 99,000 last year when only 60,000 new jobs were available. So we have 39,000 people who are without work because of the fact that the labour content in all types of manufacturing in particular is going down and down while the capital content is going up. So it would seem most reasonable that anyone thinking of this situation in terms of production and labour content in production realizes that the temporary measure that is needed to get the economy going is increased consumer purchasing power, not increased production power. The potential production is already there.

What we need is a short-term measure of increased purchasing power by the public. This, as has been stated by others on this side, would well have been accomplished through stimulating the economy basically—first, I would say, in the field of housing.

Housing is a high-labour content proposition and would have created many jobs as well as eliminating one of the great social needs in our province.

Mr. Speaker, I just cannot understand the reasoning behind this government other than that one can surmise that the people who are very pleased with this type of legislation are the corporate citizens in our huge corporations, the Bay Street gang and basically the entrenched, staunch Tory voter in this province think this is great. Here is their chance to buy a new machine and it is only going to cost 95 cents on the dollar. I am certain that the people of Ontario will not benefit from this within the next short term interval when it is needed so greatly. Consequently, I also oppose this bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: This government is in the process of stripping itself of numerous tax fields, imposing no taxes in fields where it would be viable and worthwhile, such as gift tax and in the area of capital gains. It has historically seen fit, whereas in the old days even municipalities had the right to personal income tax, it latterly turned over its power, and bound its hands and feet too in the process of turning over to the federal government its full implementation and the power of personal taxation.

It has always jealously guarded one area of taxation over against all the rest and that was corporation tax, and I think it is wise that it should do so. But it has apparently only guarded it, not stripped itself of it, in order only to diminish its impact and its role in this particular area. Rather than have the federal government phase it out, it is phasing it out gradually itself.

History was presented in figures given the other night. It is down to eight per cent of the total budget picture, whereas it played a significant part—as a matter of fact it was probably the single most important tax in this economy not very many years ago. The tax is being used as housing had been used by the federal government under this particular legislation, by way of a roller coaster effect touching the imposition, withdrawal and reimposition, played over against the production and machinery tax, which we argued against, and as the then minister (Mr. White) argued against in the teeth.

Any authority and every man who knows anything about the impositions of these forms of taxation insisted in effect what you are doing here, sir, at least to a considerable point, is cancelling out through this legislation the very thing that you imposed. As I say in the teeth of all common sense, right reason and scientific authority, a year or so ago. In other words, there is an internal division inside the government here, an inability to rationalize, an inability not to contradict itself, an inability to bring some kind of logic and intelligence to the tax structure of the province.

This move, in the direction which it has taken, and the alleviation to the corporations of this five per cent break bespeaks this particular kind of illogicality. It goes further, I have heard government members boast about the tax and accept it in terms of, for instance, pollution control. They say that the five per cent production machinery alleviation of a year or so ago is now being given a greater scope under the terms of this taxation.

I doubt first of all whether that is true. Secondly, the original tax and the alleviation to industry in this particular regard was deemed sufficient unto the day and that the need was met, having given the particular tax relief under earlier legislation with respect to waste management and with respect to putting in anti-pollution equipment. This is a gratuity, a complete gratuity over and above, which will not filter down to the total population but would be really lost.

In sitting down, Mr. Speaker, may I say in final plea, does the Minister of Revenue, in his wisdom and having explored and analysed the full impact of taxation, with all that it means in terms of garnering in the loot, do not he and his government wish that they had been half as imaginative and half as decent in terms of equity as the tax proposals made over on this side of the House the other day? Are they not sorry they did not think about those things?

There is where they would have had immediate and definite and beneficial impact on the economy, not by this circuitous, back-handed and rather stupid way of handling taxation matters.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I have not studied the statistical ramifications of this government action, but I believe we have to admit that the action of the government in bringing forward this bill is tied in with the complete importance of this session of this parliament, bringing about an increased stimulus to our economy to find jobs for the unemployed. That is the name of the game in a government's responsibilities.

It seems to me that the priorities given by the government in this action, bringing this bill forward, and the fact that at this point there has not been a government cabinet minister or a member of that government party rise in defence of this action but have sat there in total silence in this most important measure—

Mr. Lawlor: Well they look quite ashamed. Even the minister looks a little ashamed.

Mr. Gisborn: When this budgetary measure—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Not a bit.

Mr. Lawlor: Thanks a lot.

Mr. Gisborn: —was introduced, the first reaction from the chambers of commerces were dances of glee. Mr. Oakah Jones—the president, I believe, of Consumer Gas—said it was like having Christmas come every three months and hoped that the federal government would move in a likewise direction. Which indicates to me, without studying in depth the statistical ramifications of this bill, that there are some natural instincts that proved to us that it was the wrong way to approach the situation.

There is no doubt that the priorities given to the business corporations in this measure outweighed and relegated some of the important needs in this province. One, the problem of the municipalities in trying to meet their financial demands. Nothing, to this date, in that direction. The Throne Speech mentioned, very briefly, that this government would be giving financial assistance to municipalities' transportation problems. We have not as yet had a definition of that measure.

We have not yet had an indication from the government, The Department of Social and Family Services, that it will move to protect the income of the people receiving family and social benefits in relation to the federal government's increase of the supplement to the spouse being on old age pension.

How do we relate these two things? I have had four letters in the last three days showing me the response of The Department of Social and Family Services to one of the folks who are receiving social and family benefits, where their allowances have been decreased by the exact amount that the spouse, who was on the old age pension with a supplement has been increased. They are frustrated and worried about the fact that at last they had expected to have some increase in income. That is the area that should have been given priorities by this government instead of the $125 million handout to the corporations.

I hope that when the responsible minister answers in defence of this bill, he will give us some idea of how they arrived at the conclusion that this was going to spur the economy to the point of making and finding jobs. I wonder if he will tell us what research and information the government has obtained as to the percentage of industrial machinery that is produced in Ontario or in Canada in fact. We know from past experience and statistics about the tool machinery industry almost being depleted in Ontario, which in turn depleted the building of heavy industrial machinery.

I wonder if he will be able to tell us what information the government has obtained with regard to the advanced degree of American research into technological improvements and automation and which will be the kind of machinery they are developing to sell to Ontario, if the corporations or the industries use this measure. Because if this is the case, they are going to be buying machinery that will deplete jobs instead of making jobs. We have got to have some of this information.

This action heaps a serious indictment upon this government's shoulders in the false attempt to create jobs in this province. It is a shame that such an important action has taken place this afternoon. I repeat there has not been a representative of the government rise in defense of this bill with some solid information. It is not enough that we wait and then have the Minister of Revenue defend this bill. Because it is not just his bill, it relates to his department only in the sense of its revenue-making action.

Mr. Lawlor: If the minister of Highways were still Treasurer they would never agree to this.

Mr. Gisborn: But there are other members, the Prime Minister (Mr. Davis) and the Minister of the Treasury (Mr. McKeough)—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): It is not revenue-producing. It is giving it out.

Mr. Gisborn: —who should be here, responsible to explain to this House how this measure is going to bring about the ways and means that is implied in its principles.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Briefly, Mr. Speaker, I would like to put my spoke in the wheel here in this very important legislation—the government calls it important. I believe the motivation was to be the end-all to cure unemployment. I do not think they could have picked any other vehicle which would have done less for the economy than the one we have before us today. We could talk for hours on the fruitless way they are approaching this search to give jobs.

I have, in my mind, given the answer to this House but the day I had the answer for it the House was empty, and the government did not buy my answer.

Mr. Pilkey: There is not a hell of a big improvement today.

Mr. Sargent: But if they knew what I was going to say the galleries would be filled, I imagine.

Mr. Pilkey: I understand that, but they do not.

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Minister of Highways and Transport): The member has to run the risk of finding out.

Mr. Sargent: It has been established pretty well, to the Minister of Highways, by an economist much more knowledgeable than myself or he—who was engaged in financial nightmares and had to be demoted, I guess as it were; that is an aside remark. It has been established pretty well that the American corporations have taken over our economy, controlling about $38 billion of our corporate wealth now.

It has been said by the economists that we have not only given them the opportunity to buy out our economy but we have supplied the money, too. They have taken their profits from their operations in Canada to do a complete takeover in most markets and most business therein. We have, on top of that, given them forgiveness loans—non-payable; they do not have to pay back over the years—of many millions of dollars in this province. Now we have this bill in front of us which does not say that the American corporations cannot take part in this deduction of five per cent from their earnings which will allow them to buy more of our economy.

Without flogging the matter any further, I want to say for the record that this is one more case of the government being in bed with the American corporations and big business. If I had my way, I would have taken the five per cent and deducted it from the building trade which would have had a very marked effect in solving the unemployment situation.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Hear, hear!

Mr. Sargent: I say for the records again that if this government wants to solve the unemployment situation, it could do it very simply. It could take the millions of square feet in the plants which are vacant across this province and inculcate into them a modular housing programme. The money is available from every source in our economy to build this housing and we are at the point, Mr. Speaker, where we can never fill the need for housing. The market will always exceed the supply.

We have an end-product need there. We have the money here to do it. We have the manpower to do it. We have the modus operandi of modular housing as the answer to solve all of our needs—to solve the unemployment needs; to build modular housing in the empty plants which will never be filled again unless we have a crash programme on the part of the government to fill this need for housing. To have a modular programme for housing will cost less than $10,000—which has been proved—and solve everything at once, the housing programme and unemployment, using these vacant plants.

Here we are now compounding the error by telling the American corporations that they can have not only forgiveness loans but there is a further five per cent reduction on machinery, which they have to pay in income tax.

I say, Mr. Speaker, very briefly, another case of the government not caring about the real source of our problem is the building trade, because when the housing business is good, everything is healthy. Every segment of the economy benefits when the building business is good. This government seems to forget that the five per cent tax on building supplies would solve this need a long way.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Oshawa.

Mr. Pilkey: Mr. Speaker, the catalyst for this whole budget, the 1971 Ontario budget, was the question of tax credits to the tune of $125 million. It was to create full employment in the Province of Ontario. Yet I recall when the provincial Treasurer was asked to relate the number of jobs that would be created as a result of this windfall to the corporations in this province he could not tell this House in any precise terms as to how many jobs would be created as a result of this $125 million tax credit.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, and I know a number of speakers have made this point, the new machinery and equipment obviously will be a part of this whole technological change in industry and I want to suggest that it will create no jobs, or very limited number of jobs.

If the minister had said that the machinery and equipment had to be produced in Canada, I suppose that would have created some employment. But when the question was put to the provincial Treasurer, he made it abundantly clear that it was not necessary that this machinery be produced in Canada.

I also wanted to make the observation, as my colleague from Lakeshore did, that when we raised with the former provincial Treasurer the question about the five per cent sales tax on production machinery and equipment—that this would put industry in the Province of Ontario in a very uncompetitive position and may even cost us jobs in the Province of Ontario—it fell on deaf ears. The government were not changing their position. They were going ahead with the five per cent sales tax. But somewhere along the line, since 1969 to 1971, all of a sudden they have become enlightened and they are going to eliminate, in effect, the five per cent sales tax because this is going to create employment.

We told them at the time that this was going to create unemployment in the Province of Ontario by putting many industries in a very invidious position in terms of competing with their American counterparts. In addition to that, obviously what was needed in the Province of Ontario instead of a capital intensive programme was a labour incentive programme and the government found little credence in that proposition and obviously opted for a capital incentive programme.

While I am on that point, I want to make this observation. The member for Sudbury did talk about the leader of the UAW, Mr. McDermott—and he was inferring this in terms of many leaders, whether of the auto workers, the steel workers, the rubber workers—that you could not tell these people from the corporate elite in the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Sopha: They are bourgeois.

Mr. Pilkey: I want to tell this House, Mr. Speaker, that the McDermotts and the other trade union leaders in this province have made a major contribution to the affluence and the progress of this province, despite the Tory government. They have made this kind of progress for workers and the Liberals ought to understand that.

Mr. Sargent: That should give you about five or ten votes there.

Mr. J. Renwick: They are always attacking the working man.

Mr. Pilkey: That is right. They are always on the attack in terms of the trade union leaders who have made a major contribution, when they ought to be attacking those people on the other side of the House.

I want also to say, Mr. Speaker, that this—

Mr. Sopha: Strictly anti-waffle; anti-waffle.

Mr. Pilkey:—bill and this programme of the government was to create employment in the Province of Ontario, and I want to suggest it was a cruel hoax. There are many, many workers in this province who are unemployed—in excess of 200,000—who are looking for the government to take some positive action in creating employment here in this province.

When they make these announcements, as they did during the Throne debate, and as they did during this budget debate, and then in a very short period of time the jobs totally disappear, I want to suggest that it is a cruel hoax that this government is playing on the workers of this province by introducing these kind of programmes that mean very little in terms of full employment in this province.

What is really necessary, I do not think—

Mr. J. Renwick: We cannot waste any more time.

Mr. J. R. Simonett (Frontenac-Addington): Not too many people agree with the member over there.

Mr. Sargent: I agree with him.

Mr. Simonett: The member for Grey-Bruce would agree with anybody. Is he moving out?

Mr. Pilkey: If the government is going to stimulate the economy—and one does not need to be a master economist and know the whole ramification of economics—it seems to me what is necessary is that the government has to put the purchasing power in the hands of the people. If that kind of a job is done, then the economy is stimulated.

Mr. J. Renwick: Money power!

Mr. Pilkey: How much idle capacity have we got in this province now? I want to suggest to the government that at least 30 per cent of the capacity to produce in this province is idle. How does the government stimulate the economy? How does it get it moving forward? I want to suggest that it put the purchasing power in the hands of the people, so they can buy the products that are produced in the province. It is that simple.

Mr. Sargent: Where else would the member rather be?

Mr. Pilkey: Here we find the government does not relate to that proposition at all. It does not give anything to the working people in the whole budget. The budget is designed for the corporations and the people that really do not need it. I thought that the member for Sudbury did make an excellent point when he pointed out that we have a 52 per cent corporation tax in this province, but on careful examination, and particularly of the big corporations, it works out to about a 22 per cent corporation tax, because of depletion and everything else that goes along with it. They have a tax advantage, and yet the government makes an additional advantage to the corporations through the bill.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: He would tax the very industry which provides him employment.

Mr. Pilkey: I do not know about taxing the—

Mr. Deans: The government taxes the people who employ me now.

Mr. Pilkey: I want to conclude, Mr. Speaker, by saying that if this government really wants to make a contribution—and I do not want to say either that the federal government should be exonerated on this whole question of employment or full employment, unemployment—I am sorry, this whole question of unemployment—if the provincial government is really going to do anything in a meaningful way, it is going to have to provide the resources for the people that are going to spend it. When my colleague the other day made the proposition that we ought to cut the sales tax by one per cent, then this would give a stimulus of $150 million to the people that are going to spend it. It is that kind of a programme that we have to take on. We have got to do more in the public sector.

Mr. Sargent: The province is bankrupt now. Where are they going to get the money? They are budgeting for a half million dollars.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: That is absurd, and the hon. member for Grey-Bruce knows it.

Mr. Sargent: It is not for a half million dollars?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: That is an absurd statement.

Mr. Pilkey: We are going to have to do more in the public sector to put that purchasing power in the hands of the people who are going to buy.

Mr. Speaker, I recall when the provincial Treasurer concluded his speech, he said, in the last sentence:

I am confident that under the bold fiscal programme outlined in this budget, Ontario will realize an even more dynamic and productive future.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pilkey: I want to suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, if that is all the government has to offer and, as I said, this is the catalyst to full employment, this $125 million tax rebate—if that is all that they have to offer, then the productive future of Ontario is rather dim.

Mr. Sargent: Right!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks that I do not think have been covered by previous speakers, and I want to suggest to this government that this legislation is bad legislation as it may or may not affect the resource industries, upon which the economy of northern Ontario is based.

Much of the machinery that goes into exploitation of our resources in the north, whether it be mining or the forest products industry, as my friends from Kenora (Mr. Bernier) and Fort William (Mr. Jessiman) know, they are highly capital intensive. Indeed, the member for Fort William, a few short weeks ago was lamenting the fact that the city of Thunder Bay had lost several hundred jobs as a result of an economic slowdown in the pulp and paper industry.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: It is becoming very repetitive, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Stokes: He does know that due to automation at several of the pulp and paper mills in northwestern Ontario, they are doing away with jobs—

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Justice): Not through automation!

Mr. Stokes:—even though the production is much higher. They are doing away with jobs by automation in the plants. They are doing away with jobs by automation in the harvesting of our wood products in the woodlands.

The same holds true of the mining industry, where in the last eight years in north-western Ontario we have lost 800 jobs. The amount of wealth coming out of the north in those two resource industries is increasing by leaps and bounds—$1.6 billion in the mining industry during the fiscal year 1970—and yet—

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs): The member is pulling figures out of the air.

Mr. Stokes: I am not. I am not lifting those figures out of the air at all. As a matter of fact, it is the very minister who objects to the remarks that I am making right now who tabled the report in this Legislature, indicating that $1.6 billion of new wealth was created in 1970 as a result of the activities in the mining industry. But he neglected to tell us how many jobs had been done away with as a result of automation in that same industry.

His own colleague, the Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Brunelle), in information he made available to the research geographers and economists who compiled all of the information upon which the Design for Development was used, stated that there was enough unused allowable cut in the forest industries to provide an additional 4,000 to 5,000 jobs over the next 20 years. But that is not going to happen.

All we have to do is look at the statistics of the number of people who have been employed, say, over the past 10 to 15 years in the forest products industries: it has decreased by one-third with all of the automation that has taken place. And the industry threatens that this figure will increase by another 30 per cent or 40 per cent over the next five to 10 years.

All I am suggesting, Mr. Speaker, is that this kind of legislation is not going to solve the problem of creating jobs in the north. It is a straight handout to the big corporations. As a matter of fact, anybody over there that votes for this legislation is voting for socialism—socialism for the rich—and we are opposed to it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I presume that no one other than the minister on the government side is going to join this debate. If there is another government member to speak I will gladly yield my place, because I hope to wind up the debate for this party.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Go ahead; it is all the member's!

Mr. Singer: That assumption being correct, Mr. Speaker, I thought it might be of some interest to inquire as to the whereabouts of the provincial Treasurer. After all we are debating today Darcy's Folly and Darcy should be here to defend his folly.

I have some sympathy towards the Minister of Revenue. He is a newcomer to this cabinet who, within a few weeks of taking office, is now called upon to be the sole vocal defender of one of the most backward steps this government has ever taken. He will try, and he will have the votes after the bells ring, and what he is going to say will be supported by the democratic vote of this Legislature.

But it is very disappointing, Mr. Speaker, that the bold new wave, influenced as it is by the hon. member from Chatham, has not seen fit to keep the hon. member from Chatham at least in his seat, and indicate that he should have some very major participation in the defense of this statute. To my mind this statute is almost indefensible, unless you begin to examine the Conservative philosophy.

What did they think of when they sat in cabinet council and tried to work out the budget?

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Where is the former Treasurer?

Mr. Singer: What did they think of, Mr. Speaker, other than: "Can we draw a smoke-screen across the affairs of the Province of Ontario? At the same time can we help our corporate friends? And at the same time can we create the delusion"—and I use the word delusion purposely—"to create the delusion that we in fact are going to do something?"

"This is an unemployment budget. This is a budget that is going to solve our serious job problem," thunders the hon. member for Chatham-Kent. That was his message, and that was the message that was at least reflected on budget day. But when you look at it, Mr. Speaker, and when you try to get some intelligent answers from the hon. provincial Treasurer they just are not forthcoming.

Where was the Minister of Trade and Development (Mr. Grossman)? Where is he this afternoon, because his role in the economy of the province is a very major one? Where was he when these matters were being discussed in the formulation of the budget? Perhaps, most important of all, where was the Premier (Mr. Davis)? Because this is smiling Billy's most influential hour. This was supposed to be the symbol of the new wave.

Where is the Premier? Why is he not here to defend this cornerstone of his budget? As I say, my sympathy extends to the hon. minister from Grey South who has a thankless job. But he went into the cabinet and I guess he has to take many thankless jobs and the one this afternoon is one of them.

Mr. Speaker, what really was the philosophy in this budget? They play, unfortunately, on the misery of the people in Canada and the misery of the people in Ontario who are not able at the present time to find jobs for themselves. And when you begin to look at the figures, what real promise did they make?

In the budget the Treasurer said, "We are going to reduce Ontario's rate of unemployment from 4.9 per cent to three per cent." Those were based on figures just a month ago, because if you look at the more recent figures the unemployment figure in Ontario is less than 4.9 per cent. And it would be reasonable to anticipate that if they had done no more than they purport to do in this legislation, and in the other abortive moves announced in the budget, that those figures over the months of April, May, June and July would adjust themselves in any event to 3 per cent.

What we were looking for, Mr. Speaker, was not a government that was going to launch a substantial attack on the party in Ottawa, we were looking for a government that was going to begin to chart the course of Ontario into providing more jobs for Ontario and more prosperity for all of the people of Canada. And that is exactly what we did not get Mr. Speaker.

What did we get? We got a $125 million gift to the corporations, to the wealthy corporations carrying on business in the Province of Ontario; not the corporations that are in need; not the corporations that are going to undertake to provide more jobs in Ontario by reason of buying their equipment in Ontario; not the corporations, Mr. Speaker, that are going to guarantee that they are going to put more people to work; not even the comparatively ineffective but at least somewhat purposeful tests that the former Minister of Trade and Development used to apply in his forgiveness loans are in the legislation.

Even the present Minister of Trade and Development, when he made his announcement this afternoon, and talked about a very small figure—$7.5 million—outlined to us in his statement the fact that there were going to be certain tests applied before people were able to participate in sharing this $7.5 million fund.

Now what tests are there here? None. The only test, Mr. Speaker, that is contained in this statute is that you have to be a corporation which has bought some capital equipment. And what is capital equipment? Well, they exclude automobiles—and they exclude Ontario Development Corporation—and trucks, and any of the inventory in which a loan has been made.

But they do not exclude typewriters; they do not exclude refurbishing of buildings, they do not attempt to limit in any way the broad, general application of this corporate-favouring legislation—and that is the only word for it. They do not take into consideration, Mr. Speaker, the problems that the individual who has not created a company, who has not created a limited corporation, has to face. He gets no benefit from this.

The person who has to buy capital equipment. Perhaps every farmer—is this the message that they want to send out?—every farmer should make himself a personal corporation and he can get this kind of benefit when he has to go out and buy farm machinery? Perhaps every professional man should do the same thing? Perhaps my colleague here, from Sudbury, should form himself into a management company that manages his office and then he is going to get this kind of benefit?

Mr. Speaker, they have lost sight of the fact that the corporate community of this province—albeit that it is important—really is no representative of all of the seven million people who live in Ontario. It is representative, and it is the benefactor, of only a very small number.

I was listening the other evening to the comments of a certain gentleman who has recently retired from his cabinet position in the federal government, and he was critical of some of the benefits that have been extended in the past to corporations, by the federal government.

By implication and by obvious innuendo, his criticism has to be so applicable to this newest effort of the Ontario government to favour the big corporations. His impression was that governments do so much to favour corporations that he would go into business and invest all his money in capital equipment and to heck with labour, because that was where he would have to pay almost no tax.

My colleague from Sudbury and others pointed out that in the resource industry you pay tax in relation to perhaps 20 per cent or 18 per cent of your income. In other industries, larger amounts, but still less than the government employee, for instance, who earns $30,000—and that figure is there—he gets no kind of benefits like this. He has no kind of adjustment that he can make in relation to certain taxes. He has no five per cent that he can knock off if he does certain things. He pays tax on the full amount.

But take the very wealthy people in our community, the people who own the substantial shares in these corporations and these people are able to take every advantage. Are we running a charitable year for the Texas Gulfs and the General Motors and the Fords and the Chryslers and the IBMs and so on? Is that what have in mind, Mr. Speaker? If so, if that is what the government has in mind, they have done well by their corporate friends.

But it is more than strange that the Treasurer—not only is he not here and not able to indicate it today, but he was not able to indicate in the questioning that followed the budget what jobs were going to be created, what new impetus was going to be given to industry or what new encouragement was going to be given to improve the economy of this province.

A second gift in this Act—in section 2 of the Act—is the allowance of the deduction of borrowed money for the purpose of purchasing shares of a corporation. That is something, Mr. Speaker, that certainly affects the day-to-day lives of—how many people in the Province of Ontario? Perhaps the Minister of Revenue can tell us when he gets up.

Mr. Stokes: Seven and a half million.

Mr. Singer: Well, the benefit of that is again going to this tiny select group. Mr. Oakah Jones, a fine gentleman and the head of Consumers' Gas, recently advised his company—and they followed his advice and they took over the controlling interest in Home Oil. A very fine effort for Ontario, for Canada and for the broad community. But he had negotiated that deal well in advance of the budget. And now Consumers' Gas is getting an extra bonus—why? Consumers' Gas, their shareholders, their directors, their president, all thought this was a good and a reasonable business venture, and they went into it without this kind of an encouragement.

Why now is the government trying to encourage, and why now is it so concerned about the welfare of the very wealthy corporation? To what extent, even in the small personally owned corporations, is this going to benefit our community? To the small corporation that earns a modest profit to what extent really is the purchase of another $200 or $300 machine and knocking five per cent off that? To what extent is that going to benefit anyone else in the Province of Ontario? It is going to benefit the large companies, the ones who buy million-dollar machines—the large automobile companies, the large resource companies, the large business machine companies, the telephone company and that sort of thing.

But why, at the expense of all the people of Ontario, do we make this the cornerstone of the budget? It passes all understanding. The only logical explanation is that, notwithstanding what happened at the convention, we emerge not with a leader but with a perpetual smiler who takes his orders from the energetic and flamboyant member for Chatham-Kent who has not, as I say—I repeat, and I am going to keep on repeating—who has not even the integrity to be here this afternoon to protect the folly that he brought forward.

Mr. Sargent: After last night he is burnt out.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, what possible reason has this government for proceeding in this method at this time?

My colleague from Grey-Bruce talked about the housing industry. Housing is something that is paid passing reference to several times. The Minister of Trade and Development talked about that. He had a great scheme that was announced in the Throne Speech, but he did not know how many houses it was going to produce. The Minister of Trade and Development talked about it this afternoon; the budget makes passing reference to it.

As we analyse the category of people in Ontario who are unemployed we find that proportions are highly slanted in favour of young people and in favour of people without academic and mechanical skills. There are many people who just want to work on jobs requiring the least academic qualification and the least training in practical techniques.

Are we going to put any of those people to work by this $125-million gift to the wealthy corporations? Why not do something in the housing field? Why not take that five per cent off building equipment and give a spur to the housing industry? Could there be anything as obvious as we walk the streets of this metropolitan area, that the people who are seeking jobs are people who might at this time of the year be expecting jobs in the construction industry? And that industry needs a push. It consists of a lot of ordinary people, both the people who build houses from the top level and the people who construct them on the labouring level. There is where the government could have made some sense. There is where it could have made a mark.

But no, the pallid excuse given by the hon. Treasurer was that it was too complicated to figure out. No other excuse has been offered. Well, Mr. Speaker, by their deeds we shall know them and by their folly they shall be destroyed. Anyone who has thought about this at all must recognize with us in the opposition that this bill is a complete, utter and absolute sell-out to the people of wealth in the community at the expense of all the rest of the people in the Province of Ontario and is without doubt, Mr. Speaker, absolutely indefensible.

Mr. Speaker: Do other members wish to participate in the debate? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, I think you will agree that I have sat back patiently and listened to the contributions that were made and to the criticism of the bill that is before us. I listened to some of the alternative proposals that were put forth and I must say that I will restrain my enthusiasm in regard to answering them individually. I must say that some of them, indeed, were provocative.

Mr. Stokes: The minister cannot even get enthusiastic about this legislation.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Now when the member tells me that there are divisions of socialism in this country, I think he should examine what he believes in, my friend. That is what I believe. He said it today. He said another thing the other night that will come back to him one of these days.

Mr. D. M. De Monte (Dovercourt): Give it all to the corporations, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Makarchuk: Does the minister mean the hon. member for Thunder Bay said something like that?

Mr. Lawlor: Are there two kinds of Toryism?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, there is some urgency on the passage of the legislation because we do in fact want the people who are interested in this legislation to have the regulations before them.

Mr. Lewis: To get those benefits before the election.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I will tell the member for Grey-Bruce that if he sat in my office, which he never will, to listen to the enthusiasm of the calls I have got since the day the budget came down, he would change his mind. I think if he kept his mouth shut a little more in this chamber he would do his party and his constituency a little more good. There is no question about that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have received a tremendous number of calls.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: How much did they offer to pay the Tories in the next election?

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: If there are any, I would like to see them for a change because I am one of those people who have not seen any in my lifetime and I ran quite a few elections, let me tell the House that.

Mr. Speaker: We should discontinue these debates across the floor of the House and direct the remarks through the Chair, please.

Mr. Sargent: You tell that to the minister.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, will you ask him how much goes into the Tory party?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I apologize for the indiscretion of the opposition, but let me say to the House that the inquiries that have come to my attention in my office have all been favourable. Some of them have come from the area of Grey-Bruce for the information of my colleague from Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sopha: Some of them can send their cheques certified.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I am anxious that the bill will become incorporated in the statutes. As a result of that suggestion, Mr. Speaker, I ask that you call the division.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I do not think you, as Speaker of the House upholding the general rights of this House, should permit a minister of the Crown to say absolutely nothing about a significant tax alteration which he has introduced in his name.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: It is such a pathetic performance—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! Order! The hon. member certainly—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member will resume his seat while the Speaker is on his feet. There is no point of order; absolutely no point of order. The hon. minister need not reply. He may contribute what he wants to.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: The minister should resign.

Mr. Speaker: There is nothing in the rules requiring him to reply in any way.

The motion is for second reading of Bill 26.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1971

The House resumed at 8 o'clock p.m.

SUCCESSION DUTY ACT

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves second reading of Bill 27, An Act to amend The Succession Duty Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, it has always been part of the political philosophy that I learned over the years that death duties are one of the fairest means of distributing and redistributing the wealth of the community. I should say that as I open my brief remarks on Bill 27, An Act to amend The Succession Duty Act of this province. The budget gives fair warning to some of the higher income groups in the House, including the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman).

Mr. Speaker, the income from this source over the last year has been approximately $70 million and to that should be added an additional $25 million to $28 million that is our provincial share of the federal estate tax. So we have this combination, this overlapping of responsibility, that seems to be characteristic of so many of the methods whereby we have established our revenue base in Ontario.

This bill calls for a reduction, or at least an easement, in certain aspects of the provincial succession duties which in the ensuing year will mean a reduction in income of approximately $6 million. And according to the Treasurer (Mr. McKeough), when all of the reductions come into full play, there will be a net loss in revenue from this source alone of about double that amount, $12 million; a significant amount certainly.

Nevertheless, we intend to support the bill. We feel, however, that the government should take up the position which was enunciated two years ago by the former Treasurer, and get out of the direct succession duty imposition entirely. We agree with the positions that have been stated by the government in the past that there should be only one level of death-duty collection and that it is most reasonable to assume that that would be the federal level.

Negotiations have taken place in the past, based on the assumption that if there were just one level of collection, the federal level, that 75 per cent of the revenues from that federal tax would revert to the provinces and the calculations indicate that that would mean a small loss to us in this province. Well, I feel that the negotiations—

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Two million bucks, eh? A small loss.

Mr. Nixon:—should be established in such a way that there would be no loss whatsoever, and that the estate tax base at the federal level be also agreed to on the basis of close consultation among the provinces with the federal Minister of Finance—or the federal Minister of Revenue, I presume it would be.

I can never understand why the government has had so much difficulty in negotiating this transference. As I understand it, there have been no negotiations other than the flat offer from the federal side on the 75 per cent abatement or rebate of the federal income.

I do not believe that we should give up this tax unless, to begin with, we get as much from the agreement as we would if we continued with the present succession duty tax base. And second, we should not give up the right to our provincial succession duties unless we can, in the agreement, have access to the estate tax base and a clear understanding—as there is presently with the personal income tax collection agreement—that we can set the rate at whatever we choose in this Legislature.

Now, surely this is not too much to ask. It would simply mean that we would eliminate the overlapping, that we would have one level of collection, and surely this is to the best interests of the taxpayers. I think that this is the direction the policy should take, that it would not mean that the province was abandoning this source of revenue, and that we would, in fact, not be accepting a reduction in the revenue if the agreement with the government of Canada were as I have described it, and as I am confident could be negotiated.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we will support the bill since it is, in the words of the Treasurer, a transition towards a rationalization of death duties among the provinces and with the government of Canada. When the government moves in that direction, we will support it as long as the net revenues are not reduced and we have access through negotiation to the base and control of the rate that is applied in this province.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member for Lakeshore would just hold his remarks for a moment.

I should like to indicate to the House that we have some special visitors with us this evening. In the west gallery, we have members of the 273rd Cub Pack and the 273rd Scout Group of Toronto.

The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: And further as a gesture to the House and as to the general tenor of events, may I introduce you to my wife and the youngest daughter sitting in the gallery. She was complaining that not a single member of the New Democratic Party appeared outside the buildings here a few moments ago with respect to women's liberation.

An hon. member: They all came in the back door.

Mr. Lawlor: Yes, we all came in the back door this time.

Mr. Speaker, we do not agree that succession duties should be removed from the portfolio of taxes that are leviable by the Province of Ontario. If the hon. minister will take time out to take a look at the second volume of Smith's report where, purblind and reactionary as he may be, he gave considerable credence to succession duties. He explained the rationale and meaning and purpose of succession duties, and he affirmed it. He said death taxes were a most beneficial tax.

What is happening with this government is that they are phasing out—as they are phasing out of most things—they are phasing out of succession duties and turning it over to the federal government. It is a mistake.

Any tax system, Mr. Speaker, must have two features in connection with it which give it scope. The first feature is flexibility. All the tax bundle must be a flexible tax bundle. The government must be able to turn to this area of taxation and lay its emphasis there depending upon the economic circumstances. What the government is doing, as I said earlier this afternoon, is stripping itself gradually of its area of manoeuvre. The government cannot move any more. When they complain about the federal government in Ottawa, they are sacrificing the very means whereby they can seek some kind of self-determination, some role where they can make the economy of Ontario viable and where they can place their finger on the pipes and tunes of the Ontario economy. The government is throwing it all away. Not only that, we need taxes that are elastic.

The second thing is elasticity in the taxing. Certain taxes are inelastic. The personal income tax is the most elastic of taxes; it expands as the ratio of the incomes goes up in the province.

This tax is fairly inelastic, but it is the kind of tax the government should be able to turn to in certain contingencies and according to certain economic circumstances.

Let us just for a moment, Mr. Speaker, discuss the philosophy of succession duties and estate taxes. The whole theory is that, as between husband and wife and between husband and children and between the on-going generation, the tax ought not to be too heavy, but that as it goes into future generations accumulations of wealth have always proved a bane to every economy which ever permitted it.

It happened in medieval England, and they had to bring in a whole host of statutes which ride us, like homunculae, on the back to this day. I mean the whole business of mortmain, the whole business of the dead hand reaching out of the grave, trying to control wealth, and it is quite an impossible thing to do. And if it is done, as it was done for generations and centuries before our time—the wealth fell down into the pools and grew larger and larger—it did mean, and it still means in an economy of relative scarcity such as we have, that the people are going to be deprived of the money. And people who have done nothing, not a hand's turn, derive considerable amounts of disposable wealth, simply by the accident of birth, through no energetic use.

The Conservatives are always talking about free enterprise, saying that we are self made men; that we have ground out our destiny with our teeth, so to speak; that we are brighter than other people—which means they are just a little bit sharper in financial practice—that we have more energy; that we are not laggards or slackards or parasites upon the republic. All this nonsense and mythology we hear from them all the time.

Even their own succession duty policy they never follow. They allow, they permit, and they are permitting tonight, in this legislation, ever-wider areas whereby the cascades and the rivulets of wealth may descend into future generations without any control.

The whole purpose of succession duties was to redistribute wealth. When somebody died, when they had accumulated money, that money ought to be redistributed to the whole population. Let the new generations make their way in life, let them be the masters that their fathers pretended to be.

An hon. member: The minister is very serious.

Mr. Lawlor: If the government is not serious about this then they are not free enterprisers. The free-enterprise philosophy teaches self-endurance. It teaches overreaching of the other fellow. It teaches doing things on your own hook and not depending upon anybody else, including the old man.

Where does the government practise what it preaches? Where does it begin to practise? In its succession-duty legislation it is gradually eroding the whole base of this province and instead of redistributing the wealth, even in a minuscule way, even beginning to do so, it is opening the floodgates to the accumulations of large family fortunes and perpetuating them, knowing it is detrimental to the whole population.

But the government seems, of recent date, in the last month or so, to have completely lost its head on monetary policy. We spent all afternoon pointing out how the government rewarded and visited benefits upon the heads of corporations. It does not get any votes from corporations. It may derive all its election funds from the corporations but corporations have not got votes.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): If we do, I never see it.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): It shows how objective we are.

Mr. Lawlor: The minister should speak to the bagmen in his party.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): He usually turns a blind eye though.

Mr. Lawlor: That is right. And the Prime Minister always says he never sees it, neither. He does not want to see it. It is deliberate that they should not see it. It might somehow constrict his conscience as to how they carry on.

The same thing exists in this particular kind of legislation on both these points. If you want a just society, if the term "just society" means anything to anybody, then it must mean that there must be a redistribution of wealth in the community from time to time. The way in which it is chiefly done must be through death taxes and through succession duties. And out goes the baby and out goes the bath in this particular piece of business that the government is bringing forth.

Why does it double the figure? Just two years ago, in line with the Smith report the Treasurer recommended that estates passing between husband and wife jump from a $50,000 to a $75,000 to $85,000 exemption.

Then we went and we gave assent to this in the House. At the time we agreed to it—to $125,000. We thought that was just, as passing between spouses. Now the government is jumping it to $250,000. In the process of doing so it is diminishing its tax return in this particular field—which is already almost insignificant—virtually to nothing, so it may as well get out of the field.

The position is that if Ontario withdrew from the succession duty field and took 75 per cent of what the federal estate tax would yield in Ontario—which most of the provinces are doing—the government would obtain, in 1971-1972, $84 million.

With its present Succession Duty Act, before this proposed tax change, Ontario would get from inheritance $76 million collected in this province, plus $28 million—that is the 25 per cent bit—from Ottawa in 1971-1972, which is $104 million.

The difference between the two is $24 million, which means that after the government's tax changes come into effect, it is virtually suffering a $24 million loss in revenue under this particular head. No one pretends that the present succession duties are onerous. The thing is riddled with exemptions. Let us make it a fortiori worse. Let us shift the whole thing over to the federal government.

The federal government's is basically a flat rate tax. That is what it comes down to. No one pretends that in the federal Estate Tax Act there is any putative or any desired redistribution of wealth. No longer do they even pretend to do that.

Where, oh where, is the just society in that context? The whole federal scheme has been moved away from that. In the federal scheme it goes this far—and this is the game that the government is playing and the plated pot into which it throws its little contribution: If a widow, as between husband and wife—of course, there is no estate tax at all in the federal government's scheme—if a husband dies with many millions and transfers it to his wife, it goes tax free. And if that wife moves out of this country she may take every dime with her and we would not garner a cent.

That is the sort of federal scheme that this government places itself in accordance with and proposes to throw Ontario's future into that particular context.

I think, and I insist, and we in this party insist, that we must obtain and retain in our own possession as many tax weapons—if you will, instruments—as we possibly can in order to give us a suave movement and flexibility, and that we can turn from one to the other as the public needs and as the common good requires.

The government, on its side, is throwing things away. First of all, the government chafes and makes cantankerous noises at the federal government for what it does, and at the same time this government plays directly into Ottawa's hands by sacrificing the important field of taxation without any substantial redress because of the loopholes, and because of the rate structure, and because of the whole structure of the federal Estate Tax Act.

Is that what the government proposes to do? I think it is a sell-out.

I do not think this government has any sense of social responsibility in that context at all. I think it has run directly counter to every nostrum of its own philosophy, and its own position. But nevertheless, in our teeth, we have to listen to the government bring this kind of measure forward year after year. It runs directly counter to the Smith committee, which addressed it, and I did not see its own internal committee taking exception to this at all.

This is a kind of visitation from above, something in no consistency with the government's established position. There is no background to it. The reason that the minister, Mr. Speaker, did not stand up, did not have the fortitude as a new minister of the Crown to defend his own legislation, and possibly will not even attempt to defend this before dinner, or after dinner for that matter tonight, is precisely that he knows of the internal ambiguities and inconsistencies in his own policy, and finds it quite intellectually indefensible, but he is pandering to whatever interests, I cannot imagine, in this particular regard, to some nebulous notion that runs counter to his own fundamental ways of thought.

I think that, as far as we are concerned, we will vote against it. We have not decided as yet. We will force it to a vote. As far as I am concerned, it should very probably be done.

I wish the minister would have the gumption, if he can, to stand up and defend his own legislation on these occasions. It will only bring discredit upon his own government if he finds himself incapable or unwilling to do so.

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to participate in the debate? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the contributions of the two members who have spoken in regard to Bill 27. I think that probably the thinking of our party and the Leader of the Opposition is not very far apart.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Not very often far apart.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think that I can agree with him.—

Mr. Lawlor: No, there was a wonderful identity with the minister.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I ask the member to wait. I will deal with him in a minute, if he will give me time.

Mr. Deans: The minister cannot deal with him. Greater men have tried and failed.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think that we can agree that it is very clear to the both of us that we should not abandon this deal until we have a clear indication from the federal government that, in fact, the return to the province on a continuing basis will be equal to that—

Mr. Lawlor: Why would the minister want to abandon it all?

Hon. Mr. Winkler:—this Act produced for the Province of Ontario in the past, and it will be on an increasing basis in the future.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): How much does the minister want?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Quite a bit.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think that the Treasurer—

An hon. member: That is too high.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —made it quite clear in his budget speech.

Mr. Singer: Is the Treasurer here tonight?

Mr. Nixon: No. He is not concerning himself with this legislation.

Mr. Singer: No. The Treasurer cannot lower himself to join in the debate.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The opposition is being rude.

Mr. Singer: We sympathize with the minister.

An hon. member: Slap them down.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think the amount of money which is going to return to us in the course of years is going to be equal to the amount which we might appear to be losing in this particular move. But I must say to the House that, in complete agreement with the Leader of the Opposition, we are not going to abandon the field until we have that understanding with Ottawa and until we have the—

Mr. Singer: Oh, the minister is using it as blackmail?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: There is no blackmail.

Mr. Singer: Sure the minister is. The Treasurer admitted it, but the minister is not co-operating.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: It is a very queer thing that at one time we were ruining Confederation by taking a stand against Ottawa and then, when we co-operate with Ottawa, then we are blackmailing.

I do not undersand the hon. member's thinking from time to time—as a matter of fact, most of the time.

Mr. Singer: The government is doubling the civil service—doubling it—twice the administrative expense.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: However, to get back to what inevitably is going to happen—we know this through discussions with the federal people—as the capital gains tax is instituted, there will be further developments and communication and agreements between the federal government and Ontario—

Mr. Lawlor: Capital gains tax has nothing to do with succession duties.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —and we believe that we will emerge—it will have when we are finished with it—we believe that we will emerge and be at least in an equal position to that which we are in right now.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in dealing with the remarks of the hon. member for Lakeshore. He did not seem to know exactly what they were going to do, although it had been intimated before that they were going to take a position against the bill, and for that we do not sell him short. We would expect that he would do that.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): It is very difficult to tell him at any time.

Mr. Nixon: Even looks like him a little bit.

Mr. Lawlor: Oh, there is no question we are against this bill.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: And the hon. member said that we are losing a field that will not give us any room in which to move, and that we are losing an opportunity in the re-distribution of wealth. I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the words that were spoken by the hon. member for Lakeshore, that that is not quite the case.

I think, that when the negotiations begin between this government and the federal government, on a very amicable basis, they will develop to the benefit of the people of Ontario and that we will gain as a result. But there is a much more important reason for doing this at this time.

You may or may not know, Mr. Speaker, that small businesses, family-owned businesses, are suffering as a result of succession duties, maybe not as much necessarily by the application of the provincial tax as by the federal tax. The hon. member may be aware that farmers who are creating for themselves—and this is what bothers me about the hon. member's position. He loses some very favourable positions with the farmers, where the farmers are—

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): The minister is choking himself on those words.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —building themselves estates now, that are becoming—

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): He should not have to answer for the policies of the Treasurer.

Mr. Lawlor: The minister is considering the repayment into that money owed. Easier for family businesses.

Hon. Mr. Winkler:—quite substantial. And we have cases in point—I listened to the hon. member. Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member would give me the opportunity to explain to him, maybe in due course I can convert him to my point of view, but I doubt that.

Mr. Lawlor: How was the minister's chow mein?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I believe that there are enough people living on farms today who are reaching this particular point, who have been assessed by the authorities in Ottawa. And we know some cases very pointedly where the assets of either the farm or the company in question have had to be sold, and in some cases sold to American interests, which the members opposite do not really like, do they?

Mr. Pilkey: Wonderful. Does the minister?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: And we want to see that this inequity is taken out of the present situation under which those people exist. We believe this is a move in the right direction and I would certainly, Mr. Speaker, invite the member for Lakeshore to change his view because he did waffle a little at the conclusion of his words and join us in what we believe—

Mr. Lawlor: Waffle. Do not use that awful word, please.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Oh, sorry. That is a misinterpretation on the member's part. I did not mean it that way.

I believe this is a substantial move in the right direction. I am grateful for the support of the Leader of the Opposition and his party.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could ask the minister a question?

Does the minister believe that, in view of the position taken, there is any logical justification for maintaining two civil services, one in Ottawa and one at Queen's Park to do exactly the same thing? And double the expenses and double the fees to lawyers, double the cost to—

Hon. Mr. Davis: If Ottawa wants to quit, that is fine.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I suppose the lawyers made more money out of it than anybody else. On the other hand we are moving away from it, so it should please the hon. member even though it does not please his friends on his left.

Mr. Singer: Why does the minister not answer the question?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: With that explanation, I hope that I have satisfied the questions that were raised and I would ask Mr. Speaker that the vote be called.

Mr. Lawlor: This is a great improvement over that before dinner, I can tell the minister.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Thank you very much.

Mr. Peacock: Mr. Speaker, would the minister permit a question?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Certainly I will.

Mr. Nixon: The minister will be sorry.

Mr. Peacock: As the collector of the revenues under this Act, does the minister feel that he should answer for the budgetary policies of the Treasurer?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: No, I should not. I am the administrator of the department.

Mr. Peacock: Right. That is why the Treasurer should be speaking.

Mr. Pilkey: Would the hon. minister permit another question?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I have some very good friends on the other side of the House and for the member for Oshawa, I would allow a question.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House.

Motion agreed to.

Clerk of the House: House in Committee of the Whole; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

CORPORATIONS TAX ACT

House in committee on Bill 26, An Act to amend The Corporations Tax Act.

Mr. Chairman: Bill 26, An Act to amend The Corporations Tax Act. Do we have any questions, comments or amendments on the five sections here, on any of these sections and if so, which section?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): On section 1, Mr. Chairman, the definition. Could the minister outline to us what exactly he means in the first amendment when he purports to define what machinery and equipment means? Would it mean, for instance, a typewriter? Would it mean, for instance, an adding machine? To what extent is he prepared to go on this?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Chairman, one of the reasons is, of course, as I indicated this afternoon, that I am rather interested in getting this legislation through so that we can produce the regulations and they will all be clearly defined there.

Mr. Singer: That is a very interesting comment, Mr. Chairman, that the minister says everything will be clearly defined in the regulations. Has he got some draft of the regulations that he would care to inform us about now, so that we would have a better idea whether we could have any confidence in them or not?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I do not have that draft with me.

Mr. Singer: Why not, Mr. Chairman?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I will make it available to the member.

Mr. Singer: Unfortunately, Mr. Chairman, one of my concerns is that the government perpetually, and again tonight in this bill, goes for almost blank-cheque legislation. And the government having considered this—this was the Treasurer's great theory; he overrode the Premier until we went along with it. The Treasurer said: "This is going to save the world, so give us a blank cheque."

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Just Canada. The world we really have not looked at yet.

Mr. Singer: They have 68 votes over there that are going to give them the blank cheque. But, for goodness' sake, Mr. Chairman, surely one would expect the poor joker who is charged with pushing this through the House tonight would have some detail for us. Surely it is reasonable to anticipate—

An hon. member: Poor joker parliament.

Mr. Singer:—that the Minister of Revenue would be able to give us some rough outline of the regulations he is going to introduce.

An hon. member: Right.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Chairman, I am sure that you will understand I do not need the sympathy of the hon. member, and the regulations will be drawn exactly to fit—

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): He can have our sympathy if he wants.

Hon. Mr. Winkler:—the federal Act that is parallel to this.

Mr. Singer: But, Mr. Chairman, that is not a sufficient answer. If the government has any idea in its mind as to what it contemplates, the Minister of Revenue should have had the courtesy and the decency to make available to us a draft regulation if by any event this section carries. And if the minister is unable to do that for us, then surely one must conclude—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): He can at least be specific.

Mr. Singer:—that all he wants is a blank cheque. They do not know what they are doing. They ask us for a blank cheque and they have not any idea really where they are going. Maybe the minister should bring the civil servants with him and tell us what they have in mind here.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I do not know what my legal responsibility in the House is to the hon. member, but I can assure him that immediately the bill is passed—

Mr. Sargent: The minister should know.

Hon. Mr. Winkler:—I will supply him with the regulations.

Mr. Singer: We would have much more confidence, Mr. Chairman, if he would give it to us in advance of when the bill is passed. He is asking for a blank cheque. We would like to know what he is trying to—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The member does not have any confidence anyway.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Order.

Mr. Singer: The Minister of Agriculture asks for order, and of all the people in this House who want to know about legal niceties, the Minister of Agriculture—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Singer: No, I am pointing at the minister; I am not pointing to anyone else. The Minister of Agriculture, who has created a trade war that is breaking up Canada, should be the last person in the world who should worry.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): We know why he is getting upset.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Yes, the hon. minister is in big trouble.

Now let me turn my attention to the somewhat more reasonable Minister of Revenue.

Mr. Chairman: Please do.

Mr. Singer: I would ask the Minister of Revenue if he has any real idea in his mind as to what he wants in his regulations? I think that is logical and reasonable, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Nixon: What could be more reasonable?

Mr. Singer: I would ask the Minister of Revenue to tell us what kind of regulations he is going to bring in to support this section.

Mr. Nixon: What could be more reasonable?

Mr. Sargent: The hon. minister does not know.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I have given him the commitment that I will supply him with that information once the bill is concluded, and I am ready to do that. He has taken me into his confidence on other matters and I assure him that I will be just as honest and sincere with this one, despite his doubts this evening.

Mr. Sargent: We cannot pass the bill until we know.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 1 stand as part of the bill? The member for Oshawa.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): Mr. Chairman, I just want to continue that point, because a number of bills are passed in this House and the media takes a certain interpretation from the bills that are passed, and then the government—

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, would you tell the Minister of Agriculture that the hockey game started at 9 o'clock.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We will know when the hon. member leaves.

Mr. Pilkey: —at some point in time applies the regulations to that bill—that legislation—and with the meaning and the interpretation that we and the media take from it, it becomes redundant. It just seems to me that is true.

Take Bill 96, the one on the question of notice for employees who are going to be laid off. The government got great fanfare headlines in the paper across this province and everything else. But when it brought the regulations down, it made most of the bill redundant in terms of what it means for the workers of this province.

In nearly every case it is that way. It seems to me that this House ought to know what the regulations are going to be before we adopt the bill. On the face of it, it appears to me that the government is going to give corporations a $125 million windfall.

By the time the government brings out those regulations, it may be $200 million before we are through with it. It just seems to me that we ought to know that, before we pass the bill through this House. At least, in a verbal way, the minister ought to tell us what the regulations are under this bill.

Mr. Singer: Absolutely.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: If $200 million would put the economy of Ontario back to full employment, I am sure the government would consider it this evening.

Mr. Pilkey: Well, this $125 million is doing nothing. It is not going to do anything.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Just a minute. I do not think that I have any obligation to supply the hon. member with the regulations before the thing is passed.

Mr. Pilkey: Oh, that is typical.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I would be prepared to submit them to the committee for consideration. One other commitment I will give the hon. member for Oshawa is that I will pass as many regulations as necessary to make this bill work.

Mr. Pilkey: Oh, I am sure of that.

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Mr. Chairman, it is within the competence of this Legislature to know what the base of the tax is to be. We do not know what that base is, except by the exclusions that have been enumerated, principally by the member for Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis) in his examination of the Treasurer's budget in his speech last Thursday, that there are three.

Exemptions are those items of machinery and equipment put in place by this government and other governments of the Province of Ontario, by utilities which do not pay tax, and by non-profit corporations. That is the extent of our knowledge as to the base of this exemption. It will not do for the minister to tell us we have no right to know what the regulation contains.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, he did not say that.

Mr. Pilkey: He said that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He did not. He did not say there was no right to know.

Mr. Peacock: If the regulation is not now promulgated—Mr. Chairman, the Prime Minister has taken my words another step beyond what I said.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, that was the import of what the hon. member said.

Mr. Peacock: The import of what I am saying, Mr. Chairman, is this: The regulation is part of the legislation. A regulation which establishes a tax base is not a proper regulation. No regulation made outside this House by the executive council should prescribe what should be taxed. The statute itself should prescribe that.

The minister should be able to say to us tonight exactly what is comprehended by the definition in section 1. We have had on many occasions, Mr. Chairman, amendments put before the committee of the Whole House by members of the opposition which endeavoured to define the base for the tax. To my memory, on each of those occasions the Chair has ruled that any alteration of the base of the tax, the items to be taxed, was in effect an interference with the right of the Crown to initiate taxation.

Tonight the Minister of Revenue is telling us that he cannot inform us this evening as to what items are to be excluded from the definition in section 1. I just find that just unacceptable—completely unacceptable, Mr. Chairman, that the Legislature cannot pass upon what is to be taxed. That is a fundamental right of the House to know what is to be taxed and to know in considerably more detail and greater precision than is afforded us here in the bill or by anything that the Minister of Revenue has informed us of this evening.

The machinery and equipment on which the five per cent retail sales tax was placed in the 1969 budget, I believe it was, accounted for about four-elevenths of all the machinery and equipment in commercial transactions in the province, according to the former Minister of Revenue, the member for London South (Mr. White). He, at that time, tried to play down the impact of the extension of the sales tax to production machinery and equipment. He went to great lengths to bring to this House calculations as to the very small amount of increase in the price of the commodity as a result of the extension of the retail sales tax. He wound up by telling us that on every million dollars of sales of production machinery and equipment, the final purchaser would have to pay another $190 some-odd.

If the Minister of Revenue who is in his place tonight is proposing in this legislation to relieve from taxation, or to give a credit, which is a deduction from taxation, on this same base as the retail sales tax was extended to by the former Minister of Revenue in 1969, then it must be a base which is far far smaller than that even allowed by the Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) in his budget statement. It would be a very small base indeed which is to be affected by this tax, if it is the same one as described by the former Treasurer, a mere four-elevenths of the total transactions in machinery and equipment as calculated by the former Minister of Revenue. So I say, Mr. Chairman, before this bill passes from committee this evening, the Minister of Revenue is going to have to give us more information than he is now able to do.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I would just like to answer that, Mr. Chairman. In the legislative sense, I do not think I had any legal authority to produce regulations until a bill is in force, or is enacted, and I think the same applies to any other Act.

Mr. Pilkey: This is supposed to be a big, important bill.

Mr. Peacock: Surely, Mr. Chairman, the intention that will be described in the regulation can be made known to us tonight?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The intent is there.

Mr. Peacock: The regulations cannot be promulgated until after the Act has been entered in the statutes or the bill has been given royal assent. That is clear; the members of the Legislature know that.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I can assure the hon. member that the intention is to grant this rebate on anything that will, in our judgement, produce employment. Now, if the member does not want to take that for what it is worth, I am afraid that he will have to wait until the regulations are available and the ordinary course of procedure prevents me from doing that.

Mr. Pilkey: How can the minister buy that?

Mr. Chairman: The member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I want to move an amendment, but before I do so, I want to spend a moment to discuss it with the minister.

I have in my riding an equipment manufacturer. They manufacture equipment that is usable in the glass industry and they have difficulties. The difficulties they have are simply the difficulties of becoming known within the industry. There is no particular reason for the industry to look toward them because in the United States there are any number of very large manufacturers. Because they are small, the opportunity of providing a sales force, and the like to make themselves known is extremely difficult. They cannot get any assistance through the Ontario Development Corporation and therefore they are faced with the problem that they have a quality product and are having difficult times putting it on the market. I suspect it is not an isolated case. I think that throughout Canada, throughout Ontario in particular, there are many instances of this sort of a situation that we could put our finger on. I think we could find any number in almost any riding. Because of that, I want to move an amendment.

I move that in section 1, subsection 4a(1)(a)—and the wording is perhaps a little obscure—that after the word “equipment” in the second line the words “manufactured within Canada” be added. Therefore, it would read “‘machinery and equipment’ means machinery and equipment manufactured within Canada prescribed by the regulations,” and so on. I will wait until it has been moved and we will talk about it.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Deans moves that section 1 shall be amended in subsection 4a, clause (1)(a), so that after the word “equipment” in the second line the words “manufactured within Canada” be added.

Mr. Deans: The reason is fairly simple. I feel that there are two sides to this. I do not agree with what the minister has done in the first place. I suspect there is no way to reach the final resolution.

Mr. Sargent: That is a good starting point.

Mr. Deans: But my basic disagreement with the government is that this is not how to stimulate the economy. But, facing the fact that in a vote in this House we will lose, I want them to have the best bill that I think is possible to benefit all of the people in Ontario and all of the people of Canada.

I believe that if we, at least, ensure—that we make it necessary that those purchasers in Ontario look within the Dominion of Canada first—then there is the possibility that we might in some way affect beneficially the manufacturers of equipment that operate within this Dominion, and in so doing we may well create employment and we may well salvage some of the intent of the bill. But if we follow through with it as it is presently written, my feeling and knowledge of the industry, having worked in the equipment industry, is that it will inevitably mean that the manufacture will be outside of this province and outside of this country, and that most of the work and the manufacturing of the equipment itself will be done in another country, and that the benefit in terms of employment and increased productivity will, out of necessity, then accrue to another country. I believe that in this country, if we are going to abate a certain portion of the costs, we should do so to those people who can best provide employment opportunities and they are located right here. I ask the minister to consider that particular argument.

Mr. Sargent: Hear, hear. Well done.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, perhaps we can approach the thing from a different point of view, or simply reword it. We are anxious, I think, over here to learn to what extent—this is one small question—does this legislation act as offsetting legislation against the imposition of the sales tax upon production equipment and machinery.

To what extent is it overlapping between the two statutes? To what extent do you seek to eliminate the impact of what we thought—and we argued bitterly on that occasion as I remember—was a repressive deflationary tax, a tax that was designed in effect to slow down the economy and not to increase the overall employment, life and vitality?

It was basically a kind of anti-inflationary thing, and to that extent co-extensive with what Ottawa was doing. We felt that it was a mistake. Therefore, I know that this has a wider impact on the total economy—it will have and was meant to have—than the production machinery tax. But to what extent does one coincide with the other or overlap the other? To what extent will this legislation be an alleviation from the detrimental effects, as we then argued and still argue, of the production machinery.

To what extent, in other words, has the government grown repentant of its own past sins in the area of taxation policy? What my colleague had to say with respect to directing upon this economy and not upon any other economy the benefits, such as they are, however much a modicum they may be, to stimulate again life in this present economy with 200,000 people out of work, to direct it upon the purchase of machinery in Canada, might give us a little fillip, an extra lift, and give some validity to the present legislation which it presently lacks completely. Maybe my colleague can rescue the minister from his own toils, from his own inability to think through these matters to reach conclusions economically, that would be of immediate benefit to the people of this country.

I would ask the minister to take it under serious advisement tonight and to bend. However obtuse and obstructive the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Bales) is, if you remember, as it got close to the deadline the other night, he bent in the wind. I have never seen him do it before. It may be even that some of the hon. ministers are becoming human.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): No, no, that is not true.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, I compliment the members of the NDP for supporting the suggestion that we originally put to the provincial Treasurer, who has been notable by his absence throughout this debate. We support this amendment unreservedly.

Mr. Sargent: Where is the Treasurer tonight?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Very close at hand.

Mr. Singer: We raised the question with the provincial Treasurer as to whether or not his great revelation was going to indicate that there would be the purchase in Ontario, or even in Canada, of production equipment. The minister flew off at his usual tangent and said: "What difference does it make as long as people are buying?" That is what he said.

It is a pity. Tonight we have the benefit of the Premier, who has not yet joined in. We do not have the benefit of the Treasurer. His folly is not being defended. Even the Premier is not defending him.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not need to, I assure you.

Mr. Singer: The poor Minister of Revenue is tagged with the job of defending an indefensible budget.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The hon. member does not have to worry about me.

Mr. Singer: I would like to hear a definitive statement from at least the Premier, who is here tonight—he is supposed to be the boss; whether he is or not we have some doubts—about whether or not he really believes that he is going to promote something in Canada or in Ontario. That was the thrust of our questions, and that is the thrust of this amendment which we will support. We are interested in jobs for Canadians and nothing else. We are not interested in your favoritism to big corporations.

Mr. Sargent: Hear, hear.

Mr. Singer: And if he is meaningful in his budget philosophy, the Premier will take over the debate tonight from the unfortunate Minister of Revenue—

Mr. Sargent: Yes, deal him out.

Mr. Singer: —who is charged with the indefensible job of defending the illogical, and say: "I will change government policy." He is the only man who can do it. I wonder if he has the courage?

Mr. Sargent: Hear, hear.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment and, of course, along with others would hope that the Minister of Revenue would give the amendment some consideration.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am going to wait until 9 and see if the member does.

Mr. Singer: If I can be assured that the Prime Minister is going to stay—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. The member for Hamilton East has the floor.

Mr. Singer: All the Prime Minister is going to do is sit and smile.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is better than a can of worms.

An hon. member: Let the member turn the Prime Minister into a tomato.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Let us hear the member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Singer: The members heard what the former Prime Minister said: "Davis for better or worse."

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Minister of Highways and Transport): What has this government got the hon. member for?

Mr. Chairman: The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman, when one looks at a bill of this nature, and likely to any bill, he looks to the end to see what is entailed in the coming into force. We are told by section 4—is it?—that this bill is deemed to come into effect on April 26, 1971, past.

I wondered if the minister or the government, in arriving at their ways and means of stirring the economy, have considered what effect it is going to have in Ontario? What is taking place now? Let us take the construction that is going on in Stelco. They are in the throes, and have been for the past eight months, of one of their major expansion programmes. That is, the development of number three blooming and billet mill.

I daresay that they have plans for all the machinery to go into that mill. They likely have some of it ordered already. This would have taken place without this incentive. We have the Dominion Foundries and Steel, who have had a continuing expansion programme on for the last five years, reaching their peak about this time of this year in new development and expansion. They would have been doing that without any incentive.

Has the government investigated the kind of development that is going on now in industry and that would have been going on without this incentive? And what percentage that would be of the total in Ontario? Because if you take the expansion in Stelco, and in Dominion Foundries, and the proposed development in Nanticoke by Stelco, you might find that about 50 per cent of the potential in this province is already under way and would have been effective without this incentive. It might have been effective by only applying after a certain date this year where we could have saved the taxpayers half of the $125 million.

Has the minister any idea if this kind of research has taken place? If not, it seems fair to say that even with the additions made by Stelco, who in any sense do not need this kind of incentive, Dominion Foundries, who in any sense do not need this kind of incentive, may account for 50 per cent of the development in this field in this year. And if we go back to April 26 as the Act provides, when it is deemed to have gone into force, they can maybe fall into this type of tax credit and if that is the case it is nothing less than a shame, because if Dominion Foundries and Stelco need this kind of a credit there is something wrong with their thinking.

I would like the minister to tell me whether or not the government in planning this bill, this measure, has taken any account of what has been happening in the last few months in this province as far as the programme for expansion in industry

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Are you calling for a vote under section 1, because I have an amendment to section 2.

Mr. Chairman: We are not that far yet. This is on subsection—

Interjection by an hon member.

Mr. Bullbrook: If I wanted to ask the member, I would ask him. I asked the Chairman and I want to have his ruling. Okay?

Mr. Deans: One would think that after 3½ years, he would know.

Mr. Bullbrook: The member and I have been here since 1967; he cannot pontificate to me.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, in supporting the amendment of the member for—

Mr. Lawlor: He is riding a palomino to-night.

Mr. Pilkey: Something happened in Sarnia?

Mr. Lawlor: Did Dow Chemical—

Mr. Bullbrook: I wanted to buy his mobile home and he would not sell it.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, this party supports the amendment of the member for Wentworth insofar as the motivation behind this whole bill has been to solve the unemployment situation. Anyone can see a minister of the Crown bringing in a bill of such magnitude, to use their words, to generate $125 million of Ontario's money to solve the unemployment situation. Turn it into jobs.

The majority of these funds, I submit to you, Mr. Chairman, could well be, as suggested by my colleague from Waterloo North (Mr. Good), that these funds could generate automation that would result in people in corporate positions buying machinery that would displace people. So in effect this whole legislation could be to lose jobs for people by the effect of this minister's submission. He has the audacity to come into this House and in his first submission to this House—and I can say this kindly, as a member he is good; but as a minister he lacks the sagacity, the intelligence, the knowledge to describe the exemptions.

Mr. Chairman: We are discussing the amendment.

Mr. Sargent: Yes, I know. I am discussing the amendment, and then my colleague from Wentworth—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Talk about the amendment.

Mr. Sargent: All right. He is asking this House to give him a blank cheque—

Hon. Mr. Davis: To whom are we making out this cheque? That is the question.

Mr. Sargent: That is a hell of a good question.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There is no cheque.

Mr. Lewis: The Premier can answer that.

Mr. Sargent: The leader of the New Democratic Party said the government is making out the cheque to its corporate friends.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No way.

Mr. Lewis: That is right.

Mr. Sargent: Believe me, and the Premier knows it is true.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Never.

Mr. Lewis: Remember, they are getting a five per cent rebate on what this government gives to them.

Mr. Sargent: Listen, I have been in this business a long time. I know the business of policy, and you are trying to con the public. You do not con me a bit. I know that you are playing ball with your corporate friends. I am fully aware of it.

Mr. Chairman: Back to the amendment and you will address the Chair.

Mr. Sargent: I am saying to the minister that he comes into this House, Mr. Chairman, and he does not have the facts; he does not know what he is talking about. He cannot delineate the facts of the bill. This bill is a key platform of this government in its budget speech. They hang their hat on this one.

Mr. Pilkey: Pretty weak.

Mr. Sargent: They hang their hat on this bill. It is going to solve the unemployment situation. Baloney. I say baloney.

Mr. Lawlor: Get mad.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: He is getting a little overworked, is he not?

Mr. Sargent: The minister must admit that he does not know, but he supplies us the information after the bill is passed. What a bunch of nonsense! Even the most inept county or village councillor would not pull that on his reeve or his council. He is trying to sell us this bill of goods. I have been in this business a long time and they do not kid me a bit; I do not buy this malarkey. The smiling Premier can bring the most important thing into this House—he sits there smiling; he is going to solve unemployment, and he has got to quit smiling, because people are getting fed up with this nonsense. I will not buy that bill and I support my colleague from Wentworth.

Mr. Lewis: You know what that smile masks, do you not?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Chairman—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Before the hon. minister, I just want to express a personal point of view with respect to the amendment, in that the—

Mr. Peacock: How many personal points of view can a Prime Minister have?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I am entitled to a personal point of view.

Mr. Lewis: Such humility!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I only regret that the member for Downsview has absented himself—obviously to watch the hockey game.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I must say, Mr. Chairman, that any fixation I have with respect to absence was partially related to observations from the member for Scarborough West in his contribution of questionable character in the Throne debate.

Mr. Lewis: I am not of questionable character. I am of very good character.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no. I said the contribution was—not you personally. I would never question your personal character; certainly not here; I mean, I might elsewhere. But I would hope the member for Grey-Bruce—no, he is here; he is back. The member for Downsview—

Mr. Singer: It is good to come back.

Mr. Lewis: It is like coming down the aisle at O'Keefe Centre.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Chairman, the member for Scarborough West says the member for Downsview has just returned from the O'Keefe Centre. Was that—

Mr. Lewis: Like coming down the aisle.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, like coming down the aisle at the O'Keefe Centre.

Mr. Singer: But my conscience disturbs me about the way you run the province.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I am delighted the member for Downsview's conscience is stirred on occasion. I have yet to see it really happen here in this House, but tonight I am delighted to hear it.

Mr. Singer: You are at your less than best tonight.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, Mr. Chairman, I would only observe that my less than best, I hope, is somewhat superior to the best of the member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: It is not very good.

Hon. Mr. Davis: If the member for Downsview will give me an opportunity, shall we say, to rationalize the fallacy of his argument—to me one of the most questionable contributions that he has made in some years in this House—as it relates to the support of the amendment from the member for Wentworth.

Mr. Chairman, the bill has two effects. Let us put all the cards on the table. There are two effects. One is the probable effect as it relates to the development of the equipment and machinery industry of all kinds in this province. The other relates to the fact that the installation of machinery and equipment from whatever source will create capital expansion by way of plant facilities and job opportunities as a result.

For the member for Downsview to support in any sort of sophisticated way the amendment from the member for Wentworth, which would restrict any form of machinery placement or equipment placement in our plants to Canadian-produced material only, would have a completely inhibiting effect on this.

Mr. Deans: It would develop equipment manufacturing in Canada.

Mr. Pilkey: At least there would be more jobs.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There most certainly would. Mr. Chairman, there are a number of industries where—

Mr. Chairman: Point of order?

Mr. Sargent: Yes, I understand I was supporting the amendment of the hon. member for Wentworth, which said, "manufactured within Canada."

Hon. Mr. Davis: All I am saying, Mr. Chairman, is that it is the height of stupidity to say in this day and age that any machinery and equipment placed in any plant in this province should be confined to Canadian-made equipment.

Mr. Bullbrook: We are not saying that.

Mr. Deans: We are not saying that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The members are.

Mr. Gisborn: We are only saying it will apply.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But, Mr. Chairman, there are pieces of equipment where the component parts can come from some other jurisdiction.

Mr. Lewis: That is right. Then they do not get their rebate. A ridiculous proposition.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But then, if they do not get the rebate, there will not be any incentive to place the machinery.

Mr. Bullbrook: That is the point.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is not. Listen, even Bobby Orr watches are not made in Canada; they are all from Switzerland.

Mr. Sargent: The Premier got his for nothing.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No I did not. It was my son who got it, not me.

Mr. Chairman, I have to point out to the hon. member for Downsview, it is ridiculous to put this inhibiting amendment and restrict the kind of equipment that can be utilized in the development of further capital plant expansion. It makes no sense whatsoever. To oppose the bill in principle—that is the position of the opposition parties. But when we are trying to make it work—recognizing there is a great sense of urgency in this province to move the economy forward—to inhibit it where the amendment suggests, to me is totally ridiculous.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): So why does the Premier use such feeble methods to do it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is. It is totally ridiculous, and I would think that the hon. members opposite, particularly in the Liberal Party, would have enough sense to recognize that supporting this amendment would have not only an inhibiting effect, it would substantially restrict the impact of this legislation—

Mr. Sargent: Such a lot of nonsense.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —so that the industries and the manufacturing concerns can move ahead immediately with this kind of expansion.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That is not right.

Mr. Sargent: The Premier does not believe that himself.

Hon. Mr. Davis: This is the whole intent behind the bill.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: I am very happy, Mr. Chairman, that the Premier has deigned to dignify this debate with his presence and with his comments. I am very sorry to have to say that the Premier is left on his own without the able advice of his noisy Treasurer. However, I think, Mr. Chairman—

Hon. Mr. Davis: If your amendment were included it would be total disaster.

Mr. Singer: The substantial point, Mr. Chairman, in this debate relates to the lack of understanding of the Premier about what is in fact at issue. How he got sold a bill of goods to include this item as the cornerstone of his budget speech, or his minister's budget speech, escapes my understanding completely. How he is able to stand up tonight and espouse the theory that it really does not matter who gets the benefit of our $125 million bribe—because that is what it is—directed to the wealthy corporations, again escapes my understanding.

Hon. Mr. Davis: What wealthy corporations?

Mr. Singer: Why it does not appeal to the Premier that it makes some reasonable sense that if we are going to infuse into our economy an investment to the extent of $125 million that that should not be directed to Ontario manufacturers of equipment, or at least to Canadian manufacturers of equipment, leaves me completely without any understanding.

Why the Premier is not able to grasp the simple fact of what he is doing just escapes all understanding. The amendment moved by the hon. member for Wentworth makes abundant good sense, and it is in complete line with the questions that we addressed to the Premier and his Treasurer. The Minister of Revenue was very quiet at that point. He did not have to answer and he did not have to embarrass himself, shortly after the budget was introduced.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The minister did not embarrass himself at all.

Mr. Singer: The point was, Mr. Chairman, that if we are going to take $125 million out of our potential provincial revenue there should be some quid pro quo—there should be something coming back. Where it is going to come back from if we buy machinery in Germany, or in Texas, or in Austria? That is fine. What particular benefit is that going to be to Ontario and employment? The most chauvinistic group that has ever descended upon the people of Ontario is this government and chauvinistically they proceed—

Hon. Mr. Davis: If the hon. member does not see that, I give up. There is no hope for him.

Mr. Singer: They are so integrated that the people of Quebec are now erecting barriers to inspect our eggs as they might cross the border.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No.

Mr. Singer: Surely, Mr. Chairman, it makes basic common sense that when this kind of measure is introduced to us there should be at least some beginning of an effort to indicate that it is going to benefit the Canadian economy, the Ontario economy! But this minister does not care. The Premier does not care. As long as it benefits the economy of his wealthy corporation friends, that, in fact, is sufficient. That is where he stops.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Who said it does?

Mr. Singer: Even his Minister of Trade and Development (Mr. Grossman) this afternoon, when he introduced his new programme for spending $7.5 million to encourage industry by way of a variety of loans which he outlined in his remarks, said, "There will be conditions to make sure it is of benefit." Not here. This is $7.5 million where the Minister of Trade and Development, having been substantially embarrassed on three occasions previously, at least, has now decided there must be conditions. But not tonight. Tonight, we are giving away $125 million without any conditions at all and the Premier has the cheek, the nerve, to stand in his place and say, "This is good and do not ask any questions." It is on the same parallel—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I said nothing about asking any questions.

Mr. Singer: —as his now Minister of University Affairs (Mr. White) who says, "You have no right to know. Trust us and everything will be fine."

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member has not got it right.

Mr. Singer: Frankly, Mr. Chairman, we do not trust the Premier. We do not trust his absent Treasurer. We feel sorry for the Minister of Revenue who is unable to explain what this is trying to do. We think, Mr. Chairman, that reasonable restrictions directed to Canadian benefit are logical and sensible and we shall support this amendment.

Mr. Sargent: Hear, hear.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Wentworth.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member for Downsview is all wrong.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, it is pretty obvious that there has been a major split develop here as to what is best for Ontario and Canada. I think, surely, the Prime Minister must realize—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Where is the split now?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I thought it was obvious several years ago.

Mr. Deans: It was obvious several years ago, but in this particular bill it comes home. Surely the Prime Minister must realize that the purchase of equipment is not necessarily job-producing.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No; but, by and large it is; the member knows it and so does everybody else.

Mr. Deans: The question is that it is not necessarily job-producing. And the Prime Minister agrees.

Hon. Mr. Davis: By and large it is, and the hon. member knows it.

Mr. Deans: Again we go back. The purchase of equipment is not necessarily job-producing.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Is the concern of the member about producing equipment that is not employment-producing?

Mr. Deans: In fact, modern technology dictates, and any industry that you care to go into will show, that the purchase of new equipment, generally speaking, means that fewer people are required to operate it.

An hon. member: Hear, hear.

Mr. Deans: That is modern technology. Now, if we are going to benefit from this kind of taxing legislation, then surely we have to ensure that someone in Canada reaps the benefit, that someone in Canada goes to work as the result of what we are doing. The Treasurer said in the budget paper that this was a full employment budget and this was one of the cornerstones.

You agree with me that it is not necessarily so, that equipment purchase will create employment. But it is necessarily so that equipment manufacturers will create employment. It is absolutely necessarily so that equipment being manufactured creates employment.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No one argues that.

Mr. Deans: Fine. Then surely it makes some sense, as the responsible government in Ontario, responsible not only for Ontario but for a major portion of Canada, that we should try to ensure, by the legislation that we pass, that the people of Canada benefit. Surely we, as a government, have the requirement upon us that we take every precaution necessary to guarantee that any money that we spend that rightfully belongs to the taxpayer—and that $125 million the government is talking about is taxpayers' money at the moment—that any money that we spend that rightfully belongs to the taxpayers—

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is a very specious argument. If the tax is not there, it is not the taxpayers' money, for heaven's sake!

Mr. Peacock: The Prime Minister could not have been listening to the debate on second reading.

Mr. Deans: He should have listened to the earlier debate.

Hon. Mr. Davis: What I am saying is that it is a specious argument.

Mr. Deans: He should have listened to the earlier debate. Aside from that—we will deal with that—he is obviously not with it. The whole point of the thing—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would say the member is not with it.

Mr. Deans: What in heaven's name does the government see as its responsibility—to guarantee that the major manufacturers are going to receive some kind of a monetary rebate from this government or to try to find jobs for people in Canada?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Right.

Mr. Deans: Which?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The latter.

Mr. Deans: Right, the latter. Then, assuming that the government is going after the latter, the easiest way to do it by use of this terrible legislation is to at least guarantee that the employment that is derived from the effects of this legislation is derived in Canada. There are manufacturers—and if you want me to name them I will tell you—there are manufacturers of equipment in Canada who are finding it very difficult to compete with the equipment manufacturers in the United States. Very, very difficult. And this kind of an incentive may just provide the additional impetus required—may just provide it.

Surely as a government it is your primary function to ensure that right here in Ontario and in Canada there are jobs provided for people? I do not care whether they are working in New York State, or Washington, or down in California. I could not care less. My only concern is the people who are living in Ontario and who live in Canada, and I want to see the money we spend, spent to benefit them.

If the minister can prove to me in this House that somehow or other it is proper that we make available to people in other parts of the world an opportunity to improve their employment picture at the expense of the people of Ontario, then do it, but do it to the people of Ontario who are unemployed.

It is ridiculous. Your measure at this time is wrong in the first instance, and the fact that you will not at least inhibit it to the Canadian market to try and ensure that the—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I like your choice of word, "inhibit."

Mr. Deans: That is right, inhibit. That is what I mean, too. I mean inhibit.

Hon. Mr. Davis: You really do not care about the unemployed. You really do not want them to have job opportunities.

Mr. Deans: What I am saying in this, and you agreed with me, that every piece of equipment manufactured in Canada provides employment—every piece. What I am saying to you, and I have said it before and perhaps for the last—

Mr. Chairman: We are becoming very repetitive in our arguments now.

Mr. Deans: I am going to tell you. You may as well put up with it because I am going to be here until midnight if I have to because I am not giving up.

Mr. Chairman: No, there is a rule against repetition.

Mr. Deans: Well, then, that is fine. We will change to another way of approaching it.

Mr. Chairman: It may still be repetitious.

Mr. Deans: There is an opportunity for us, in many ways—

Mr. Sargent: Get after the real one.

Mr. Deans: —to support the machinery manufacturers in Ontario and in Canada.

Mr. Singer: Is the Treasurer here? Good, good.

Mr. Sargent: He came out of the wood-work.

Mr. Deans: There is an opportunity through this legislation for us to support the home-front manufacturer, and I say to you that if you fail to take this opportunity you are neglecting the very basic needs of this economy at this time and you are not fit to govern.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Chairman, I would like to have your consideration, because I believe that, having carried the principle of this bill in its broad implications, this motion is restrictive and therefore changes the principle greatly.

Mr. Deans: Nonsense.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman, I will stick to the amendment and I am pleased that the Prime Minister has opted to defend the bill—

Mr. Singer: Are you asking for a ruling?

Mr. Gisborn: —because we were disappointed it was not defended in principle.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. In my opinion that amendment is in order.

The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Singer: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gisborn: I am pleased that the Prime Minister has decided to defend the bill, even if it is in these late stages of the House in committee, because there are questions to be raised. We are hoping for the answers that we could not get on the principle of the bill and, that is, in the sense that we are going to have to depend on regulations.

I raise the question of what research the government does in relation to this measure, taking into account the industries in Ontario that are now under major plant expansion programmes? I mentioned Stelco that may now have ordered machinery, or is in the throes of ordering machinery. Would it have done it, if the Prime Minister had put a tax on?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I ask the member for Downsview not to leave.

Mr. Singer: I am still here.

Mr. Gisborn: Would Dominion Foundries have done it? You can be assured that whatever the cost is in the Stelco expansion and Dofasco expansion, it will be a great percentage of the total in this province, the jobs they have on now. These have been made retroactive to April 26. What impetus is that going to be to new jobs? It is just handing them clear money. Will the minister answer this position?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Chairman, I think I can deal with that question very readily. I have to say, first of all, in answer to some of the other questions, and I say for the second or third time, that I certainly do not need any sympathy from the member for Downsview. I will look after myself.

Mr. Sargent: The minister has not done so to date.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: As far as the member for Grey-Bruce is concerned, his stupid arrogance is not necessary as far as I am concerned at all.

Mr. Sargent: Come on. Get off it. Why does the minister not grow up?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I covered his points before and in his whole speech he said not one word about the amendment—not one word until he was called to time.

An hon. member: He does not understand.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Chairman, let me deal with the situation—

Mr. Sargent: The minister is sick.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: If there is anybody sick around here, it is the member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Lewis: One would sense a certain rivalry between the minister and the member.

Mr. Sargent: There is a wee bit. He is doing himself a disservice. He is not that bad a guy.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Let me deal with the situation the member from Hamilton has raised.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think that is a very fair question to ask, but I think if the member looks at the entire terms of our legislation, he will see that even if there is a company such as the one that he refers to which has a programme of production and of acquisition—

Mr. Sargent: Will the minister speak into the microphone. We cannot hear him.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —we are endeavouring in this legislation to expedite its programme so that we can deal with the situation we are trying to solve in the Province of Ontario right now. I believe that that is the thrust of what the government is endeavouring to do and if, perchance, some of that equipment might fall within the terms of our legislation, we are prepared to support that as well, no matter who they may be.

In dealing with the terms of the amendment, I certainly must agree that the Prime Minister has dealt with it very thoroughly—

Mr. Sargent: I would think the Prime Minister has not.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —and I would have said precisely the same thing that he has said, “That we would not—”

Mr. Sargent: The minister did not know the answer before he said it. Why did he not say it before now?

Mr. Lewis: Not so much eloquence.

Mr. Bullbrook: If the minister would not put up his arms, he would be like Leslie Frost.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Let us go over on to the next page, page 2 of the bill—

Mr. Sargent: We are still on the first clause.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —and it will explain more fully—we will deal with it when we get there—that the entire thrust of the programme is in the Province of Ontario. All the machinery must be placed and used in the Province of Ontario. Surely the member for Wentworth—listen, give me a chance to finish; I listened to you.

Mr. Deans: I did not say a word.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The member was about to.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think he is right.

Mr. Deans: Is that not imputing motive?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I am quite sure, Mr. Chairman, that he would not want to inhibit or restrict any jobs in the Province of Ontario by saying, you cannot buy this piece of machinery somewhere in the United States or any other country.

Mr. Sargent: Let them pay the tax on it. That is all we ask.

Mr. Gisborn: The minister is taking the question to the lowest common denominator.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: If in fact, when it is brought back to Canada, placed in position and into function, it does, in fact, produce jobs in the Province of Ontario, that is what we are trying to do and that is why I will ask my supporters to vote against the amendment.

Mr. Deans: Nonsense.

Mr. Lewis: This is just too much.

Mr. Deans: It is wrong.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, a question. The minister's reply is so weak that we should just regard the amendment. The man we should talk to is the Treasurer. He is the man who is the “villain of the piece here.” I ask myself, and I ask the Chairman and I ask the House; “Would you buy a used car from that man?”

Hon. Mr. Davis: Indeed.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I sure would not buy one from the member.

Mr. Sargent: If the minister begged for things he could not buy, I would give them to him. He begged for them before. I would give them to him.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That will be the day the hon. member would give away anything.

Mr. Sargent: But the thing is, these two operators over there, the smiling Premier and the Treasurer—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Back to the amendment. The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. J. Jessiman (Fort William): Do not be jealous.

Mr. Sargent: They remind me of two one-legged men trying to walk. It is a sick situation and no one knows where they are going. They pass the buck down to the Treasurer there.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We do? It is too bad the member cannot follow us.

Mr. Sargent: Well, they are both going different directions. That is all I know.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, we go the same way all the time. It is so different from over there. Does the member remember the lecture he had the other night from the member for Sudbury (Mr. Sopha)? Does he remember that?

Mr. Sargent: That is understandable, because I say what I think.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is the member's mistake. If he would think first before he says anything he would be in much better shape. Even the member for Wellington South (Mr. Worton) agrees with me. I can tell by the smile.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce on the amendment, please.

Mr. Sargent: That is a matter of opinion about Ottawa. My people there like to know what I think about certain things and I tell them what I think. I do not go behind anything to say these things. I say them out in front. But I want to say that we have the support of this amendment from the member for Wentworth, and I think that in this first section where the key point is—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please; order, please! We are being repetitious again.

Mr. Sargent: Here we are again. That fact it says here that, "machinery and equipment means machinery and equipment," and his amendment is, "manufactured in Canada." And then you go on further in your motion where it says, "It does not include automobiles and trucks and—"

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes it does.

Mr. Sargent: "—any property that is described in the corporation inventory or that part of any property in respect of which a loan is made under the Ontario Development Corporation or the Northern Ontario Development Corporation."

Mr. R. J. Boyer (Muskoka): He can read!

Mr. Sargent: You name me very few properties. There are a few manufacturing operations in the Province of Ontario that do not have a loan with ODC and who in the hell are we talking about then?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Several thousand! May I ask the hon. member for Downsview who is winning?

Mr. Sargent: The point I am making, Mr. Chairman, is that we have an omnibus operation here that says, "Any person who is not—

Mr. Singer: Two-to-one for Montreal—the first period over.

Mr. Sargent: Please, will you please hold off? You are taking the government off the hook here.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Elmer to a "T."

Mr. Jessiman: Put on your pointed cap.

Mr. Sargent: We are saying that we are going to exempt anybody who is going to buy automobiles or trucks and any corporation that has a loan with the ODC or the NODC—

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is logical.

Mr. Sargent: Oh, that is pretty logical. I think it is good business to do that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Good.

Mr. Sargent: But who do you talk to then? Because most corporations—

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Treasurer): The Downtowner Hotel.

Mr. Sargent: Oh, come on, hold on. Now you should know better than this. You should know better than this. Most American corporations in the Province of Ontario—most big corporations—have a loan with the ODC or the NODC and who else are they going to talk to in big business then? Who are you talking to—

Mr. Pilkey: And they all have a truck.

Mr. Sargent: —that you can loan money to under this deal here? You name me 10 firms in Ontario that have not got an operational loan—GE, Westinghouse, Union Carbide—the whole bit have got deals with the ODC and who are we talking about? You are kidding the troops.

Mr. I. Haskett (Ottawa South): Mr. Chairman, I move the question be now put.

Mr. Sargent: Well, I do not.

Mr. Pilkey: You are not going to support it?

Mr. Sargent: I certainly am not. That is phoney.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! I now put the question without further debate. I now put the question.

Mr. Deans: When did we start that?

Mr. G. Ben (Humber): Mr. Chairman, I have been sitting here patiently all day—

Mr. Chairman: I am sorry, I am sorry!
The question—order, please. The motion was put that the question be now put.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order.

Mr. Singer: You are not going to muzzle the debate, surely?

Mr. Lawlor: What is this—closure?

Mr. Deans: No, you cannot do that.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of Mr. Dean's amendment. Oh, I am sorry. All those in favour of Mr. Haskett's motion, please say "aye."

Mr. Singer: No, Mr. Chairman, if that is a motion, that is debatable.

Mr. Chairman: No, not this one.

Mr. Singer: That the motion be now put? Well, all right, whether it is debatable or not, it is muzzling.

Mr. Chairman: This motion is not debatable.

Those in favour of Mr. Haskett's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the "ayes" have it.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, point of order. On a point of order.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Call in the members.

Mr. Sargent: The member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Bukator) has been trying to speak for half an hour.

Mr. Singer: Vote whether or not we be muzzled. Okay. There is your big chance, Bill.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Mr. Haskett had moved that the question be now put. Those in favour of the motion will please rise.

Those opposed will please rise.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. I think we could take it for granted that the motion is lost.

Mr. Singer: Let the debate continue.

Mr. Chairman: The debate on the amendment will continue. The member for Niagara Falls.

Mr. G. Bukator (Niagara Falls): Mr. Chairman—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: What a great new wave.

Mr. Bukator: Mr. Chairman, at least we cannot accuse the new Prime Minister of cutting anybody off. Congratulations.

Mr. Gisborn: They reversed their coat. They said yes first of all.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I did not hear them.

Mr. Bukator: May I comment on Bill 26?

Mr. Chairman: Just on this amendment.

Mr. Bukator: The amendment that is for the Canadian-made machinery only. I do not care whether it is Canadian-made or otherwise—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: There is an honest man.

Mr. Bukator: —but I would like to speak on the amendment. I would not want the Prime Minister to leave because I think this makes sense.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Okay. I will wait.

Mr. Bukator: If you are concerned about making jobs with this bill, if you believe that this bill would do the job for you in the fashion that was described by the provincial Treasurer, would you not have thought at that time that taking five per cent off building materials for housing would have done a better job for you? Do you not believe that more people would have gone to work through that effort? Would you not believe that by going to Ottawa—I do not know whether they will accept the provincial Treasurer there now—but would you not believe that by taking the 11 per cent off material there—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think, they would welcome him.

Mr. Bukator: —Ottawa sales tax and the five per cent of the province would have created the jobs that are necessary. This would have been the better approach rather than use this method or this vehicle to try to bring about the jobs. I am the first one in this House to say to this government that if it is possible to create jobs through this bill, I would be the first to vote for it. As you know I have done this before and I will do it again if I believe you are right. But I think you have taken the wrong course in this instance. I do not believe this bill with or without the amendment will accomplish what you want and, therefore, you are not rendering the service to the public that you think you are going to in this province. So I say to you, as forcibly and as sincerely as I know how, that if you would have thought this through—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! You are really discussing the principle of the bill which has been passed. We are now discussing the amendment.

Mr. Bukator: I was coming to the amendment. I wanted to have a bit of a preamble to put this particular debate that I have heard for the last couple of hours at least on an even keel to make something intelligent out of the chaos.

Mr. Chairman: Just on the amendment.

Mr. Boyer: It is about time.

Mr. Bukator: You see, I even have government members agreeing with me.

Mr. Pilkey: They are not right too often.

Mr. Bukator: Since we are talking about the amendment to this bill, we have no other choice but to support it. We have to look at some semblance of organization and common sense and reasoning and this is a step—

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member just said he did not care whether it was made in Canada or elsewhere.

Mr. Bukator: No; to put the record straight, I said—the hon. Prime Minister, being a lawyer, is quite an intelligent individual. That is why they made him Prime Minister.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: That is a non sequitur, if I ever heard one.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I accept it.

Mr. Bukator: I said I did not care, but yet I think that if we are going to take some steps to assist some people and work is what we are trying to create, this bill is not going to bring this about. Therefore, we have no other choice but to support the amendment. At least let the public know that you have taken a wrong course to bring about employment which we are all interested in. Therefore we have to support the amendment, it is as simple as that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is not quite but—

Mr. Chairman: The member for Brantford.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, on the same point: In a recent publication of the Treasury Department you stated you had econometric models of the Province of Ontario, various inputs and outputs that can be juggled into the province to give you an idea of what the outputs would be in terms of jobs, gross provincial growth and so on.

The question has been put to the Treasurer. He in no way indicated, nor did he try to indicate, nor can he indicate for that matter, just exactly where the province is going or in which way the $125 million is going to provide jobs. This is a very sad reflection on the state of your department. Just what are you guys doing down there? You have four or five, how many economists? How many econometricians do you have? What kind of studies are you doing to find out just exactly what is going on? Just exactly where will this money be spent? In what industry?

Which industries in Canada will possibly stand to gain from the orders that may possibly be produced by that kind of a five per cent rebate you are going to give? You cannot give those figures and yet you are supposed to have the staff, and you are supposed to have the, shall we say, economic expertise to know what you are talking about.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Order. We are on the definition section—

Mr. Makarchuk: Yes I know.

Mr. Chairman: —not the principle of the bill.

Mr. Makarchuk: Absolutely. This is what—

Mr. Chairman: This is the definition of machinery and equipment.

Mr. Makarchuk: Right. That is it exactly. I must say, in terms of econometrics—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Chairman, in terms of econometrics, the Treasurer could have indicated to us that he was asked this question—if he allows a—

Mr. Chairman: No. That is not what we are—

Mr. Makarchuk: —five per cent rebate if we are to produce jobs in Ontario.

Mr. Chairman: Order. Order, please. This is not the topic under discussion.

Mr. Makarchuk: Well we are getting to it. As the member for Niagara Falls said—

Mr. Chairman: No. Order, please.

Mr. Pilkey: That is just the preamble.

Mr. Makarchuk: It is a preamble and this is what we are trying to—

Mr. Chairman: Order. Order, please.

Mr. Sargent: Has the right—

Mr. Chairman: May I just point out again that we are discussing the amendment in the definition section having to do with machinery and equipment. The business of five per cent has nothing—

Mr. Makarchuk: Manufacturers—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. The Chairman is speaking.

Mr. Makarchuk: I thought you were finished.

Mr. Chairman: No I was not. I was right in the middle of a sentence.

Mr. Makarchuk: Well do not hesitate too long next time.

Mr. Chairman: We will take our time. The definition section is what we are discussing at this time and any other discussion will be ruled completely out of order. If the member has anything else to say on this, he may carry on.

Mr. Makarchuk: The amendment is dealing with the fact that the purchases should be made in Canada, and again the tool industry in Canada is not a highly developed industry, it is not a very viable industry. Most of the tools going into the manufacturing or into production in our plants, are purchased outside. I do not have the exact figures right now but the purchases by Canadian manufacturers of tools are quite high in comparison to the number of tools that are developed in Canada, that are produced in Canada.

The other point is the fact that manufacturing or making production tools, machine tools or equipment, is a very high labour-intensive industry. If you are producing production equipment you employ a lot of people. Also you employ rather highly skilled people, technical people, again, people who do not have employment at the moment. There is not enough work for them.

The amendment in itself is a very reasonable amendment, and all we are asking is to ensure that if this money is going to be spent, let it be spent in Canada. In the first place it makes the Canadian tool industry a more economically viable industry.

In the second place it will produce jobs. It will produce jobs for that particular segment of the Canadian working force that, at the moment, cannot find jobs. There are the draftsmen, designers, engineers and so on who are involved in the design and the eventual manufacture of tool-producing equipment.

It is a very valuable industry in Canada. Every other country concentrates more on the brainpower available in comparison to the hewers of wood and drawers of water concept of our existence, and this is one method that we could possibly move into that particular area and we are not doing this.

I would suggest that the government opposite take a very reasonable look at this thing and insist that this money be spent in Canada, because we do have a tool industry that is in trouble and has economic problems. One of the ways that you can ensure that it grows and develops is if you are going to give $125 million away, at least make sure you give it away to the people in Canada so they can gather some benefit from this.

Mr. Chairman: The Minister of Correctional Services.

Hon. C. J. S. Apps (Minister of Correctional Services): I just do not quite understand how the member can support that amendment, because as far as I can see it is not going to prevent companies in Canada from buying Canadian machinery. They are going to do that.

What the bill is doing is expanding the opportunity to many Canadian industries that would not be able to take advantage of it. There are many industries in this province that, for good or bad, have machinery that is made in the States. They cannot get it here. If they want to expand, or if they want to replace their machinery, then in order to take advantage of this they have to go and buy it in the States.

As far as the amendment is concerned, they are preventing those businesses—and many of them are small, and mine will be one of them. I could not take advantage of it. The machinery that we use comes from the States.

Do you mean to say that by this amendment industries such as mine would not be able to take advantage of this because you would confine it to Canadian machinery?

Mr. Lewis: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Apps: I cannot go along with this, because first of all you are going to confine us to Canadian machinery.

Mr. Deans: We did not think you would.

Hon. Mr. Apps: First of all, all you are doing is preventing certain industries that are just as legitimate and just as Canadian as anyone else—

Mr. Sargent: A point of order.

Hon. Mr. Apps: —from taking advantage of this.

Mr. Sargent: A point of order. The minister—

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Oh, sit down, you little pipsqueak!

Mr. Sargent: —is probably right, but he must realize the fact that 90 per cent—

Mr. Chairman: Order. That is not a point of order. Will the member take his seat. The hon. minister.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Apps: Mr. Chairman, let me expand this further. There are a great many industries in this province that have tried, over the years, to buy their machinery and their parts in Canada. They simply cannot. They have to buy it in the United States or in Great Britain.

Mr. Lewis: Right, and we agree with that.

Hon. Mr. Apps: And the very fact that you are going to prevent those industries—

Mr. Makarchuk: You are not preventing them.

Hon. Mr. Apps: You would prevent them, prevent those industries, because they cannot get the machinery anywhere else except some—

Mr. Lewis: The hon. minister does not understand the amendment.

Hon. Mr. Apps: I understand the amendment. You are going to confine it to Canadian machinery.

Mr. Lewis: No, just the rebates.

Hon. Mr. Apps: All right, just the rebates.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Hon. Mr. Apps: Then why should an industry that has to use foreign equipment be prevented from getting those rebates?

Mr. Lewis: Because your minister this afternoon introduced a programme specifically favouring Canadian companies.

Hon. Mr. Apps: I do not think the hon. member knows what he is talking about.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Hon. Mr. Apps: I think that those industries that have to use foreign equipment should be just as entitled to get that rebate as those who use Canadian equipment.

For that reason, and for a very practical standpoint as far as I am concerned, I will certainly vote against the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: The member for York Centre has the floor.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Wentworth. I support it, particularly because I think the incentive to develop processes in Canada is necessary.

I think perhaps there could be some refinement, similar to one that I believe Ottawa has, where, if there is definitely no other equipment available, nor possible to be made available, in Canada, then it might apply to production machinery that is imported.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Those are tariffs.

Mr. Deacon: It may be that the minister considers any proposal which gives an incentive to Canadian industry as a tariff. And yet his colleague, the Minister of Trade and Development, is suggesting that through the ODC there is going to be encouragement and special consideration for Canadian-controlled companies, and that they in principle support that. Is it a form of tariff? It is a support to Canadian industry, and should we be ashamed of that? I do not think we should be ashamed at all.

Hon. Mr. Apps: The idea is to promote jobs.

Mr. Deacon: And the most important thing is to be sure—

Mr. Lewis: Now the minister is changing.

Hon. Mr. Apps: I am not. I am expanding it.

Mr. Deacon: —that every possible incentive for machinery and equipment to be produced in Canada is given. And yet we have a situation that under this Act there is no special incentive for new equipment to be developed and produced in Canada. I think that is a very important source of jobs.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: It could not possibly develop in 23 months.

Mr. Deacon: I cannot hear the minister's comments.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: It could not possibly develop in 23 months and you must know that.

Mr. Deacon: I am surprised that the minister states it could not be developed in 23 months' time. To begin with, it should have been an elimination of the sales tax effective immediately, rather than in 23 months' time. But if he is going to go through this protracted method, and difficult method and complicated method of providing the incentive, there is plenty of equipment that could be developed and produced in Canada by the ingenious manufacturers and producers that we have in this country who could be given an advantage.

If it could not be, then the tax exemption would still apply if we made an amendment to embrace equipment that would not be available in Canada. There is a federal list that is available, it is kept up to date and could be used. I suggest that this amendment is far better than leaving the Act wide open as it now is and giving no real incentive to production of equipment here in Canada.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, I was very interested in the remarks made by the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands. I have sat with him on committees and I have heard him describe himself on many occasions as a small businessman who is very concerned with the future of his, I think it is his brickworks, in Kingston.

Mr. Sargent: He is still a great guy.

Mr. Singer: I would have been much more impressed with his argument had he said that the proposal made in the budget debate by the great economic seer of Ontario, the Treasurer, would have meant that in my business we were going to save X dollars, and in my business, my business, the Minister of Correctional Services' business, we were going to put to work five or six or eight or 10 people.

Mr. Chairman: Order. Let us get to the amendment, please.

Mr. Singer: I am talking exactly to the amendment and I am answering—

Mr. Chairman: Just a minute. Order. You are out of order on several points. To save time, we are discussing the definition section, machinery and equipment, not personalities—

Mr. Singer: Absolutely.

Mr. Chairman: —not personalities and across-the-floor talk.

Mr. Singer: Oh, not personalities.

Mr. Chairman: Please keep to the amendment.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, if I have infringed the rules by talking about personalities, let me phrase it this way. If the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands had indicated to us that in an industry that he is familiar with, the new proposal by the government of Ontario would have resulted in the preservation in Canada of X dollars in profit, and in the employment of Y number of Canadians who are not presently working, I would have been much more impressed, but the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands drew on his own personal experience as a result of his knowledge of small businesses, saying this may be good for small businesses. I would like the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands to expand on that theory that he enunciated.

For instance, Mr. Chairman, what would the member for Kingston and the Islands say would be the saving from this section 1 of this Act to an industry with which he is familiar, whether it is his own or somebody else's who has a reasonable, nominal profit—not a millionaire industry, a small industry in dollars. How many more people is the member for Kingston and the Islands satisfied would be employed, would be provided jobs? How much more to the national product of Ontario and of Canada would this section produce in contradistinction to the restriction that the machinery be bought in Canada, if it is available, and only under circumstances where it is not available that it be bought elsewhere?

Would the member for Kingston and the Islands, for instance, argue, Mr. Chairman, that—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! We are not discussing what the member for Kingston and the Islands—

Mr. Singer: Oh, I think we are. I think this is most pertinent.

Mr. Chairman: No, we are discussing this amendment, not what the member for—

Mr. Deans: The member is discussing the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please! We are not debating what the hon. minister from Kingston and the Islands has said, we are talking about this particular amendment.

Mr. Singer: Most germane.

Mr. Chairman: No, let us talk about this amendment.

Mr. Singer: With respect, Mr. Chairman, we are discussing section 1 which defines machinery and equipment and it delineates the benefits which can accrue to people who buy—

Mr. Chairman: We are discussing the amendment.

Mr. Singer: All right now. I am just trying to explain, Mr. Chairman, because I do not think you are with me, the benefits that will accrue to people who buy machinery within a fixed time period.

The member for Kingston and the Islands, in opposition to the NDP amendment, said it makes no sense to limit that purchase within Canada. I am replying in support of the amendment, which I support, and I am asking the member for Kingston and the Islands if that amendment is not carried.

Mr. Chairman: Order. We are not debating what the member for Kingston and the Islands—

Mr. Singer: No, Mr. Chairman, with respect, you are absolutely wrong! You are absolutely wrong.

Mr. Chairman, I am entitled to reply to the argument that he has put forward because he has argued against the amendment. In the event that you choose to rule me out of order, sir, I disagree with you, and I challenge your ruling. I would ask you to summon the Speaker to rule on your ruling.

Mr. Chairman: The Chairman's ruling has been challenged. All those in favour of the challenge?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Mr. Singer: You are going to muzzle us tonight.

Mr. Chairman: No, we are just voting on the Chairman's order, that is all.

Mr. Lewis: I am on a point of order, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Singer: Go ahead. I could not succeed, let us see if you can succeed.

Mr. Lewis: I am appealing to the Chairman to rephrase his objection to the member for Downsview's position, which is surely legitimate in the context of a debate, so that we can avoid yet another 15-minute ringing of the bell and delay of this struggle tonight. Can it be possible somehow to accommodate the view of the members on this side without forcing it to a vote?

Mr. Chairman: All right. The member's argument is quite reasonable. There has been a very wide latitude here tonight; we have strayed far, far away from what we should be discussing. I am willing to allow the member for Downsview to continue, provided he keeps on the amendment. We are not really debating what any one member is discussing here tonight; we are debating this particular amendment to this section here. If the member wishes to continue and try to keep in order, he may.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, if I can make myself any more explicit, perhaps it is my inability to be reasonably lucid in explaining. Let me try again.

The amendment moved by the member for the NDP was to the effect that section 1 be limited—

Hon. Mr. McKeough: We know what the amendment says.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: This is ridiculous.

Mr. Sargent: It is ridiculous legislation. That is why it is ridiculous.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The member is ridiculous.

Mr. Sargent: The minister always was. I will be okay tomorrow morning but he will still be ridiculous.

Mr. Chairman: We are not debating what one member says. We are debating the section of the bill.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, I just fail to understand within the context of the section, within the context of the amendment and within the context of the remarks made by the hon. member for Kingston and the Islands how I can possibly be out of order. The member for Kingston and the Islands and I may not agree, but surely, Mr. Chairman, it is germane in this debate and I can argue with him about his opinion. That is all I am trying to do. In fact, what the member for Kingston and the Islands said was that it makes no sense to adopt this amendment. He says he is opposed to the amendment. I say I am in favour of the amendment. And he advanced certain arguments.

I posed the question to the member for Kingston and the Islands to say, in relation to businesses with which he is familiar, in the event that this kind of restriction that the amendment deals with is not applicable, could he indicate to us, not in relation to IBM or Stelco or Texas Gulf Sulphur or Bell Telephone or General Motors but in relation to the ordinary small businesses with which the member for Kingston and the Islands is familiar, how many more Canadians this kind of a scheme is going to put to work?

My suspicion, Mr. Chairman, is that he has no idea. It will be of very small benefit to the kind of industry the member for Kingston and the Islands is familiar with, and maybe from his experience he could indicate to us, from that group of small industries with which he is familiar, how many jobs it is going to benefit them by.

The suggestion we have made during the course of this debate is going to benefit the big industries. The reason that we support the amendment is that we believe that the benefit should be directed to Canadians and directed where it is going to do the most good and directed where it is going to provide the most jobs.

So in simple language, Mr. Chairman, I ask the member for Kingston and the Islands to tell us how many dollars a small industry with which he is familiar is going to save and how many more Canadians it is going to put to work?

Hon. Mr. Apps: Mr. Chairman, I would be glad to try and answer that. As a matter of fact, he talked so long about it I almost forgot the answer I was going to give him when he first rose.

Mr. Singer: Well, I had trouble with the Chairman, I am sorry.

Hon. Mr. Apps: Mr. Chairman, what I am trying to point out is this: the object of this bill is to try and create more jobs for Canadians. All right. So in doing that we are going to give certain benefits to manufacturers if they buy more machinery—

Mr. Sargent: How many more men will they employ by the end of it?

Hon. Mr. Apps: All right, just a minute. Wait until I get to it. To buy more machinery, whether it is from Canada or the United States, in the hope that by doing this they will be able to expand their production, make it more efficient and so sell more of the things they manufacture and create more jobs. All right.

So the members opposite say, "we only want to go half way on this. We do not want to provide jobs for all the people who could conceivably have jobs, we just want to provide jobs that will be provided by the machinery that we could get from Canada." I agree with that—

Mr. Deans: We want to provide additional jobs.

Hon. Mr. Apps: —up to a point. But I say why stop there? Why not go and provide more jobs in those industries that can become more efficient and do a better job if they use machinery bought from outside Canada? And the percentage of machinery they could get that they now buy from outside Canada would be very, very minimal, because you can rest assured that they are always trying to purchase that machinery they are presently buying outside of Canada within Canada.

Mr. Deans: They are not.

Hon. Mr. Apps: They sure do.

Mr. Deans: They are not.

Hon. Mr. Apps: They try to do that, but they have not been able to.

What you are saying is, "Well, that is too bad, fellows. We are not going to give you this advantage because you would have to buy machinery outside Canada." I do not think that is right. I think we should make every job available we can.

Sure, they should buy the machinery in Canada if they can. But if they cannot—and there are many times when they cannot—then why not expand that and give them the same advantage so they can also give more employment to more Canadians?

The member asked me how many more people could be employed. Well, that depends on the machinery which is bought. You cannot just say it is going to be 10 per cent, or 20 per cent, or 30 per cent, or no per cent. It depends on the industry; it depends on the machinery it is going to get. But we are very hopeful that by being able to update its machinery that industry is going to produce more efficiently and make more jobs.

Mr. Lewis: No.

Mr. Deans: No.

Hon. Mr. Apps: All right, the members say no. They have not produced a thing in their lives.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Not one in their whole tribe.

Mr. Pilkey: But at least we worked in a business and we saw it happening. The minister has not.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Apps: The only thing I am trying to say is this, that—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Apps: —that as far as the members' method is concerned they are going half way only, and because of that they are going to prevent some other people in this province from getting a job, and I do not agree with it for that reason.

Mr. Singer: That is right. Can I ask the hon. minister a question?

An hon. member: Is it a quick question?

Mr. Singer: No, it does not have to be really very quick because we are in committee and surely this debate can go on as long as the members want to debate it.

My question to the minister is, would he accept the kind of restrictions that his colleague the Minister of Trade and Development attempted to attach to the $7.5 million loan programme that he enunciated in his statement today? And if he would accept that—and apparently he did as a member of the cabinet—why should it not apply equally here?

Mr. Chairman: The member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, of course, the point that has just been made—and it has been made previously in this debate—is the key point. You have accepted legislation and programmes discriminating in favour of Canadians and Canadian employment opportunities in other areas. The government refuses to do it in this case—

Hon. Mr. Apps: No, no.

Mr. Lewis: —because there is a qualitative difference. In this case, it is giving a gift to corporate allies and, in the other case, it was not. What is the difference then? That is the difference.

Hon. Mr. Apps: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Lewis: Is the minister on a point of order, because if he is not, he should sit down.

Mr. Singer: Answer it when he is free.

Mr. Lewis: I have as much respect for the minister's legendary hockey activity as he does for my job-creating capacity. Suppose he sit down.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please.

Hon. Mr. Apps: No, I am not on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: Why do they not give him a course in parliamentary proceedings.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: The second point I want to make, Mr. Chairman, is that I think I am going to engage in the unseemly activity tonight of trying to involve the Minister of Revenue in a discussion of his legislation. Since every other cabinet minister has tentatively tried to rescue him, I am sure he would wish to rescue himself.

Mr. Sargent: That is unfair. He does not know.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Unlike the member's colleagues, he does not need rescuing.

Mr. Lewis: It was very kind of the Premier to step in, and of the Treasurer to echo, and of the Minister of Correctional Services to be here—

Mr. Singer: What is the point of order?

Mr. Lewis: Only the Provincial Secretary was not here to bail us all out.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Can I ask the Minister of Revenue this question, based on the amendment to this clause: how much additional machinery and equipment inside or outside Canada does he expect this programme to stimulate, this incentive programme?

Mr. Pilkey: That is a good question.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I do not think anyone can answer that question, but we are willing to support the programme to create jobs. Who can possibly guess—

Mr. Sargent: The Treasurer knew.

Mr. Gisborn: The member is repetitive. He said that 20 times.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I can tell members from the reaction that I have had it will be substantial.

Mr. Lewis: Right. Then okay, Mr. Chairman. I know it is difficult for the minister to guess at that, but on page 61 of the budget appendix B, a guess is made. Not just a guess, a learned, authorized estimate is made under the aegis of the provincial Treasurer. What it says there is that private and public investment, machinery and equipment in 1970 totalled $2.8 billion, and with the government's programme in 1971 it will total $2.9 billion.

All right, so in the government's own accompanying paper, it concedes that this tax rebate system will stimulate the economy of Ontario to the extent of another $100 million. The answer, therefore, of the Minister of Correctional Services to people on this side of the House was exactly the answer of the provincial Treasurer outside the House after he tabled the budget: He conceded and the government conceded that this is a productivity-producing budget; it is not, in fact, a job-creating budget.

All right, now suppose the government stimulates the economy to the extent of $100 million, or let us be more generous. Let us say the government stimulates the economy to the extent of $200 or $250 million. What are they talking about in fact? What they are talking about is five per cent of one of those figures. If it is of $100 million, they are talking of $5 million; if it is of $250 million, they are talking of $12.5 million. That is all the effective new money they are talking about in terms of stimulating additional productivity. That is all. Because here in the Treasurer's own figures is an indication that last year without his incentive, we purchased $2.8 billion in machinery and equipment. This year with his—

Hon. Mr. Apps: On a point of order.

Mr. Chairman: Point of order.

Hon. Mr. Apps: We are talking about the amendment, are we not?

Mr. Lewis: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Apps: I do not think the member is talking about the amendment at all.

Mr. Lewis: I will come right to the point.

Hon. Mr. Apps: Well, come to the point.

Mr. Lewis: The point is that the additional $100 million which the government feel they can generate—which is of such inconsequence generally—we feel should at least be generated within Ontario or within Canada. If they are stimulating it only to the extent of $5 million to $12.5 million at least they can do it in this country.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There is no guarantee that the amount would have to remain the same.

Mr. Lewis: The guarantee—I would be very interested to know what guarantee the Premier has that—

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member is using those figures without—

Mr. Sargent: They are the government's figures. They are in the book.

Mr. Lewis: You have to be careful about impugning my figures. They are your documents.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is the interpretation you are giving them.

Mr. Lewis: The interpretation is pretty clear from your document, page 61: $2.5 billion in 1969; $2.8 billion in 1970; $2.9 billion in 1971. Now it is, admittedly, a—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: It is admittedly, Mr. Chairman, I say to the Minister of Revenue, a projected estimate not a guaranteed estimate. I can see that, but I do not see why we should be spending any less in 1971 than we spent in 1970. The gross provincial product of this province continues to accelerate but—and I come back to this second point I wanted to make—the—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: A very decreased basis.

Mr. Lewis: —employment does not continue to accelerate. Again according to your own budget papers, last year you created an additional 103,000 jobs in Ontario; 43,000 jobs apparently came by virtue of natural growth, 60,000 were new in the sense that they were created. But you are not able to give us under this programme the guarantee of a single additional job.

I do not know why the Premier writes off the matter of the dangers of decreasing employment. If the dominant part of your machinery is in capital-intensive primary industry, if it is in forestry or in mining, you may well reduce employment in Ontario. There is no guarantee at all. Your entire experience suggests a reduction in employment.

Mr. Chairman: Let us keep closer to the amendment.

Mr. Lewis: All we are asking you to concede to the opposition is that, given most of the money would be spent anyway, given that it is productivity-producing rather than job-creating, given that the amount of money we are talking about is a five per cent rebate on a much reduced figure, given that all the other commitments were made in the full recognition that the companies would have to spend the five per cent retail sales tax anyway—all of these machinery and equipment purchasers understand that they were committed to doing that—given all of those things, the least you can do is to guarantee that the benefits will accrue to Ontario or Canada. That is what this amendment does.

Mr. Chairman: Are we ready for the question?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We want to do exactly that. We recognize that the trend has been a diminishing trend, and you will recognize that it is fairly short-term legislation. We want this reaction to happen quickly and with an impact on the economy of the Province of Ontario and we do not want any inhibiting features such as suggested by the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Are we ready for the question?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, the whole summation of this whole thing is that the minister has inherited this thing from the Treasurer and so he is trying to sell a bill of goods. The amendment is the fact that machinery manufactured in Canada—and I say to you very sincerely, Mr. Chairman, the only people this can effect are the people who do not have Ontario Development Corporation loans or an NODC loan for automobiles or trucks.

Now you name me 10 or 20 industries in this whole province who can qualify to get this and I will buy you a new hat. All of you. You name them. You are just flying a red herring. It is a lot of nonsense and you know it is nonsense.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not fly red herrings.

Mr. Sargent: Okay, you know yourself that this applies to no one and you are only kidding the troops.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Chairman, I have a very brief reference to what the hon. member has said. The Liberal Party is going to be embarrassed over supporting this amendment, because this is part of federal legislation that is presently in effect.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): We can take care of ourselves. What is your worry?

Mr. Chairman: Any further questions? Those in favour—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. Those in favour of Mr. Deans' amendment will please say "aye."

Mr. Singer: No, Mr. Chairman, before you put the motion I—

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister without Portfolio): Sit down.

Mr. Singer: I will not sit down, and anyone who suggests I should is completely out of order. I will stand here and debate on this as long as I feel it is proper.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please; it is now 10:30. We have no right to continue—

Mr. Singer: All right, if you want to move the adjournment, I will carry on the debate the next time this order is called.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the committee rise and report that it has come to certain resolutions, and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the Whole House begs to report progress and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, tomorrow, we will be in the item of business No. 15, supply, and we will deal with the estimates of The Department of Lands and Forests. Following that, when we complete those, we will deal with the office of the Provincial Secretary, and hopefully will get into The Department of Correctional Services.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, before the motion is put, is it reasonable to assume that tomorrow we will not deal with the continuing debate on this particular bill in the Committee of the Whole House?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Prime Minister): Not necessarily.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Well, it is reasonable to assume.

Mr. Singer: Is that a commitment from the government?

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): What difference does it make?

Mr. Singer: It would be interesting to know.

Mr. Speaker: I think the House leader has indicated his intentions for tomorrow.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10:35 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, MAY 7, 1971

The House met at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are very pleased to welcome as special guests to the Legislature today a delegation from the Parliament of Finland, which is on a visit to Canada.

In the Speaker's gallery are Mr. Rafael Paasio, the Speaker of the Parliament of Finland; Mr. Paavo Aitio, of the People's Democratic League; Mr. Esko Niskanen, leader of the Social Democratic Group; Mr. Pentti Sillantaus, of the National Coalition Party; Mr. Aaro Lintila, of the Centre Party; Mr. Matti Asunmaa, of the Rural Party; and Mr. Jaakko Hissa, secretary to the delegation.

Also with the delegation are the Ambassador of Finland, His Excellency Holger Sumelius, and the Canadian staff, Lieutenant-Colonel T. G. Bowie, of the House of Commons, and Mrs. Silja Lindgren, who is acting as interpreter.

In the east gallery, our guests are students from Barton Secondary School, Hamilton; and in the west gallery, students from Woodlands Centennial School in Dunbarton, and York Humber High School, Toronto.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

FANSHAWE COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Treasurer. Has the Treasury Board reconsidered its decision to remove financial support from the Fanshawe agricultural school this support having been announced to cease as of May 15?

Hon. W. D. McKeough (Treasurer): It would be more correct to say that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council had reconsidered the decision of the Treasury Board.

POLICE RAID ON DENTURISTS

Mr. Nixon: I would like to ask a question of the Attorney General. Can he explain to the House the circumstances under which the Ontario Provincial Police have carried out a series of raids on denturists?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence (Minister of Justice): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I just received a report, as a matter of fact, from the commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police. I know it is a very danerous thing to do but maybe we should read it together.

First of all, I think I should point out that this was not a raid. It was the execution of a search warrant issued by a justice of the peace under The Summary Convictions Act to search for evidence of an alleged offence. This was not issued through our office at all. The Ontario Provincial Police were contacted in the first instance by the legal adviser to the Minister of Health (Mr. A. B. R. Lawrence) in The Department of Health, who requested the assistance of the police in obtaining this type of evidence.

Mr. Nixon: Does the minister mean the instigation of the search was at the behest of the provincial Department of Health and not on a complaint from any other source?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I am assuming that and I would suggest that the Leader of the Opposition ask the Minister of Health.

Mr. Nixon: I did and he said he knew nothing about it and said I should ask the Minister of Justice.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Well, I would assume that the initiation of the request—in other words, the allegation that an offence was taking place or had taken place—would reside in the dentistry profession somewhere, presumably in the association itself.

Mr. Nixon: A further supplementary: Can the minister explain why it is the Metropolitan Toronto Police force was not at least a part of this operation? Why would it be entirely Provincial Police?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I gather the Metro Toronto Police were contacted and the answer was that there was a shortage of men available to do this type of work.

Mr. Nixon: To carry out all the raids at once?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: That is right. Therefore the Ontario Provincial Police, because they had been contacted earlier through The Department of Health, felt that they could do it and perhaps had a responsibility to do it.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a further supplementary: Would the minister explain why it would not be more appropriate for charges to be laid either by or on behalf of those who would have a complaint and that the people concerned be called in the usual way before the court with the information that the courts would require, rather than carrying out this rather unusual procedure?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I have asked my officials for that explanation, and I am told that it is on the way, but it has not reached me yet. I will take that as notice.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): By way of a further supplementary, could the Attorney General advise us the extent, if any, of policy within his department to enforce such Acts as The Dentistry Act, The Medical Act, or The Law Society Act? Is it not most unusual that a department of government would take this kind of initiative?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I had better take that as notice as well. I am not that conversant with these matters. There are certainly explanations of it; I am not too sure I have all of the explanations at hand myself.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Is the hon. minister aware of the very wide, almost incredibly wide powers reposed in a private organization, I believe, under The Dental Technicians Act, of search and seizure, and the initiatory powers that these people have and ought not to have?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Well, I also point out to my hon. friend that The Dentistry Act, unlike some of the professional Acts but like some of the professional Acts—

Mr. Singer: Is that not a provincial Act?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: It is a general public Act; it is not a private Act of this Legislature.

Mr. Singer: No, it is a Law Society Act.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: That is right. And when allegations are made that an offense has been committed and they are serious allegations, and they come from responsible people, then certainly it is the duty of the law enforcement agencies of this province to act on those matters. I see nothing wrong with that. I would imagine we would be under even more serious criticism from my friends opposite, Mr. Speaker, if that responsibility was not acted upon.

Mr. Lawlor: The government imposes too much power with the courts by way of seizure.

Mr. Singer: By way of a supplementary, is the minister not a little amazed at the widespread and arbitrary powers that are contained in The Dentistry Act?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Oh, I am surprised sometimes by some of the Acts of this Legislature approved by my hon. friends opposite, as well as by others. There is no question about that.

Mr. Singer: That was passed before I was born.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: But these are public general Acts of this Legislature.

Mr. Singer: Is the Attorney General going to do anything about that?

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

WELFARE SERVICES FOR IMMIGRANTS

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Social and Family Services. Can he tell me what time limits are necessary to be fulfilled before a person coming into this country from another country would be eligible to apply for welfare services? Do they have the right to apply immediately they enter or is there some waiting period?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Social and Family Services): Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that if they are in need, they have the right to be looked after practically right away, but I will have to check that. I have my people preparing a report on it. I read the comments of the judge in British Columbia a couple of days ago and I wanted the whole matter checked out. Of course, it is a very difficult area. If someone does arrive here and is in absolute need, it is an impossibility to leave him starving in the streets. Something has to be done to assist him.

Mr. Nixon: A supplementary: Would the minister not agree, however, that in cases where immigrants or people without even landed immigrant status have come over from the United States, there should be some responsibility on the part of The Department of Social and Family Services as well as the federal Department of Manpower and Immigration to see that they are not coming in here from the United States unless they have the wherewithal to look after themselves for at least a few weeks?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, I would agree with the hon. member on that, Mr. Speaker. That is what I want to find out and that is why I am asking for this complete report on it.

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member for Lakeshore speaking, or directing questions, on behalf of his party?

Mr. Lawlor: This morning, yes. As the leading front-bench man, I shall yield to my colleague from High Park.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

COMPENSATION OF FRANCOETTIE

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): I have a question of the Attorney General.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General: In view of the fact that Mr. Reford Francottie was found not guilty at his trial yesterday, is there any way that the Attorney General or the government can extend some compensation to this man for the 10 days which he served in jail?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, not that I am aware of, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Shulman: Would the Attorney General agree that there should perhaps be a change in policy so that this type of case will be compensated in future?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, I am not willing to agree to a blanket general endorsement such as that.

Mr. Shulman: I am sorry the Attorney General does not feel that people who are punished unfairly should be compensated.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

COMPENSATION FOR MONEY EMBEZZLED BY LAWYERS

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker, A new question. What steps is the department or the government taking about those persons who have lost large sums of money as a result of embezzlement by lawyers? I am referring specifically to the Sidney Caplan case where $556,000 was embezzled, and in which the Law Society is unable to make compensation because its regulations allow compensation only to a maximum of $50,000 per lawyer?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I will have to take that as notice, but may I do so on my understanding at the moment that we are doing nothing about that and, if there is any change, I will certainly take it as notice and report back to the House.

Mr. Shulman: As a supplementary, if I may, Mr. Speaker, would the Attorney General agree with me that in future the government should change its policy so that this type of case will be compensated in future?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, I would not agree to that.

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. member for High Park taking the questions for the New Democratic Party this morning?

Mr. H. Peacock (Windsor West): Yes, by unanimous consent.

Mr. Speaker: Very good.

REOPENING OF TORONTO DETOXIFICATION CENTRE

Mr. Shulman: A question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker: In view of the many requests from the police of Toronto that the detoxification centre which was shut by the Conservative government be opened up again, what steps is the Attorney General's department taking to make sure that this is done?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: If the hon. member had been here earlier this week, he would have heard that I indicated that this matter is under very active consideration.

Mr. Shulman: I am delighted, Mr. Speaker. What is being done?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I indicated that it is being very actively considered and policy will be announced here in due course at the proper time.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): In the fullness of time!

NORTH BAY INQUEST

Mr. Shulman: I have a further question of the Attorney General—my final question, Mr. Speaker. Has the Attorney General decided to order a new inquest in the North Bay case in which the coroner permitted his brother to act for one of the interested parties?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No.

Mr. Shulman: Is that the policy of the Attorney General?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: That is the policy in this case, yes.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Obviously, yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

PERSONS AWAITING TRIAL IN ONTARIO INSTITUTIONS

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General. Would the Attorney General know or would he undertake to furnish to the House the number of inmates of Ontario jails and institutions awaiting trial? The reason for this is that in the United States 50 per cent of people in the institutions down there are awaiting trials.

Mr. Speaker: The question has been directed.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I am not too sure that this is under the jurisdiction of the Attorney General. If not, it is under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Correctional Services, or whatever the name is. I can undertake to the hon. member that if he would be good enough to put it on the order paper, it will certainly be answered.

Mr. Sargent: A supplementary: Would the minister know, then, the backlog in the courts? That is what I am trying to find out.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: My understanding is that the situation of two or three years ago where there was a very serious backlog in many areas in the courts of this province, has now been—I was going to say completely rectified, but I should not be that definite.

The only situation that causes me grave concern here at the moment is the backlog in drug prosecutions in Metro Toronto at the moment. This is a very serious matter. Other than that, unless my friend has some other very general area that he would like to bring to my attention, which I would be glad to speak to him about, I really, honestly, do not know of any serious abuses in respect of backlogs of cases before the courts of Ontario.

Mr. Sargent: Will the hon. minister tell the House? Will he find out and tell the House?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I said, if the hon. member would be good enough to put his question on the order paper, which I think really does require some statistical review, the ministry will obtain that information and publish it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

TEACHERS EMPLOYED AS JUNIOR FOREST RANGERS

Mr. Lawlor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests—I am asking this question, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague from Timiskaming (Mr. Jackson).

What is the governmental policy with respect to high-school teachers in Kirkland Lake taking over the jobs as junior forest rangers previously held by people trained in the area, but not already unemployed?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, we must have the same contacts as the hon. member. I was informed of this situation about two days ago and I am looking into it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

SALES TAX LOSSES

Mr. Deacon: A question of the Minister of Revenue: What steps has the minister taken, since my question of a few weeks ago, to eliminate the problem of loss of a large volume of business which has faced Ontario.

brokers through the sales tax avoidance measures that Ontario residents and others have taken to avoid the sales tax on commission business in the province?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question, I have investigated the matter as presented. Initially I found no evidence to substantiate the question that has been placed before me. If the hon. member would like to discuss the matter with me and inform me of the area with which he is concerned, I will certainly take the necessary action.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford.

FIVE PER CENT SALARY INCREASE GUIDELINES

Mr. M. Makarchuk (Brantford): A question of the Treasurer. In view of the fact that 80 per cent of the civil servants in the province have decided to go on strike as a result of the minister's five per cent guidelines, will the minister consider removing those guidelines completely and entering into negotiations in good faith?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I was not aware that 80 per cent of the civil servants had decided to go on strike.

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of supplementary, now that the minister is aware that 80 per cent of the civil servants have voted to go on strike, will the minister take this into account and remove the guidelines?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I do not accept that my awareness has been perceptibly enriched by the comments of the member for Brantford.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

DENTISTRY ACT

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Attorney General would tell us whether he thinks that such clauses as those contained in The Dentistry Act, relating to it being prima facie evidence of carrying on dental practice merely because dental tools are in somebody's place of business or home, and allowing any agent to get a search warrant, are appropriate sections to have in a statute of the Province of Ontario?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: The hon. member is asking for a personal judgement on a matter such as that?

Mr. Singer: No, no. I am asking that the Attorney General—

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No, no, the hon. member is asking for the appropriateness of it. Right? I do not think the appropriateness of it is an appropriate type of question to ask in respect of a legal opinion of the Attorney General.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): The hon. minister is the chief law officer of the province.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, is the Attorney General going to take any steps to remove from the statutes those unusual, unwarranted and arbitrary powers which infringe on the civil rights of the citizens of Ontario?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, there are 117 extremely privileged individuals who sit in this House, and my hon. friend happens to be one of them. We are extremely privileged in that we have the power here to initiate public legislation in this province and we are a very favoured group to do it. My answer to my hon. friend is that if he does not like it, he is one of the few people in this province who has the power to initiate steps to change it.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, will the Attorney General and Minister of Justice, as the chief law officer of the Crown, exercise his privilege which will probably bring with it the approval of his caucus, to change this legislation, which is arbitrary, unfair and inequitable?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Number one, Mr. Speaker, my friend is assuming things that he should not assume, in relation to my powers over caucus, and number two, if he wants to change it he has the power himself to attempt to try it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

THE DEPARTMENTS OF HEALTH AND SOCIAL AND FAMILY SERVICES

Mr. Peacock: Mr. Speaker, a question of the hon. Minister of Social and Family Services: Does the speech of the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Potter) to the Ontario Welfare Council yesterday reflect the government's intention to amalgamate The Departments of Health and Social and Family Services?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I believe that if the hon. member read the account in the paper this morning the hon. member who made that speech indicated that these were his personal opinions.

Mr. Peacock: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does the Minister of Social and Family Services accept the contention of the Minister without Portfolio that between branches of the same department there is little communication in regard to the matters he was talking about?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is impossible to generalize in this area. I guess I as the only member in this House who has had both the portfolios of Health and Social and Family Services, can say that there is a great degree of co-operation and co-ordination between departments in these areas. There is co-ordination in regard to our programmes for the mentally retarded. There is great co-ordination in regard to our programmes for the emotionally disturbed.

Saying that, as I have said many times, we have not reached the ultimate and the perfect. Saying we do have co-ordination does not mean that there cannot be better co-ordination and we are always working toward this.

Mr. Peacock: We still know who should have been Minister of Health.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

MINING REVENUE FOR LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Mr. Sopha: I should like to ask the provincial Secretary, in order to germinate a seed in this the growing season, whether, when the Sudbury basin achieves a system of viable regional government, that will mean a surcease of the mining revenue payments as a means of financing local government, and the adoption of a system whereby the mining industry makes direct payments by taxes to the local government like any other industry does in the province?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: No, I would think not.

Mr. Sopha: A supplementary question. As he knows the mining industry will then be liable for taxation across the basin. What part then will mining revenue payments pay as an aspect of financing local government?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Of course, the one great difference between the mining industry and, I suppose, any other industry is that you have a certain number of people working in an area which is not taxable—that is, what essentially goes on below ground or in an open pit, for that matter. There are still arguments and I suppose will continue to be about what is above ground and what is not—that is, the head frame, and so on—but basically that is the difference.

Therefore, the people in a mining community, or the tax revenues in a mining community will never be as buoyant as they would be in my town of Chatham, for example, because we are taxing industry fully where people work in my town of Chatham. I think there will always be a place for something over and above the normal revenues of the municipality and real estate taxation such as mining revenue payments. Of course, in the formula which my colleague brought in this year, he has adopted—this is off the top of my head—an assessment of $10,000 per worker. It may well be that—

Mr. Sopha: But there is nothing for Sudbury in his formula?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Sudbury has always done so well through the efforts of the member and others that—

Mr. Sopha: That is the measure of our disagreement. I think I will replace the minister in the next cabinet.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: We are trying to—I am sure it was the feeling on this side of the House and shared by many others in the north—we should try to let the rest of the north catch up with Sudbury.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Has the member for Sudbury given up on the Attorney General's job?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Attorney General has the answers to two questions previously asked.

EXTRA POLICE COSTS FOR ROCK FESTIVAL

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker, on May 4 the hon. member for Downsview asked me the following question:

Could the Attorney General tell us what success, if any, the government has had in collecting the sum of $87,856.70 from Orange Productions Limited, being a firm that carried on a rock festival in Mulmur township late last summer and against whom the government passed an order-in-council, forcing them to enter into an agreement to put up this kind of a bond, and the former Attorney General indicated that they should pay this sum of money to the government for damages resulting from extra police costs?

Mr. Speaker, I took the question as notice. I have now had an opportunity to review the matter and it is certainly true that the company refused to enter into the agreement that was required by the designation and the order-in-council. Therefore, as a result of that we feel we have a cause of action for the costs in an amount that would be decided by the court. We are now considering the institution of such an action but I must bear in mind, of course, all of the equities of the situation including the possibility that the judgement might not be recoverable if the defendant was not able to pay it.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, does the Attorney General not think it is a bit late in the day to now contemplate going to court?

FARM MARKETING LEGISLATION

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I have another question, Mr. Speaker, from the hon. member for Downsview. I believe he inquired of me in relation to the reference to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Sopha: That was me.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I am sorry, it was the hon. member for Sudbury. Both of them? Okay. Two questions then! First, who is going to represent the government? Our agent, at least on the record, will be Mr. John D. Hilton, QC. This is in relation to the Supreme Court on the marketing question. Second, what are the instructions from the government to Mr. Hilton? The instructions will be to support the position that the Manitoba legislation is intra vires the province.

Mr. Sopha: The government is going to lose—remember I said that on Friday, May 7. It is going to lose.

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I have another answer to a question from the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Pitman) but he is not in the House, Mr. Speaker. Do you want me to delay that?

Mr. Speaker: Do the members of the New Democratic Party agree that the answer should now be given?

Mr. Sopha: Have a one minute caucus.

RENT REVIEW BOARD

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: On May 3, the question was directed to me by the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Pitman), inquiring as to how many municipalities have set up review boards on the basis of the legislation which was passed in this Legislature a couple of years ago, The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Rent review boards have not been established by any municipality, due to the fact that The Landlord and Tenant Act 1968-1969 does not provide for the establishment of rent review boards. The legislation does provide that a council in a municipality may, by bylaw, establish a landlord and tenant advisory bureau. There is a difference.

The functions of the landlord and tenant advisory bureaus are: to advise landlords and tenants in tenancy matters; to receive complaints and to seek to mediate disputes between landlords and tenants; to disseminate information for the purpose of educating and advising landlords and tenants concerning rental practices, their rights and their remedies; and to receive and investigate complaints of conduct in contravention of legislation governing tenancies.

At this time the municipalities of Brantford, of Brantford, of Burlington, of Hamilton, of Ottawa, of Sudbury and of Toronto have established such bureaus. There are other programmes to carry out the intent of this legislation in Kitchener and Kingston, although the structure of those particular programmes is not strictly within the confines of The Landlord and Tenant Act.

It would appear, sir, that the landlord and tenant advisory bureaus, or other related programmes, have been initiated in those municipalities where a need for such services has been indicated by the citizens of those particular communities.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister a supplementary question? Is the minister going to do anything in relation to the recent request from Metropolitan Toronto and others that the tenant advisory bureaus be given additional powers which could at least compel the attendance of the parties concerned in a potential dispute and provide for the production of documents?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: The matter is under consideration by the government.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

SCHOOL FURNACE EXPLOSION

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General regarding the furnace explosion at St. Daniel's School in Ottawa on February 23: Is the fire marshal's report now complete? And, in connection with the soot buildup which was attributed as the cause of the fire, has it been determined when the furnace was last cleaned?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, may I take that question as notice?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South.

TWO-MAN POLICE PATROLS

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): A question of the Attorney General and Minister of Justice: Is the minister aware that, because a police officer of the Dunnville police department was brutally beaten while performing his duties, two youths have been charged with attempted murder? Will the minister initiate the necessary regulations to make it mandatory that a police officer on patrol, especially on night duty, shall not perform his duties unless in company with another officer?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: I will certainly take that matter under consideration, but I know the Ontario Police Commission has reviewed those situations in the past. I will be glad to obtain a further report and report back to the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: I lost my minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford was attempting to gain the floor.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Speaker, I was going to ask a question of the Minister of Correctional Services but, seeing he has stepped out, I will refer the question to the Treasurer again and perhaps we can try to penetrate the insensitivity.

In view of the fact that the guards in Ontario reform institutions are talking about walking off their jobs because of the five per cent guidelines, is the minister prepared to do anything about them now?

Mr. Speaker: I think that question has been answered in substance previously and the hon. minister has replied. I therefore think the question is out of order.

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of a supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The question is out of order; there can be no supplementary. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: A question of the—

Mr. Makarchuk: A new question, Mr. Speaker: Since the last one was out of order, I—

Mr. Speaker: All right, I will permit the hon. member to ask a question.

WAGE DEMANDS BY GUARDS IN REFORM INSTITUTIONS

Mr. Makarchuk: What action will the provincial Treasurer take to satisfy the wage demands of the guards at the Ontario reform institutions?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Mr. Speaker, it is not to my knowledge that the wage demands—if that is the correct term—of the guards at the correctional institutions are presently under review. These matters are all on a two-year cyclical review and when that comes before government in the normal course of events and before the Civil Service Association, then in the normal course of events both will have a position and it will be subject to negotiation at that time.

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of a supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that the guards have decided that the matter is not being negotiated and have orders to go on strike, what action does the minister intend to take as a result of that?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Mr. Speaker, no such information has reached me. I suggest to the hon. member if he would stop trying to stir up trouble in this province we would all be a lot better off.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Shulman: Bury-Your-Head-in-the-Sand Darcy. That is what we will have to call the Treasurer.

Mr. Lawlor: When he gets bellicose, watch out.

Mr. Shulman: He is doing his best on his part to bring the government down.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Makarchuk: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I do not think the hon. member for Brantford missed his turn. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce had risen and I recognized him.

Mr. Makarchuk: A supplementary question—

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry. The hon. member for Brantford did not place his supplementary question in time; he will please retain his seat. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

COST OF ONTARIO PLACE

Mr. Sargent: A question of the provincial Treasurer, Mr. Speaker: Would the Treasurer know—this is a very parochial question—the projected cost of Ontario Place and the amount of money that has been spent to date?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Off the top of my head I think the costs are something like $23 million. The operating costs are projected to be met by the operating revenues.

Mr. Singer: It has gone up another $5 million since the last count.

Mr. Sargent: I did not hear the Treasurer.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: It is projected that the revenues should meet the costs. It should not be a profit-making operation, nor should it cost anything.

Mr. Sargent: I do not think the minister understood my question. I wanted to know the projected cost and what it has cost to date.

Hon. Mr. McKeough: As far as I know, the total cost—I believe this is the case—is in the neighbourhood of $23 million. I am not sure of that figure, and I do not think there is—

Mr. Sargent: Why does he not know?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. McKeough: Well if the member really wants an answer to the question, I have tried to give it to him. That question, of course, Mr. Speaker, should have been put on the order paper, as the member well knows. We do not carry those kind of figures around in our heads.

Mr. Nixon: That is the old Darcy—a $10-million overexpenditure.

Mr. Singer: What is $10 million?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, supplementary to that, does the Treasurer know if Ontario Place is a continuing programme for Harbour City? Is it going to be a continuous progressive landfill?

Mr. Speaker: The question is not supplementary; it is a new question.

Mr. Sargent: It has to do with Ontario Place—

Mr. Speaker: It is a new question. However, I recognize the hon. member with a new question.

HARBOUR CITY

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, sir. Do you plan to continually spend money in the development from Ontario Place into Harbour City?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I do not know that there is necessarily a connection between Harbour City and Ontario Place. However, the government of Ontario is pleased, in co-operation with Metropolitan Toronto and in particular with the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, to assist in the development of the waterfront plan of this great metropolitan area. And we will find in the estimates a commitment in the neighbourhood of $1 million per year, which will be matched by Metro conservation to get on with the waterfront plan, which we happen to think is one of the most exciting things in this whole great metropolitan area. We are proud to be part of it.

Mr. Sargent: A further supplementary: So the minister is committed to a continuing programme there, when the Minister of Trade and Development does not know whether he is nor not. He said in the House yesterday.

Mr. Speaker: Any questions?

Mr. Sargent: Who knows what is going on?

Mr. Speaker: Ask a question. The hon. member is making a statement. The hon. member for Lakeshore.

REPORT ON ARRESTED STRIKERS

Mr. Lawlor: A question of the Attorney General. Has the Attorney General read the report of the Ontario Police Commission on three strikers at the Trane company who were arrested? Would it be possible for him to table that report in this House?

Hon. A. F. Lawrence: No. 1, I have not read it. No. 2, I shall do so and then decide whether it should be tabled or not.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

SWEEP PROGRAMME

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Lands and Forests. Would the minister consider setting up offices or using government offices today in an attempt to encourage youth to partake in the Lands and Forests SWEEP programme, rather than have them send applications into his department?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, maybe this suggestion would be very worthwhile in next year's programme. We have received a lot more applications for this year's programme than we have positions available. I do not believe it would be advisable to establish offices at this time as we just do not have sufficient positions available. They have practically all been filled.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Have all of the vacancies in the SWEEP programme been completely filled?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I have not got that information but we have received over 10,000 applications. We have only 5,000 positions available and that 5,000 includes slightly over 2,000 junior rangers. In the SWEEP programme, it is about 1,000.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford.

PAY GUIDELINES FOR PRISON ATTENDANTS

Mr. Makarchuk: I have a question of the Minister of Correctional Services. In view of the fact that the guards and the attendants at the various reform institutions have decided to go on strike, or are planning on going on strike, and the fact that the Treasurer is insensitive—or dense, I am not sure which—to the needs of the civil servants, can the minister indicate what action his department is taking or what representation he has made to the Treasury Board to ensure that they are not bound by the five per cent guidelines?

Hon. C. J. S. Apps (Minister of Correctional Services): Mr. Speaker, I have not had any notification whatsoever that the guards are going on strike. We hope that they will not. This is a very serious situation as far as we are concerned.

Mr. Makarchuk: Yes, we hope the same thing.

Hon. Mr. Apps: We certainly hope that they do not take any precipitate action such as that before everything is clarified. But I have had no real notification at all that this is contemplated.

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. Makarchuk: I have a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: I will not permit any supplementary questions on that particular question. It has been asked before. The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMME FOR UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Social and Family Services. Is the minister developing any type of programme to employ youths now attending university, in various programmes that would make them employable with The Department of Social and Family Services; summertime employment for these youths, both male and female?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, as part of the total summer employment programme of the government, I think the hon. member will recall we did announce that there was a programme. I think it involved about 100 students who are being employed in this particular category. They are placed by us in various social service agencies and positions in order that they can do a meaningful job in this field, get some feel of it, and also help augment their income during the summer.

As well as this, we do employ a certain number of students. I cannot give the exact number at this particular minute in our department. Of course, through their work here they become involved in the total field.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I did not quite hear the minister. Did he mention 100 in all for The Department of Social and Family Services? Is that the number of youths who would be employed?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I mentioned that that was part of the total programme that employs about 15,000 students for the summer. This was a special extra thing that our department, as part of the total programme was doing this year.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: I have a question of the Minister of Lands and Forests.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

The hon. member for Brantford is taking objection to the fact that I have not been orderly. May I point out to him that I am trying to be very specifically fair. If I am to be very exactly fair, the Liberal Party is entitled to two or three more speakers than the NDP. I am being fair on this.

The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is a breath of fresh air.

Mr. S. J. Randall (Don Mills): Breathe deeply!

GILL NET FISHING BAN

Mr. Sargent: Would the Minister of Lands and Forests advise me how he expects democracy to work, in that I have here 1,000 names on a petition—submitted to him a year ago and nothing has happened yet—regarding a gill net fishing ban on the Bruce Peninsula? I have 1,000 names here.

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member please direct his question?

Mr. Sargent: Why has the minister not done anything to ban gill net fishing on both sides of the Bruce Peninsula—the Georgian Bay side and the Lake Huron side—as requested by 1,000 people in the Bruce Peninsula? Why has the minister not done anything about it?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Why has the government not banned gill net fishing?

Mr. Sargent: That is right.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: That is a good question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Sargent: That comes under the minister's department, does it not?

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister without Portfolio): The member got his gills caught.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The government believes, in the management of our fisheries, there is room for both. Commercial fishing and sport fishing are compatible and in those areas sport fishing has a priority.

Mr. Sargent: The minister does not know what he is talking about.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Pardon?

Mr. Sargent: The minister does not know what he is talking about.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Is this what the member was saying?

Mr. Sargent: No, the minister is saying it.

Hon. Mr. Snow: That is the member's opinion.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I will be glad to look into this for the hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: That is a year ago.

An hon. member: Oh come on!

Mr. Sargent: That is a new wave.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

LENGTH OF HAIR AS A CONDITION OF EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the House leader. I presume the provincial Treasurer is the House leader today. Is it the policy of the government to set hair length as a condition of employment as reported in today's Globe and Mail?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: I think that question might well wait for the Minister of Trade and Development when he returns to the House.

Mr. Lawlor: The minister over there knows about hair length.

Mr. Shulman: I have a supplementary if I may, Mr. Speaker. In the minister's department and among the employees he is responsible for, is there any condition of hair length as a condition of employment?

Hon. Mr. McKeough: In my department? No, I do not think so.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Lawlor: Certainly not in the Prime Minister's department.

PROSPECTORS' LICENCES

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs who, I think, is feeling neglected over there. Will the minister recommend to his department that prospectors' licences will be issued in the same way as drivers' licences in that he has a part of a form that can be torn off and sent in for the renewal of licences? As it is now, they have to apply every year for the renewal of prospectors' licences.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Mines and Northern Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this sounds to me like a very good suggestion. I will be pleased to discuss this with the officials in my department.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Brantford.

BASS CATCHES IN LAKE ERIE

Mr. Makarchuk: The minister is just walking out. No, he is coming back in. This is a question of the Minister of Lands and Forests. Can the minister indicate why commercial fishermen on Lake Erie were instructed to bury any white bass or silver bass they have inadvertently caught in their nets in their fishing operations, instead of either selling it for cat food or selling it as food on a commercial basis?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the member if he would be in favour of selling fish contaminated with mercury as cat food?

Mr. Makarchuk: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, we will have to ask the cats how they feel about that situation.

Apparently, Mr. Speaker, there is a market for this fish. There is a market, and obviously the commercial operators are prepared to buy it for one reason or another, and I would assume if they are buying it that they are meeting the federal and provincial requirements in order to do what they are planning on doing with that food. So why cannot the fishermen sell it to them?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr Speaker, this matter was thoroughly looked into and we feel that we should not encourage the catching of fish that is highly contaminated with mercury. We feel there are many reasons why this is not advisable, and this is why we have issued orders that fish that is contaminated with mercury should be buried.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

Departments of Highways and Transport to natural and physical resources committee.

Mr. Chairman: I believe, when we rose last, the minister was in the process of replying to the leadoff comments. Has he finished that or does he have further comments to make?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Chairman, I had not started replying to the comments.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister has the floor when he is ready.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: First Mr. Chairman, may I say, that I listened with great interest to the remarks of the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. R. S. Smith) and the hon. member for Thunder Bay (Mr. Stokes). It seems to me it is only some time ago since these remarks were made and if I omit questions that were posed, I am sure the hon. members will remind me when they come up under the appropriate vote.

Firstly, I begin by saying that I am in agreement with the hon. member for Nipissing in his opening remarks when he said that direct capital expenditures create employment. I wish to point out to him that our expenditure this year on the development of our park facilities will be about the same as last year. However, in order to provide more employment this summer we have extended our parks operating programme and our tree planting programme, and these are two areas, of course, that have a high labour content.

The hon. member then went on about what procedures would be followed in leasing Crown land. Mr. Chairman, the procedures for leasing Crown lots are being developed now and they will be made public sometime in the near future. Our intention is to have the best possible leasing system, incorporating conditions to safeguard the natural environment. We are also studying methods used elsewhere. We have also contacted other provinces and other states. Our regulations will have to be reviewed—and these are regulations 20 to 28 under The Public Lands Act—to provide for lease rather than sale of summer resort locations.

As mentioned in my opening remarks, leasing will preserve the public title to these recreational areas and will permit their conversion to public use if and when we require them after the lease expires.

The hon. member also referred to private land and, if I understood him correctly, he suggested that we should inquire into a method of control of sale of private lands. Mr. Chairman, this matter of private lands is entirely out of the purview of my department. There is in the Revised Statutes of Ontario, I am advised, an Act called The Aliens' Real Property Act, which is not administered by this department. I believe it comes under the Attorney General and Minister of Justice (Mr. A. F. Lawrence). This Act places an alien in the same position as a citizen in respect of ownership and disposition of land. To my knowledge no province in Canada and no state in the United States has such restrictions on the disposal of private lands.

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): Yes, but there are plenty of other jurisdictions. We are not the whole world.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, it could be. But I am advised that one can go to Spain and buy private land if one wishes, and this is done. Also this could be a subject for the conference which the Prime Minister announced will be held in June—I believe June 22 to 24—on nationalism. But, as I say, the subject of private lands is outside of the purview of The Department of Lands and Forests.

The member said that the publication of limited data on mercury last fall did harm to the fisheries on Lake Nipissing, Mr. Chairman, last fall after sampling thousands of fish from about 105 distinct bodies of water and analysing them for mercury, I believed it would have been improper on my part not to advise the public of the results, whether they were good or bad, and I did this. I believe the public has a right to know about these matters.

Mr. E. W. Sopha (Sudbury): Yes.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): That is different from the Attorney General.

Mr. Sopha: Did the minister tell the Attorney General?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I am glad the hon. member for Downsview agrees with me.

Mr. Singer: I am listening.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Now, special testing was initiated on Lake Nipissing, Lake of the Woods, Rainy River—Rainy Lake, pardon me—as well as the western part of Lake Erie, to pinpoint problems more directly. This government has been spending much time and money in my department and other departments to attempt to alleviate the public distress which has resulted since mercury in fish was first discovered. My colleague, the Minister of Tourism and Information (Mr. Guindon), is carrying on quite an intensive programme to promote our fishing industry in Canada as well as in the United States.

The member referred to national parks. If I remember correctly, I think he said that he was pleased to hear that negotiations are proceeding very favourably for the establishment of a national park on the north shore of Lake Superior, at Puckasaw, of approximately 400 square miles. We are also looking into other areas.

He also mentioned the Province of Quebec. He referred to the new park in the Gaspé. This is a park wherein the Quebec government entered into an agreement with the federal government for a 99-year lease, and to my knowledge this is the only agreement as such in Canada. I doubt very much—

Mr. R. S. Smith: That was the first one where the federal government leased the land.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes, very true. That was the first one. They usually want title, and this was the first one. I doubt very much if they would ever consider such agreement with Ontario.

The member asked why logging could not be removed immediately and permanently from Quetico Park. Well, Mr. Chairman, with respect to this question of whether logging can be removed immediately and permanently, these are matters that I hope will be cleared up in the near future.

However, as the hon. member knows—he is a member of the Algonquin Park advisory committee—there are many ramifications of these questions that cannot be easily resolved to everyone's satisfaction without considerable consideration of all the factors involved.

As the hon. member knows, public hearings were held recently in Toronto, Fort Frances, Atikokan and Thunder Bay; as a result, all these submissions are presently being seriously studied. I believe that the next committee meeting will be on May 11, next week, and I hope that shortly after that we will be able to submit a progress report.

The hon. member is a member of the Algonquin Park advisory committee, which is doing very valuable work. During the past year the advisory committee, which is chaired by the hon. Mr. Frost, held many meetings; in addition, there is a task force which is supplying information to this committee. These two reports are examples of a couple of the studies they have submitted to the committee.

Recently, of course, there have been other studies, for instance, one by an independent firm of consultants, the study of the economic impact on Algonquin Park. The committee recently sent me their report. This is the report that I believe the hon. member referred to and asked that it should be made public. I have placed great emphasis on their report with respect to assisting me in formulating the Algonquin Park government policy, I believe that it would not be appropriate for me to release this statement in advance of a government-approved policy statement. This matter has not yet been discussed by my colleagues and I do believe I cannot see what advantage it would be to release this to the public at this time. That is why I feel that it is best to proceed the way we are and, at some future date, I am prepared to make available an interim progress report. I know the public is anxious to know what has transpired.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I wish to commend the member and all the other members of this House who are on this advisory committee because they have done some very important and very valuable work and I know that they are anxious, as well as the public, that information should be made available.

The hon. member referred to the reduction in employees in his own riding, I believe, in Sturgeon Falls, and also asked what are we doing to improve the situation and how can further layoffs be prevented. As the hon. member knows, this mill, an Abitibi mill, that produces hardboard and corrugated products, is an old mill. It was built in 1928—pardon me, 1926—and the company met with the union and the men, I understand, early this year. They had a very good meeting and decisions were taken and as a result, they reduced their staff by about 85 personnel. The mill is now operating with the optimism, I hope that the hon. member has and we all have, that the economy is picking up, and that there will be more housing and more construction. I am optimistic that this very worthwhile industry will pick up.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Power costs are putting them—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Pardon?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Their power costs are putting them in a very bad competitive position.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Their power costs?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Their power costs, and those are directly under the control of Hydro.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes. I will have to speak to my friend, the Minister of Energy and Resources Management who is responsible for Hydro.

The other question was, how did the Ontario Economic Council arrive at conclusions in its report? What part did Mr. Bayly, my deputy, play in the compilation of this report? My deputy, or former deputy, Mr. Bayly—

Mr. Sopha: The minister will not tell him, will he, that I said it appears to me that he is running the whole government?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: He is a good man—a very good man.

Mr. Sopha: It appears to me that he is a very powerful figure. As soon as the minister sits down, I am going to have some comments.

An hon. member: He seems like a very able man, too.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. Sopha: He is a very ambitious man, but he went one too far with me yesterday. He blew it, you know.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, coming back to this report, in 1964, Mr. Bayly was part of a committee which submitted ideas on the forest industries in Ontario. However, this report came out in 1968. He was not a member of the group that submitted this report. On the first page, it says, "Its recommendations are, however, solely those of the council and of the author, Mr. Ian Butters."

Mr. R. S. Smith: He was on the same committee as Mr. Bayly in 1964.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: In 1964. And by the way, this is a report that I requested to be made.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I realize that. The government does not accept the recommendations though.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Like a lot of reports, we do not agree with all the recommendations, but we agree with quite a large number.

Well, Mr. Chairman, these are most of the matters raised. The hon. member for Thunder Bay raised quite a few matters. He is not in his seat right now. I think maybe I will highlight some of these matters, and I think I should reply to the most important ones.

In his remarks last Monday evening, the member presented some figures on the expenditures and revenues of the department and drew the conclusion that in respect of timber, we are running a deficit operation. I think he said something like this, that we are spending $20 million and we are taking maybe only $18 million and then we are spending $13 million for forest protection.

However, Mr. Chairman, I do believe that the charges against the government relate to this $13 million for forest protection. We provide forest protection not only for timber but for the other recreational resources—fish and wildlife, parks and so forth.

Now, with reference to the revenue—and the hon. member referred to the number of people employed and so forth. In this report here—this is an independent report by a firm of economists on the forest industries, Hedlin Menzies, which came out in 1968—it is very obvious that the $20 million that is collected in revenues, mainly stumpage, is only part of the total amount of revenues that accrue to the province.

Just briefly, Mr. Chairman, it says here that provincial government revenues that total $104.3 million are generated by the Ontario forest industry, and to the federal government it is $184 million. I do not believe that it is logical to say that this country's revenues are the only criterion of the value to the province.

Also, the hon. member mentioned that we are not utilizing the allowable cut to sufficient advantage and again he referred to this report and said that we were using less than half of the allowable cut.

It is quite true that we are not using the full allowable cut, but there are many reasons for it. These are the steps that we are taking to use it. First, in the past two years we have had many negotiations with the pulp and paper companies and other industries to continue to expand their existing mills and bring about new ones. And there has been an increase in the allowable cut.

Also, the integration of wood operations: During the past years there has been substantial integration of wood operations. Companies like Abitibi, Kimberly-Clark and others have built sawmills in Ontario.

Third party agreements: We are encouraging greater use of third party agreements because this allows for greater utilization of certain species that were not being used.

Volume agreements: This is another area. We are recommending greater use of volume agreements, which makes surplus timber available to other users such as sawmills and veneer operations.

Wood chips: Another factor which has had an effect upon the potential utilization of timber has been the utilization of wood chips. In the past year, three-quarters of a million cords of pulp chips were produced and made available to pulp mills, and without this new development it would have been necessary to cut this much more additional timber in order to supply the pulp mill.

Also there is increased utilization of poplar and white birch. We call these weed species, and there is greater use of these. We are engaged with a study in co-operation with the federal Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce on the greater utilization of these species.

Remote timber: Naturally when mills were built in the 1920s they used the timber closest to them and now they have to go farther away. That is why we must take steps to make it more economical to use remote timber, and I introduced in the last few days an amendment to The Crown Timber Act whereby we will be able to lower stumpage use in remote areas. We are also building more access roads to be an incentive to cut timber in remote areas.

New mills: I believe the hon. member for Nipissing also made reference to it. Ontario has not seen too many new mills, it is quite true. There have been very few new mills in the last 10 or 15 years, except for this year. Ontario-Minnesota are building a $45 million kraft mill at Fort Frances.

However, even though there have been no new mills built in Ontario, this province has enjoyed a substantial increase in its fourth industry base, and this has come about through the expansion of already existing industries.

Our mills modernized and expanded. For example, I just referred to the one at Fort Frances and also, unlike most other provinces, our pulp and paper industry became sizable early in the mid-Twenties. Most of our mills were built during that time and the industry has grown steadily, mainly through regular increases in plant capacity and the replacement of obsolete mills and equipment. Also what a lot of people are not aware of is that in the Province of Ontario manufacturing is carried out to a much greater degree than in other provinces. For instance, for each cunit of wood produced in Ontario the manufacturing value amounts to $107 in Ontario as compared to $65 in Quebec and $37 in British Columbia.

Also, the hon. member for Thunder Bay asked what percentage of the Ontario seasonal employment programme was spent in northern Ontario last summer. Well we spent 29 per cent of the funds in northern Ontario, that area lying north of the French and Mattawa Rivers.

The hon. member for Thunder Bay also studied the annual report over the weekend and then made reference, I believe, to page 89 under the wildlife section about the diversion of northern waters. He was very upset on hearing about this.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to put him at ease on that subject and I think this will be interesting to the hon. members.

On August 5, 1965, the Prime Ministers of Ontario and Canada announced that each government would undertake a study of Ontario's northern water resources and related economic developments. This study includes the five main river basins, the Winisk, Severn, Attawapiskat, Albany and the Moose, comprising an area of about 173,000 square miles. The objectives of the study are:

1. To assess for all purposes the quantity and quality of waters draining into James Bay and Hudson Bay.
2. To determine the present and future needs of such waters.
3. To assess the alternative possibilities of the use of these waters locally or elsewhere through diversion.

Since our department is responsible for the management of natural resources—the fish and the game and so forth—we are obliged to make sure that studies of water diversion and power development schemes include their effect on the entire range of land, water and renewable resources values.

These studies include possible ecological changes over large areas and the impact of the scheme on the local and economic well-being of the area resident. The research branch of my department has been given the responsibility of developing approaches to ecological and socio-ecological studies of any water diversion proposal which may emerge from the other studies.

Also, Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, the hon. member referred to—again, reading the report—the economics branch appearing not be doing much work. I think it cuts into this, Mr. Chairman, because our economics branch, which is now known as the resource economics branch of the resource protective products division, is composed of a very able group of persons, very efficient and very dedicated. I know in negotiations we have had, for instance, with the CIP company and other companies, they had nothing but the highest praise for our personnel in that branch.

Even though there were only two reports mentioned in this, there are many, many reports that they are compiling that are not mentioned. For the record, I think I should give this view of their work. These are the activities of the resource economics branch:

1. Resource industry promotions.
2. Economic analysis of department programme.
3. Collection and publication of statistical information.

The annual report for the year ending March 31, 1970, cites only two examples of the work undertaken by this group: the socio-economic study of private landowners and the Christmas tree market study.

However, by far the greater amount of their work since that time has been directed to assisting industry develop through the preparation of numerous reports and feasibility studies and through active negotiation with a number of major companies.

Other branch activities include the analysis of quantity and distribution of pulp chips produced from sawmill residues; the priority ranking of departmental silviculture programmes, and the preparation of the new primary wood users directory which provides factual information relating to all of Ontario's forest industry; and the application of operations research techniques for forestry problems—for instance, the construction of a mathematical model concerning the rationalization of timber licences in northwestern Ontario. That study has been going on for quite some time and, if this was to come about, it would mean a reduction of about $5 million or more to the industries in northwestern Ontario.

Whatever applies to northwestern Ontario, of course, we could use that information for northeast and for all of Ontario.

Mr. Chairman, this group works very closely also with the Ontario Development Corporation and the federal Department of Regional Economic Expansion in the allocation of financial aid programmes to the forest-based industries.

Also, I have a member of my staff who is with The Department of Trade and Development and he acts as a liaison officer. There is, again I would like to repeat, very valuable work done by this resource economics branch.

On vote 1101:

Mr. Chairman: The member for Sudbury.

Mr. Sopha: Mr. Chairman, within the confines of the main office on Friday morning, which is a singularly appropriate time for philosophic speculation, and in the absence of press—

One wonders where they go. I do not complain myself; the press in Sudbury is very good to me which is where it counts, but they tell me there are some around here who feel like D'Artagnan in the dungeon. Nobody can hear them shouting. Maybe those news editors tell them their work is finished after the question period. I must ask Mr. Dowd someday. The Telegram is always very informative.

I want to raise the question of whether the Deputy Minister of Lands and Forest should be a person other than a professional forester or one who is trained in some aspect of the national sciences?

That proposition, the transfer of Mr. Macnee from Transport to Lands and Forests, raises a serious question in my mind about the policy of the government in respect of the administrative heads of these departments.

I had the advantage, many years ago—more than I care to remember; 20 years ago—of studying under the greatest scholar of Canadian government I suppose that this country ever produced in the person of R. MacGregor Dawson who taught political science at the University of Toronto. He taught the course in Canadian government to over 600 students, of which I was one, and in his later years became the biographer of Mackenzie King, produced two volumes of the biography, and then unfortunately passed away. R. MacGregor Dawson held it to be pre-eminent in the British parliamentary system that the minister of a department not be an expert. He said tragic results usually followed if the minister, the political head of the department, was an expert in the field.

Certainly the history of Canada demonstrates the validity of that proposition. For example, in every case where a military man has been Minister of National Defence, he has been a disaster. One was a mad disaster, who sometimes had to be physically restrained. He said the chief qualities the minister brings to a department—not necessarily in order of priority—are administrative skills, a keen and questioning mind, a political sense, and perhaps that is the most important, expert advice he can seek and get from those employed within the department. If he is himself an expert, has an accumulation of considerable lore in the field, then he is inclined to substitute his own knowledge and views for that of his colleagues. He is inclined to override their opinions.

Mr. L. M. Reilly (Eglinton): Would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Sopha: No; please! I am in full flight.

Mr. Reilly: I was just wondering if he would apply the same theory to the Attorney General's department?

Mr. Sopha: No, no, I am in full flight. We are just having a quiet discussion here.

But on the other hand, in my view, as well as in Professor Dawson's, the chief administrative person, the alter ego, the deputy minister, ought to be an expert in the field. He is the man in constant communication with the minister; he guides and advises him. The minister turns to him for that solace and comfort, that assistance that his harried existence entails.

Now especially in this department which deals with the natural sciences, I am one in the House who is very surprised to see the transfer of Mr. Macnee—not a professional forester, not one trained in science—from The Department of Transport to The Department of Lands and Forests. I would think the minister suffers under very grave disabilities by reason of that.

But let me say, if it needs to be said in parenthesis so I may pass on from it, that I do not know Mr. Macnee, I have nothing to do with him personally. I am sure he is a very fine and competent civil servant, and I am satisfied that, in The Department of Transport where he was, he applied himself with vigour, energy and intelligence.

Now, let us put on the record the comment that Professor Dawson said in his early work, which was a classic of its time, on the question of amateurs, as he called them, as heads of departments. I quote from page 230 of the first edition of his work, which has now passed into three editions;

To place a member of Parliament who is a third- or fourth-rate specialist at the head of a department because he is supposedly an expert, and to give this pretender the control of those who are really masters in their field would not merely be useless, it would be utterly disastrous.

An amateur minister of first-rate capacity is in large measure dependable and safe because he knows he is technically ignorant and he is therefore willing to seek and take the best advice obtainable. The third- or fourth-rate specialist does not adequately comprehend the extent of his own ignorance and is continually setting up his judgement on technical matters against the opinion of his advisers—the latter, it appears, on the grounds of special knowledge, which he really lacks, whereas the former's interference is based on common sense and judgement, which he in all likelihood possesses in uncommon measure. But even a specialist who is first class is likely to make a poor minister.

Practice has given this an unequivocal double confirmation. Not only has the use of the amateur minister been vindicated by long experience, the expert minister, the one who has presumably a profound technical knowledge of his department's work, has proven time and again to be a monumental failure.

That is the end of the quotation.

Professor Dawson, as one who knew him, always spoke and wrote with a very acerbic use of the English language. But the amateur minister, as we have in this department, when he wants expert advice on silviculture, on the biology relating to the vast quantities of game and fish that come under his control, when he wants advice on the management of Crown land and all those things, must turn, I would think, to the next in command to give him that technical information.

Now, really, to narrow it down, to expand on this narrow but important point, I must confess that in the usual frankness that characterizes my word, I am after bigger game. It is bigger game and it is the committee on government productivity that I am after. This transfer from Mr. Macnee, the replacement of the expert, Mr. Bayly, a professional forester by the non-expert, Mr. Macnee, arose out of the first report of the committee on government productivity. It is a fair comment to say that the government has accepted that report in its entirety. They had swallowed it hook, line and sinker.

That, of course, is demonstrated by the remark made by the Prime Minister in this House on April 15, when he announced these changes, including that of Mr. Macnee. He said:

These new recommendations by the committee on government productivity herald a new management style being introduced by this government to match the new demands placed on it as we deal with the needs and requirements of the people of Ontario in the 1970s.

Ringing words. A delicately inviting new phrase to add to the lexicon: "a new management style." That was adopted, of course, from the report—the second report of the committee on government productivity—I suspect, written by Mr. Bayly. I would be willing to bet a fiver these are his words.

The heading is, "A New Management Style."

All the above suggests is that what is required to cope with the problems of the Seventies is not a perpetuation of today's management habits but the development of a new management style. This new style will demand that government's approach to problems will be universal, rather than narrow or parochial in the departmental or functional sense; that the government will anticipate change rather than merely react to it; that the organization of the government will be flexible rather than rigid; that more productive use will have to be made of human, financial and material resources; that choices between conflicting programmes will have to be made on the basis of information which has probed deeper and been more thoroughly analysed.

I can leave off there. Do the members notice in this new corporate syndrome that there is nothing about people? There is nothing about the people that government, as an institution, has the sacred responsibility of serving. No; style is everything—style and the image. Mr. Trudeau has made it a respectable and inviting thing. It is style. Style is more important than opinion, and this in the age of television.

Let me approach it this way. My remarks are not going to be lengthy. Every so often somebody in the press writes an article on the mandarins. That is a nice word. I think it was Michael Lavoie of the Toronto Daily Star who wrote the last one. It was apparent that Mr. Lavoie did not know what a mandarin was. Quite apparent. The mandarins—and it might be useful to point this out—existed at the time of the beginning of the Christian era, at the end of the T'ang and the Sung dynasties in China, where the emperor was believed to be endowed with supernatural powers, where he was, of course, not only a direct representative of God but had some of God's qualities about him.

At the end of that era, the beginning of the Christian era, there was a return to the Confucian philosophy of six or seven centuries before. The civil service had to be knowledgeable in Confucius' works, as a condition of entry. And out of that by promulgation of a decree in 196 BC, arose the absolute power of the mandarins. The mandarins were something different, quite different from the civil service of today. The mandarins had all the power—there were no ministers—and they were directly responsible to the emperor. They managed the state for him. They were the residuaries of all power.

That has been watered down like a lot of other words, like ghetto—ghetto is never used in its correct sense. But I will not tarry with that. The mandarin is supposed to denote in the common parlance, and by the writers in popular prints, the civil servant who has a very wide influence, a man of great prestige. It was said, for example, during the latter days of Norman Robertson's tenure of the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, that at a cocktail party when Norman Robertson walked in, he immediately, notwithstanding who was present, became the focus of attention and sycophancy. They gravitated to him.

Now let me just pause to say there is lots of evidence in the history of government in Canada to support the thesis that the mandarins—so-called mandarins of the civil service—destroyed Diefenbaker. There is lots of evidence for that; that they actually destroyed him, and his effectiveness, and hastened his departure from the office of first citizen of Canada. But what is more important from my point of view, is that I have always looked with suspicion on that Ottawa bureaucracy and its mandarin qualities. They are often very difficult to deal with. They are often very abrupt. They are even impolite; I have encountered that.

Over the 12 years that I have been here I have thanked the God almighty that our civil service was not like them. They were entirely different, and we had not created or allowed to develop this individual of immense power—which is an appropriate place to say, what is the function of the bureaucracy?

What is their function? Not a management style. Not the trappings of corporate expertise. Their function is solely to respond to the needs of the people whom they serve.

They are entirely unlike the corporate executive. The corporation is engaged in the maximization of profit. Government is not. The only acceptable qualities of the bureaucrat might be summed up in that famous dictum of Socrates: he listens courteously, he considers soberly, and he gives the decision according to the very right and justice of the case.

They serve people; they must be responsible to people. And even if people are wrong, if they have a grievance they validly and sincerely hope or feel that government has done them in, then it is the bureaucracy which must salve the wounds. To hell with this business of corporate style.

Now I want Bayly and Dick—may I address them by their last names?—Bayly and Dick, and Brannan, and Ian MacDonald and Reynolds. I want them to know that they are mandarins—that there is one man in the House who will be watching them.

They mean to set up a power centre. I want them to know that Sopha will be watching them, and their moves, because I will be down at the end of the bench, unconvinced that the public interest of Ontario is served by this gobbledygook of management style. I want the civil service of Ontario to demonstrate those fine qualities that it has over the years of their attentiveness and patience.

I like the qualities of Belanger, the regional director for social and family services at Sudbury. I like the human response of Jimmy Band in the many years which he headed up the department of public welfare, his understanding. I like the smooth efficiency of Humphries, the registrar of motor vehicles. I like the patience of Bruce Legge, the chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board.

I am not interested in style. I am not interested in all the smoothly functioning mechanism of how the cabinet considers its work or the notion that style emanates from the top and filters down among the underlings. They use a phrase like that in this book.

Those are the things I believe in. That is the salutary penumbra within which I want to keep the civil service.

Now I think it is quite wrong, by slavish attention to this report by the cabinet, to transfer a man into a specialized department—a highly specialized department; it does not deal with broad policy questions that affect every aspect of life in Ontario.

This department deals with growing trees, a vast and plentiful resource. This department deals with the nurturing of fish and wildlife. It deals with the mechanics of the alienation of Crown lands. I have singled out these areas. It is a field singularly suited to specialized knowledge.

If I were at the head of the department, I would want to be able to turn to an expert in these aspects of the science; have him in the next room at the end of the telephone, a man whom I liked and trusted. I am speaking hypothetically—when I was reading a report that emanated from Fort Severn, from the lower reaches of the Winisk River, if there were some technical terms that I did not understand, I would want to be able to turn to my trusted deputy to fill in the gaps of my information. That is what he is for, for that type of advice.

I would like, after I made a speech, perhaps at Armstrong, and I said something that I was not entirely sure of its validity, that when I returned on Monday morning to my office, I would be able to check with the deputy and say, "Will it work from a practical and technical point of view? Is it feasible?" Mr. Bayly may say so—he is in the area of sciences. Mr. Macnee would not. He would not know, from the technical point of view.

He would have to ask Mr. Atcheson or he would have to ask Mr. Herridge, George McCormack, Jim Lockwood, any number of other people. Well, why? Why that extra step? Is that smooth functioning of the department? Hardly. But most of all I selected this focus to get off my chest what I wanted to say. I want the mandarins to know in this public place that I will be watching with interest.

I have seen that budget of the Prime Minister's office increase—what is it, by 68 per cent—68 per cent this year as a result of this report and at the end of it—I am going to sit down—but at the end of it there is much in it that makes me suspicious. At the end of the report—be it that he is the author—these others smugly say that all of the recommendations, six in number that were made in the first report, were accepted. They got them. They really gave it to them, hook, line and sinker, and they went for it.

As we expect, when there is a change in the ministry around here, this place, I am going to try to persuade the new leader of the government—it is lucky he is not here—for all those reasons that I have stated this morning—and they are philosophic reasons—for all those reasons I am going to say to the head of the government, let us tell Bayly and Reynolds and Brannan and MacDonald and Dick that they are not running the government of Ontario because nobody elected them. We were elected, we have the confidence of the people.

Ultimately, finally and in accordance with the genius of the British parliamentary system it is we who have to respond to what the people tell us, and if we do not respond then we are the ones who ought to suffer. Let us start our ministry off with that overriding, all-consuming consciousness of what government, as the servant of the people, responsive to its needs. If you see it in that focus, it has not anything to do with new management style.

I thank the House for its patience. I do not expect a reply; this was my polemic.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the minister a few questions in regard to the statement he made earlier this morning. But first I would like him to outline to the Legislature what the redefined goals of the department are. He mentioned in his opening remarks that there has been a thorough review of the goals and objectives, that is, of the department, but he does not go on to redefine what the goals and objectives are, except in a broad statement in regard to the social and economic benefits which The Department of Lands and Forests can provide for the publicly owned land, waters and so forth. But after a two-year study surely there must be some specific goals that can be outlined in regard to that broad statement.

He also goes on to state that they are going to have or they wish to have, the participation of people in the, I believe he indicates, decision-making process of the department. I find this rather difficult to understand when he appoints advisory committees. Then, this morning, I believe, he said that the reports of the advisory committees of the general public will not be made public, but will only be an input into the development of programmes by the department itself. I think we are going to have public participation, we have to do as the minister says and provide the results of the studies, and so forth, to them. I do think they have a right to know, particularly in regard to the reports that are forwarded to the minister on behalf of the public through the advisory committees.

Perhaps he could comment on those two questions.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, the reorganization took place on April 1. Prior to that, we had 10 branches. Now we have four main divisions—resource products division, land management division, outdoor recreation division and finance and administration division. This will make for a much more efficient operation. The advantages are that there will be a decentralization also of power and there will be more authority given to field representatives. I think the hon. member and all members agree with me that the people in the field are on site, They are knowledgeable and often there are many decisions they can make without having to refer to headquarters. I am not speaking about major policy decisions, but decisions that can be made in the field.

So there are many advantages in this new reorganization programme. I have a four- or five-page report on all the advantages I can send to the hon. member. I would pleased to send it to him if he wishes that.

Mr. R. S. Smith: That does not really deal with my question. I want to know what the goals and objectives are. The minister is talking perhaps partly about what the member for Sudbury was indicating this morning, that management philosophy should be based on the goals and objectives, not the other way around. I would like the minister to outline the two-year study produced in regard to goals and objectives of the department.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The objectives of reorganization are to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the department in meeting its objectives of public service. This can be facilitated by: 1. A decentralization of authority and responsibility, for example, as I just mentioned, decision-making in the field. 2. An improvement in planning to provide better short- and long-range allocation of resources, land, labour and capital.

Head office will increasingly concern itself with policy and strategic planning, development of legislation, policies and procedures in the obtaining of funds. It will become less concerned with operational management.

The regional responsibilities will include strategic and tactical planning, decision-making with respect to allocation of funds, and output targets to the districts. Districts will be responsible for tactical and operational planning in operations management. Much operational routine will be processed directly from districts to branches. Existing legislation and policies may inhibit decentralization and, where this is found to be the case, revisions will be recommended.

The necessary communications and information systems will be developed. Funds will be allocated to the region at the programme, sub-programme, and activity levels. Responsibility will be commensurate with funds allocated. The field organization through time will become two-tiered. There will be more but smaller districts. The inherent capability of the field staff to meet increased responsibilities arising from decentralization is acknowledged. It is likewise acknowledged that there will be a need for staff development and training and staff relocation. Also there will be a more effective system of performance evaluation based on the achievement of output targets, and these will be developed. Within the system, head office will evaluate regions, and regions will evaluate districts or work units. Every attempt will be made to develop ideal working conditions. These will include good communications and encouragement of innovations in the interest of achieving the goals of both the department and the individual.

As for functional responsibilities, the major changes in functions of head office will be gradual, entailing a delegation of some responsibilities to the field and an assumption of a gradual role in strategic planning. Some functions will remain at head office because it is more efficient to keep them there; for example, like regular staff payrolls. Others will be kept there because of government decisions beyond our control; for example, payment of invoices. Finally, there are the requirements for experts in a department, such as lawyers, economists, nursery soil experts and so forth.

Regional functions will be greatly increased. Final decisions as to the extent of responsibility will have to be worked out in detail in co-operation with head office, branches and regional directors who must have the staff capabilities to assume their responsibilities. Some specific things which could become field responsibilities include nurseries, timber licences up to a given value or term, co-ordination and support of district fire control organizations and so forth.

Changes in district responsibilities are taking place all the time. Reorganization will not necessarily bring great changes, but it should increase the capability to make changes as required. As the planning programming budgeting system becomes more firmly established, there will be changes in emphasis in district work and responsibilities. Reorganization will facilitate this process for the reasons outlined and to provide better service to the general public. Our main aim and goal is to manage the natural resources and to provide more efficient, better service to the public who want this. And I am very optimistic that this will work out.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Basically, though, what the minister is talking about in that statement are the changes in the management structure to effect the goals and objectives. But he still has not given us a full statement of what the goals and the objectives of the department are. In other words, what does he want to get through the changes in his philosophy of management? This is what I am trying to get at. If they had a two-year study, they must have come up with some goals and objectives for the department as a service to the people of the province. The minister is talking about reaching the goals and objectives, but what are they as far as he is concerned?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes, that is right. For instance, in the districts of Sudbury and Nipissing we will have three main divisions—or whatever the right word is—outdoor recreation, resource management and land management; of course, land includes land and water. There will be closer and better integration; before, as I mentioned, we had 10 times this number. For instance now, under outdoor recreation, the parks branch and the fish and wildlife branch come under outdoor recreation; commercial fishing now comes under resource products. So this reorganization should work for the better management of our resources. Today—I do not need to tell the member; he knows—outdoor recreation is becoming more and more important. We are placing more emphasis on outdoor recreation by having a separate division which will encompass these other branches.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I understand that. I guess we cannot get to what the minister's real objectives and goals are. The minister is talking about management and I am talking about what the real objectives and goals are in regard to what he wants to do for the people in the province and the resources he wants to regulate.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member will refer to the annual report and if he will read the foreword on page 3, this outlines the goals and objectives—resources, economic development, outdoor recreation.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Okay. I will read that and I will accept that is what it is until I read it. But if the government did a two-year study, I am sure the minister must be aware of what the goals and objectives are and not the management philosophy or rearrangement that is going to be used to obtain those goals and objectives. That is what the minister's first statement, the other night, did not include. It just alluded to that.

In regard to the rearrangement of the management process, will this set up another level? Am I to understand that another level will be set up between the district offices and the regional offices? Is there going to be another level in there?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: At the management level we previously had 10 branches with a chief at the head of each branch and three regional directors. They all reported to the deputy minister. Now, there will be only four executive directors, four divisions. There are three regional directors, in northwestern Ontario, northeastern and southern Ontario. So it will make for a smaller group.

As far as the districts are concerned there is reorganization there, but there are not that many changes. As mentioned in my remarks also, as time goes on we may have smaller districts again in order to provide better service to the people.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Would we expect then that the actual power of decision of regional officers will expand under this programme?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes, that is right. The regional officers and the district officers will have more authority.

Mr. R. S. Smith: But there will not be any level between the district offices and the regional offices? There is no new level in there, although there likely will be more people under these three areas within the regional offices?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We have 21 districts. The district foresters report to the regional directors—in the member's area, northeastern Ontario, there might be six or seven districts and they report to Mr. Lockwood who is the regional director. He is a member of the management committee of four executive directors and three regional directors.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I see. So his office—actually the Sudbury regional office—will be expanded in complement because of this change?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Quite likely, yes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Quite likely, maybe not right away but it will be? Would this indicate that there will be a movement of people to that level from the administrative branches here in Queen's Park? Would the minister say that there will be a movement that way and not from the district offices up into the regional offices?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I rather think it will be both ways.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Both ways? Depending on the need for people and who the minister has available.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Fine, okay. I would like to go back, Mr. Chairman, to a couple of remarks the minister made earlier this morning in regard to the leasing of Crown land.

Can the minister tell me definitely when he will have a method of lease available so that those people who have now been waiting perhaps a year for purchases of Crown lands will be allowed to lease those properties? There are some people, I think, who had been told by the district office that land in specific areas, or specific lots even, would be available to them this spring on a purchase basis.

Now I agree, as the minister knows, with the policy that he has taken in regard to leases, but on the other hand I think there is a responsibility to provide those people with that alternative now and not have them wait and miss a whole year.

Hon. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, first may I say that people have not been waiting a whole year. It was only on March 30, I believe, when the House opened in the Throne Speech that we announced that Crown lands for cottage lot purposes from henceforth would be leased instead of sold.

Now we have our subdivisions that have been planned. We have subdivisions being planned for a number of years and those subdivisions will be put up for lease. Those lots will be put up for lease sometime in the very near future. So the procedures on leasing have been arrived at. The regulations have to be amended, but I would hope that in a matter of a very few weeks our lots will be up for lease. So I do not anticipate any delays.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I know people have not been waiting to lease for a year, but they have been waiting to purchase on the subdivisions that were set up last year and that were ready to go for sale this spring. They have been waiting to purchase those lots for a year, or for maybe a little less than a year, maybe early last summer, when the department let them know what was going to be available, but now they have got to wait until the government develops the policy under which it is going to lease them the land. So it is imperative that that policy come up as quickly as possible, so that these people can be given the opportunity.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: But, we have really expedited this and, again, I would like to say—today is what, May 7?—that I would hope to have that by the end of this month.

Mr. R. S. Smith: There was another question with regard to the sale of private lands. The minister indicates that this is not his responsibility at all, and it is the responsibility of government as a whole. But the minister is part of government as a whole and the recreational lands in the province are within his responsibility, whether they be private or Crown. His responsibility is direct with regard to Crown lands, but he certainly must have a major interest in the development of private recreational lands across the province too. At least, I should hope that this is a part of the aims and objectives of the department, that these would be included in it. So the minister does have a direct—maybe not a responsibility as yet—but an interest which should direct him toward a responsibility with regard to the sale of private recreational lands in the area, in the province.

What I asked the minister in my opening remarks is if he would do a study to find out a method by which the control of the sale of private recreational lands could be established by the provincial government. I think if this study is going to emanate from anywhere, it has to emanate from his department, because his is the most closely associated department with the recreational lands in the government, whether they be private or Crown.

If the minister wants to say that he does not agree with any type of control on the sale of private lands, that is another question. But to evade it, by saying that it is not the responsibility of his department, is evading. I would think, part of the responsibility of his department with regard to recreational lands in total in the whole province, even though the policy he has now established will control 15 per cent of the private cottage lot sales in the province—and I agree with this. But there is the other large area where now we are certainly going to find the non-Canadian citizen very active in purchasing recreational lands. Since he has closed off this 15 per cent, I am sure his interest will move quickly to the private sales. I believe, as I think many other people in this province do, that, if it is necessary for government to control sales to non-Canadian citizens at the Crown level, it is also necessary to establish some type of control in the private sector in regard to those sales.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, again I do not agree that we, as a government should, if we are interested in outdoor recreation, have agreements with the private landowners for using their lands for public hunting in Ancaster township and also for possible easements for using the stream. But, I do not see the value of looking into the purchasing of private land.

Mr. R. S. Smith: As for private lands, what we are doing now—and I hope the minister is aware of it—is that since 1962 we have purchased 449,397 acres of land with over 80 miles on the Great Lakes frontage. These are lands that have been purchased mainly for recreational purposes, for parks, beaches, public access points, public hunting and public fishing. We are doing this continually. We are acquiring more and more private lands for the use of the public. Again I fail to see, Mr. Chairman, why we, as the government, should not try to make a study to look into the purchasing of private lands.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Is the member referring to lands that come up for taxes, for instance?

Mr. R. S. Smith: I refer to the total land sales in the recreational use areas of the province and the control of those sales to eliminate sales to non-Canadian citizens.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Does the member realize what that could mean? Does he realize the administration costs that this would entail?

Mr. R. S. Smith: I do not think the administrative costs would be prohibitive at all. It is a matter of regulation or of a new Act.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: To interfere with the sale of private lands?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Okay. Failing the minister's desire to do that, does he feel that the $20 million programme—what was it the Treasurer called it?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Oh! The $20 million—

Mr. R. S. Smith: Land Acquisition Corporation—is that not what it was called? Does the minister feel that the Land Acquisition Corporation should be active in the purchase of recreational lands on direction from his department? Does he feel that they should have first right of refusal on private sales of recreational lands of a large area? Does he feel, or would he recommend that policy be established along with legislation to give that corporation first right of refusal on those sales? This is a degree of control but not the same.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This Ontario Land Acquisition Corporation that the member refers to was announced in the Throne Speech and in the budget. This comes under the provincial Treasurer (Mr. McKeough). I do not know the details. I do not believe that this has been made known yet, but our department hopes that funds will be available under that programme for the acquisition of land for recreational purposes.

I believe that fund will be a sort of a large umbrella. It will acquire land for maybe housing projects and so forth. But I do hope, and I would think so, that it would also include recreational land.

Mr. R. S. Smith: On private sales of recreation lands?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: On private sales of recreation lands that are privately owned? Well, this is a matter that we could look into, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. R. S. Smith: That would be the watered-down policy of my first suggestion.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Item number—

Mr. R. S. Smith: Are you going to do it item by item?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I think it would be preferable if we could go—

Mr. Chairman: Item by item?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: —vote by vote.

Mr. Chairman: Anything else on vote 1101? The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Yes, Mr. Chairman, I wanted to speak only on the one portion of vote 1101, and that is to do with the junior forest ranger programme. There is no use expounding on the programme itself at all, Mr. Chairman. Everyone knows about the programme. My concern is that the programme is now being used to its maximum. In other words—not the programme, but the facilities are not being used to their maximum.

I can recall last year making mention to the minister that the facilities for the programme should be used during the months of May, June and also September. And today, with the large numbers of unemployed youth, I think we had just an ideal setup of trying to accommodate youth to a greater degree than we are today.

We have this department being involved in a SWEEP programme in conjunction with The Department of Energy and Resources Management, if I am not mistaken. However, we still have junior forest ranger facilities that could be put to greater use. Does the minister not think that they should be used during the months of May, June and September?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I can appreciate the hon. member's suggestion, but we are limited to the amount of money that is budgeted for this purpose. We are fortunate this year in that we had an increased allowance. This year we will be employing 2,034 boys; last year it was about 1,860. So we are employing more junior rangers. But we are limited to the amount of money available. We are also limited to the facilities—our tree planting programme is done, of course, at this time of the year in May and June; a lot of the buildings that are used for the junior rangers are the same buildings that are used by our personnel and other people we employ for the tree planting and other programmes, which come about in May and June. But there is no doubt that if we had more funds available, we could employ students in those months of May and June rather than only in July and August. The limitations are there on budget and physical facilities.

Mr. B. Newman: I can understand the minister's comments. But this being such an unusual year, a year which we hope we will never have to witness again, where there are such large numbers of students unemployed—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Not now, Mr. Chairman, but as time goes on—

Mr. B. Newman: It will be worse?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, our projection for junior rangers is that in the next 10 years there will be an increase for the demand and then, after 10 years, a sort of a plateau where it will level off.

Mr. B. Newman: And does the minister intend to accelerate his programme over the next period of time to accommodate the increased demand and to provide job opportunities to the 17-year-olds?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, Mr. Chairman, I just mentioned that we had increased our junior programme this year by about 170 positions.

Mr. B. Newman: Let us say 200 as a round figure.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Okay, 200. Also we are employing close to 1,000 under the SWEEP programme. Totally last year, with the junior rangers and with others under 18 in that group, we employed about 3,500 or 3,600. This year, it will be about 5,000. So we have increased it substantially over last year.

Mr. B. Newman: I am not being critical of the minister's programme, because I heartily endorse the programme. My whole thought is to make more programmes available for our school-attending youths and if we do not, the minister knows what the youths are going to think. They will immediately assume that this style of government cannot take care of the needs, and as a result their attentions will turn to a different "ism." If that is the intention of this government, then it is following the right path.

The minister mentioned that he has had roughly a 10 per cent increase in the junior forest ranger programme. My thought is not a 10 per cent increase, but a 100 per cent increase if possible. I think the minister should have clenched his teeth a little harder with Treasury Board to be able to accommodate these junior forest rangers.

May I suggest to the minister at this time too, Mr. Chairman, that where possible he use a community that has a community college and perhaps use the facilities of that college for the applications, so students could apply through the college for the junior forest ranger programme or the SWEEP programme. As it is today, the students are a little lost as to where to apply for employment with the Ontario government. There seems to be no central agency to which they can go. They can write to the minister's department and they are always—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Or the member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman: I am not being critical. They are always being taken care of very well, Mr. Chairman, and I appreciate it very much, as do the students. But I think it would make it a little easier if they had some central location in my area especially, Essex county, where they could very easily go to the Holiday Beach facilities there. Likewise, as has been suggested, they could use the community college, St. Clair College, in the area. I know the students would like to show concern and interest and this might be one avenue by which the minister could show to them that he likewise is interested in them.

On the SWEEP programme, Mr. Chairman, I understand it is only for those over 17 years of age, that is, 18 and over. Does the minister consider any priority basis for those who may have taken the junior forest ranger programme the previous year by giving them preference in a SWEEP programme? Was that considered, or does he think, that an individual having had one chance with The Department of Lands and Forests, the opportunity then should be given to someone else?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, the member has made some very good suggestions. I think with reference to SWEEP that, if this programme were to be carried on another year, we could maybe make it have central locations where they could apply and make it a little easier.

Whether we give preference to those who were junior rangers last year for employment in the SWEEP programme—I believe there are some—I am not aware whether we give preference, and I do not know whether we should give preference either.

Mr. B. Newman: I am not necessarily asking for the preferential treatment for these youngsters, but I know they enjoy the junior forest range programme so much that they would like to continue. They know that they have had that once-in-a-lifetime experience at 17, and they want to make it twice in a lifetime. Now that the government has set up a SWEEP programme, I have been approached by quite a few as to how do they get in on it. There is no real information available. They apply to the minister's department for the SWEEP programme. Then he has the—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Energy and Resources Management.

Mr. B. Newman: Or Energy and Resources Management. Unfortunately, Energy and Resources Management is of no assistance to individuals from Essex county wishing to get in on the SWEEP programme. We do not have a conservation authority in Essex county, so they cannot get in through Energy and Resources Management. As a result, I would hope that they could get in through the minister's programme. Can they?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. B. Newman: And will the individuals with the SWEEP programme from Essex county be located in Essex county?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Not necessarily.

Mr. B. Newman: Is it not a live-at-home programme? Is it a live-in programme?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: My understanding of SWEEP is that they could be hired, say in North Bay, and that they would find and pay for their own accommodation. It is not like a junior ranger programme whereby we supply the camps and they are accommodated as well as given meals.

Mr. B. Newman: Then in the SWEEP programme, in the case of the individual who obtains employment by means of this programme, are additional moneys paid to him for accommodations?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I do not believe so. I believe that they pay their own room and board and there is no special provision. But we do try, though, to provide employment to the student as close to his home as possible. There would be quite a number, I would hope, who would be able to live at home, but others do not live at home and therefore, they have to obtain accommodation and they have to pay for it.

Mr. B. Newman: May I make two suggestions to the minister then that he use the provincial parks that he does have—I am going to be parochial and refer to Essex county—he has the Holiday Beach there—that he use the SWEEP programme in conjunction with the park, so that students, or whoever gets into the SWEEP programme, can live in the city, live at home, work in the SWEEP programme and be able to commute on a regular basis. If they wish to camp at the beach or at the site on which they are going to work that is all well and good. I thought it would be good to have the programme associated with the park itself. There is enough work to do around there.

Then the second suggestion is that possibly this programme in the core cities or in the major cities could be associated directly with the department of parks. Let the youth be hired by the minister's department but be assigned to the parks commissioner and his staff to do the type of work that he recommends that they be doing in the community, but be under the supervision of the department of parks and recreation.

I know in my own community, Harry Brumpton who happens to be the parks commissioner, would be more than pleased to have a pilot SWEEP group so that he could maybe evaluate the programme for you.

I would hope that the minister would seriously consider that, even at this late date. Assign some students to him, see how they work with the parks department and if it is workable the programme could then be expanded to accommodate unemployed school-attending youth.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We would be pleased, Mr. Chairman, to look into the suggestion of the hon. member.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 1101. The hon. member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman, I want to get back to a question I asked the minister a while ago in regard to the Algonquin Park advisory committee report which he discussed earlier this morning. I asked you later on in regard to the aims and goals of your department and I also asked about making public the advisory committee's report to you.

We got away from that by some circuitous route, but perhaps the minister could explain to me if the statement of this morning means that the reports of any advisory committees to the minister will not be made public, that they will be used just as interdepartmental reports and will be used only to formulate the policy of the government?

There is no intention of making this report public at all and there is no intention of making the report of the Quetico advisory committee public? Is this the intention of the hon. minister and the government.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: No. Specifically with the Algonquin advisory committee report, as I mentioned, I do not see the value in making this report public now. This report was only recently sent to me. It is a policy report, and it has not been looked into by my colleagues. If I were to make this public, a lot of the people who would be reading it would be thinking that this is government policy.

Mr. R. S. Smith: No, no, that is not true.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I know it is not true, but they would think that it is government policy. They think a lot of things printed in the press are government policy.

Mr. R. S. Smith: You never do anything that can be misconstrued as anything else. You never do anything like that. But you would be doing nothing, really.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I do believe that there should be an interim progress report, and I will do my best to see that this is made public in the not too distant future.

Mr. R. S. Smith: You said an interim progress report?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: By that you do not mean the report of the advisory committee?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: No. It would probably incorporate a lot of the recommendations. This report of the advisory committee is to the government.

Mr. R. S. Smith: But it is not an interdepartmental report. You talk in your opening remarks about participation of people, and you want people to participate but you do not want them to do it publicly. Is this your concept of participation? There is no public discussion on what the findings are of a committee such as the advisory committee?

I thought when the committee was first formed that it was representative of the various different interest groups within Algonquin Park—and I think that this was the minister's statement at the time—and it becomes pretty obvious over the year and a half or 20 months that the committee has sat that they were coming to the point, finally, where they could send a report which would be made public and which the interest groups that they represent would be able to look at, and evaluate and then tell the government what they thought about the advisory committee's report. This was the purpose of it.

But if it is going to be treated as another interdepartmental report that is only for the minister's purpose, then I believe firstly that the members of the Legislature have no place on that committee, because they are elected people who have a responsibility to report facts back to the public as to what they recommend through the minister to the committee.

I would suggest that if this is going to be the case there is no place on the committee for members of the Legislature, and for my own purposes if that is going to be the case I am going to have to resign from the committee. And when I do that I take with me anything that happened in there, and as I do not believe it is an interdepartmental report I do not believe there are any constraints on me as to what the report to you has indicated.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): I do not know whether the minister wants to reply immediately, but surely his statement after a number of other considerations that he would not make the report public is one which cannot be accepted. To begin with, I think his reasons that it might be misconstrued as government policy are ridiculous. The report would obviously be the sort of development that all of the people concerned with the Algonquin multiple use controversy would have great interest in indeed, and I am sure all of those people would be quite capable of reading the title of the report that it was from the advisory committee. I think that even, politically, the minister makes a great error when he does not make public the recommendations from the committee and the results of their investigations. The only type of thing which could with any justification be kept secret would be a report from his own employees who would have gone into the area to look into certain matters which would be for the benefit of the minister and his chief advisers in reaching a policy decision.

I felt at the time that the advisory committee was constituted that it was simply a means of taking off the minister himself, the pressure which was coming on from a number of groups within the community that sincerely felt and vociferously said that government policy was inadequate and, in fact, was going to destroy this park, which is a proud and most valuable heritage in this province.

The hon. member for Nipissing has indicated he is not prepared to accept the minister's decision that it will not be made public, if for no other reason than that he, as a member of the Legislature, was a part of the committee. Obviously, he has public responsibilities which he must judge independently from the minister's. I do not think this is any idle threat and I can say to the minister that there has been no consultation between the two of us on this. I think he is absolutely correct in what he has said, that the minister is making a serious error, an error in every one of the categories, as I mentioned, the political one, which is not terribly important, except that I believe that this is what is motivating him when he says he is afraid it will be misconstrued as government policy.

I think it is evident that government policy is in limbo until the minister makes a decision that is backed up by his colleagues in the cabinet council. I believe that it is up to him to show the community that he is prepared to involve the special interests within the community, and as many of those without special interests as he possibly can, in seeking the sort of background advice and position from which eventually government policy will be formed.

He knows, and we all know, that he and his cabinet colleagues will be ultimately responsible for the policy which is imposed. That is the way the responsible system works, and that is when, of course, he has got to carry his personal load as minister. But, surely, if there is any usefulness in having this advisory committee undertake these many months of work, or whatever they have been doing, there has been no indication, publicly, what they have really been doing.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: They have been doing a lot.

Mr. Nixon: Yes, a lot of sitting around discussing these matters. Yes, I am sure it has all been very useful. But there is no way of telling, until we see the report itself. I can say to the minister, Mr. Chairman, that if he is not prepared to make that report public, I, as leader of the Liberal Party, will personally back the hon. member for Nipissing in his statement that he will not be able to continue on the committee and that he will not be responsible for the retention in secrecy of anything that went on in it. Why should he be?

Mr. R. J. Boyer (Muskoka): There is no way of pleasing the hon. member for Nipissing.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Chairman, in listening to this debate and hearing the statements of the minister, it is certainly incredible and inadmissible that he should consider putting things under wraps. Too often you have done that in this government. The things that the government finds a little unpalatable are immediately suppressed. We over here find that to be very distasteful and a very undemocratic method of procedure, smacking of aristocracy, which you are always verging toward, even with respect to those committees which you have internal control over, the committees with non-elected representatives appointed through your governmental auspices, and this is done all the time, pigeon-holed and suppressed.

It is a form of inverted censorship, using public moneys against the interests of the public because the thing might happen to be a little detrimental here and there to yourself. You presume to say that the mind of the people of Ontario is so naive, that they are so little politically conscious, that they cannot discriminate between what is government policy and what are recommendations made to a government.

With a diversity of interest being represented on the committee, what other pretext or grounds are you alleging then as to why this particular report ought not to be made public? We in this party with our representatives would, I am certain, take the same stance as is taken.

We do not propose to have hard work go into the thinking and drawing up of recommendations to this ministry, time taken up of an elected official who represents a partisan interest even though he may transcend it in terms of seeking to reach some kind of communal goal, and then have that squelched, siphoned off, put aside and dismissed.

We will not permit that type of suppression as long as we sit on that type of committee. We think it wrong in principle, we think that you were ill-advised and should reconsider your whole position touching this particular committee and lo, a plethora of others.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Well I take it, Mr. Chairman, the minister being a man of eminent good sense, has just reconsidered his position and would be pleased at an appropriate time to make the committee report public?

It is, he will concede, a ludicrous proposition. We will call a press conference and release it if you will not, so you might as well release it. It is a public document in the sense that the hon. members of the Legislature had access to it; both the Algonquin committee and the Quetico committee. We shall not abuse its contents. You need not be concerned with that. We are not going to insist that it is government policy. You will make the policy.

You have obviously been making the policy about Quetico as you go along and you have yet to come to a final decision, and I think the whole world knows that now. Certainly the minister knows that he has not arrived at a final decision. He has reminded us of it often enough.

But in that amiable sense of judicious fair play which runs through everything the minister does, I suggest that we release the report collectively as soon as it comes out and have it as a basis for debate, and not get into this kind of hassle unnecessarily. Because it will out, there is no way of containing this report. So let us not spend much time discussing it.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 1101. The hon. member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith: The minister is not going to make any further comments in regard to the report?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, this comes under the last vote, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. R. S. Smith: The lands vote?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The last vote.

Mr. Nixon: It comes under the first vote too. It is a matter of policy.

Mr. Lewis: The minister is asking for the weekend to reconsider his position.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This is going to make the members more at ease. First, I will say to them that they probably will be a little disappointed that this report—it is a good report but there is no dynamite in it.

Mr. R. S. Smith: No. That is right, but nobody said that.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I naturally think, subject to the consent of my colleagues on this matter, I would be prepared to release that report along with a progress report giving the whole progress report at some later date, subject of course, to the consent of my colleagues.

Mr. R. S. Smith: That is fine, but they have not seen this report.

Mr. Nixon: That is good. You are the minister. What have they got to do with it? Why does the minister not fix it up and do it himself? He does not have to worry about those fellows.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: What have they got to do with it? This is government policy. The Leader of the Opposition should know that.

Mr. Nixon: And you are the minister. I think you forget about that at times. They do not consult you too often, do they?

Mr. Lewis: The minister will never be stronger than he is now. Why does he not consult those who are here and make his decision?

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. member for Nipissing wish to ask a question?

Mr. R. S. Smith: The minister can ask the member sitting behind him. He is an expert.

An hon. member: He is a good man.

Mr. Nixon: What is the Hydro vice-chairman talking about anyway when he says the government will never be satisfied?

Mr. Boyer: The hon. member for Nipissing is trying to make a big issue out of this innocuous little report.

Mr. Nixon: Out of what?

Mr. Boyer: He is trying to make an issue out of this innocuous little report.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 1101?

Mr. R. S. Smith: We will ignore the member just as they do down at Hydro.

Mr. Boyer: I notice the hon. member writes me letters from time to time.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman, with regard to the third part of of vote 1101, I would like to ask the minister—

Mr. Lewis: If I were the hon. member I would resign.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue): That is a hobby of the member's.

An hon. member: The member would not give up that $10,000 so easily.

Mr. C. G. Pilkey (Oshawa): The member is trying to save them embarrassment.

Mr. R. S. Smith: There is an increase of 50 per cent of the cost of legal services this year. We went over the agricultural estimates the other night and there were similar increases there. Are these increases to be the lawyers who are on the staff of the province above the five per cent guideline that has been set by the Treasurer?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, the legal services were increased by a total of $80,100.

Salaries and employee benefits increased $30,700; additional workload expanded activities, $12,000; and replacement of equipment and binding of patent records, $37,400.

Mr. R. S. Smith: How many lawyers are employed in the legal services branch?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Five, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Five. And the increase in salaries was $30,000?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The total staff in the legal office is 18 persons.

Mr. R. S. Smith: What were the increases for the legal staff?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The legal people?

Mr. R. S. Smith: The lawyers.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The lawyers?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Right.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The hon. member is not suggesting that they should not be included?

Mr. Nixon: The member is asking how much are they making.

Mr. R. S. Smith: All right. I am asking what is the increase in their salaries?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: In their salaries?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Is it above the guidelines that the Treasurer set for everybody else in the civil service or is it the same?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I believe they come under the civil service classification and when increases were made last October, they were included.

Mr. R. S. Smith: But the minister must be—

Mr. Nixon: Tell the members what they were.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The amount?

Mr. Nixon: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We would be pleased to give that information to the hon. member. To be very frank, our very able legal people are not being paid any more than other departments.

Mr. Nixon: We just want to compare it with the five per cent ceiling.

Mr. Chairman: Vote 1101?

Mr. R. S. Smith: Just one more question on the SWEEP programme. Could the minister describe what types of programmes these are? At the district levels I do not think they have been made aware yet of the type of programme each district will be allowed to run, and since it is only a couple of weeks away to the time when they will be starting, perhaps they should be told what type of programmes will be approved. How many people will be allotted to each district?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This SWEEP programme came about through the environmental enhancement programme and the work to be performed will be such as timber improvement, clearing and pruning of trees, tree plantation, tree nursery feeding, road dusting, environmental clearing, nature trail construction, developing snowmobile trails and canoe routes, land inventory for lake management plans, lake level surveys, forest fire hazard reduction, maintenance of ground and buildings, pest control, field census, water samplings, inventory of fish and game population and game habitat improvement.

Mr. R. S. Smith: How many districts have submitted programmes for approval, or is this the way it is being done?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: How many districts? I would think all 21 of our districts will be included in this programme.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Have they all submitted programmes for approval?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: And how many people—there will be a total of 1,000, did you say?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: About 1,000, yes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Will this 1,000 be spread over part of the province in regard to distribution, because the rest of the SWEEP programme under Energy and Resources is only going to apply to the southern part of the province?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This will apply to all parts of the province, and northern Ontario of course will be receiving a large part of it because a lot of the tree planting and portage clearing is to be done in the north.

Mr. R. S. Smith: There will be a balance between this and the other SWEEP programme under Energy and Resources to provide the same opportunities in each part of the province?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: That is right.

Mr. Chairman: Shall vote 1101 carry?

Mr. Lewis: Just before you carry it, a question more than a comment: If one wants to raise the question of access to beaches, is that best confined to the recreation vote or should it be under legal services?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes, this would be under vote 1102, the next vote.

Mr. Lewis: On 1102, fine.

Vote 1101 agreed to.

On vote 1102:

Mr. Chairman: Page 190. This is probably better discussed by items within the vote, so we will deal with item 1. Is there anything under programme administration? Item 1, vote 1102, carried? Carried.

Item 2, forest protection. Anything under forest protection? The hon. member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I just have a couple of short questions: This includes fire protection, and the next part of the vote is the extra budget. Is that right?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: That is right.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Does forest protection include the silvicultural activities of the department?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: No, silviculture, Mr. Chairman, I believe would come under timber.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Under the fourth vote then, eh?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: That is right, item 4.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Chairman, under this vote, does this cover protection of—for example, we hear from time to time that the maple tree is developing a disease similar to the elm tree? Is this the vote in which one discusses this?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Forest protection. It should come under forest protection.

Mr. Spence: It has been brought to my attention quite a number of times in different parts of the province that further disease is striking the maple tree. Could the minister enlighten me if this is the case or has he been approached by some people who are concerned about it, that the maple tree is going to be wiped out the same as the elm trees across the province?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This is just a temporary problem. It is not like the dutch elm disease which is very serious and for which up until now there has been no known cure, but the maple one is being looked into and we hope to have it removed.

Mr. Spence: Does the minister's department spray them, where people find this disease taking place?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I am advised, yes. Spraying is one of the methods and we are doing this now.

Mr. Spence: In case there are complaints from the different parts, contact the minister's office; is this it?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Whatever is the easier, Mr. Chairman, either my office or the local district office.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further under item 2? The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Yes; if the famous elm disease syndrome comes under this forest protection branch, Mr. Chairman, could the minister tell the House how many elms have been cut down, how many remain to be saved, and what is the extent of elm tree disease dispersion across the Province of Ontario? What, in effect, has been the value of the special government programmes to provide temporary employment in cutting down diseased elms? Can we have some specifics about this problem and programme?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, it is a programme that will have to be carried on over a number of years. What was done this winter under the seasonal employment programme was very helpful in removing dead elm on Highways 400 and 401.

The announcement by my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart), about a month ago that farmers will be eligible for a $5 grant for removal of elm trees on their property, I believe, is a step in the right direction. Also we have many municipalities and others which have written to us that they would like to see a programme implemented. We hope to have a programme implemented whereby grants would be given to municipalities on a sharing basis for the removal of dead elm. This material has been forwarded.

We have a lot of information on the areas where we could commence doing this. I would say that the main obstacle—if I may use those words—is the question of getting the funds available. It is a very desirable project and I hope that this programme could be implemented this year. With the way unemployment could be this fall, I think it would be a good programme to have.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, this raises some interesting implications. The minister is really hard done by if one listens to him. All his programmes suffer the penurious outlook of his colleagues. They refuse to give him any money. He could employ a great many more young junior forest rangers but it is the problem of money. He could buy more escarpment land, but it is a problem of money. He could cut down more elm trees, but it is the problem of money. I know of no other department which has such really grievous problems and complains so quietly, almost with pathos about them. We want to help the minister; we want to help him get a few more dollars.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: It would cost at least $10 million to remove the dead elm trees in this province.

Mr. Lewis: It would cost $10 million to remove the dead elm to beat the disease?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I am inclined to think as much as $10 million a year.

Mr. Lewis: Ten million dollars a year. For how many years and to remove how many trees?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: For quite a number of years.

Mr. Lewis: I would like to know what these eloquent moans are across the floor except perhaps that on a Friday they are up earlier than normal. I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, it is perfectly legitimate that if someone throws out a figure of $10 million a year, he must surely have some source on which the estimate was based. Is it not too much to ask how they arrive at such lump sums and how many people we are talking about in terms of employment?

I think, if memory serves me, his previous plan employed—I am confused now; it was both a municipal works plan and a diseased elm plan, but I think it was 3,500 or so, was it not, at a cost of what?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The member is referring to the plan we had last winter?

Mr. Lewis: The plan covering this winter. It was the government's most imaginative response to the problems of unemployment in Ontario—cutting down elm trees. The minister must know something of it.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman I do not have these figures, because this came directly from The Department of Highways, but I would be pleased to get those figures for the hon. member as to the number of employees.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I should not really be asking the minister again—it is almost by way of repetition—but in terms of his own future programme, does this branch have at hand an estimate of the number of trees that are diseased, roughly where they are in the province, how many men would be required to cut them down, how long a time we can wait before they are cut down and what the costs are? Do we have some sense of that in the department?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We estimate that we have somewhere between 15 to 20 million trees to be removed; we also know the areas. We have a lot of information. This information has been gathered over a period of years. We know the areas. We have also had dealings with municipalities and, as I said earlier, I am optimistic that sometime—perhaps this fall will be a good time—we could have a programme on a cost-sharing basis with municipalities to remove these trees.

Mr. Lewis: Right. Is the minister speaking of a 50-50 shared-cost programme, or 80-20? Has he come to a formula?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This has not been decided.

Mr. Lewis: That has not been decided. Does he have a programme in mind which would run over a number of years in a systematic way, gradually eliminating diseased elms entirely from Ontario, if that is possible?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. Lewis: That is what he has in mind. But he has not costed it yet?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: No. We know that in Toronto, for instance, it is very expensive—it costs somewhere around $200 to remove a dead elm—while in smaller municipalities the cost is considerably less. But in the cities it is a very high cost.

Mr. Lewis: Does the minister know how many trees were actually removed under the programme over the winter along Highways 400 and 401? Could he give us a dollar cost?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I could obtain that information. I will obtain it and send it to the hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Would you mind? Before the vote, it should be rather interesting to know how many people were actually employed and for what periods, so we get a return on investment, as it were.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Oshawa.

Mr. Pilkey: Mr. Chairman, just to follow that questioning through. It appears to me, under this programme, that Highways is involved, Agriculture is involved, Lands and Forests is involved. Why all the duplication of administration in this field? Highways was in charge of the employees; Agriculture got into the act by allowing farmers $5 for each tree that was cut down; you were involved through your department.

Why is this whole programme not centralized and I would think most legitimately under your department, as opposed to fragmenting the programme through Agriculture and Highways as well?

Mr. Boyer: That is team work.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that there is fragmentation. The programme that was announced by the Minister of Agriculture and Food is on private agricultural lands whereby they will get $5. There are no complications there; this is an incentive to farmers.

The programme last year was administered by The Department of Highways because those trees were mainly adjacent to highways. We are involved. Should there be a programme with municipalities, again this would probably come under my colleague the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Bales), because this would be a sharing programme. But we have the expertise in our department, personnel who can evaluate the areas where the trees have to be removed, so that there has to be an involvement of several departments. But we work very closely so there is no fragmentation, there is no problem there.

Mr. Pilkey: With great respect, Mr. Chairman, this government has not always demonstrated that. At times I wonder if you talk to one another.

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): Oh come now!

Mr. Pilkey: It is true. Sometimes I wonder whether they talk to one another.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: At least we are not dictators.

Mr. Pilkey: The minister suggested that in a city it is $200 per tree, and the Minister of Agriculture as an incentive to farmers gave them $5. I suppose that is a legitimate cost; $5 is not a great deal of money for doing that kind of a job. Why is the programme not expanded to people on private lands other than farmers? The policy does not go beyond the farmer who has in excess of $3,000 income, as I recall the announcement by the Minister of Agriculture.

It seems to me that if that is a viable cost for cutting down a tree through your department, then it should be expanded to private lands and we get the job done that much cheaper. You said that you did not know what the average cost was for cutting the trees down on 401 and 400, as we relate it to the number of people who were employed.

I suspect very strongly it was at least $5 per tree—maybe in excess of that. So it would appear to me that the programme could be expanded to those people on private lands who are not engaged in the agricultural industry, and I want to know if the minister has given this any consideration?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: It is a very good suggestion, Mr. Chairman, and I think this could be incorporated. In this programme the municipalities would be involved. Naturally the municipalities look after private lands which are non-agricultural. The member is making the point, I believe, that not only agricultural land but other private lands could be included. It is a very good suggestion.

Mr. Pilkey: I make that observation on the basis of the programme of $5. The minister talked about a shared cost with the municipalities. With great respect to the minister through you, Mr. Chairman, the municipalities are being killed with these shared-cost programmes.

The taxes in the municipalities are high enough and every time a government comes up with a programme, they say it is a shared cost, 50-50 or 75 by the provincial government, 25 per cent by the municipalities, and the municipalities are finding themselves in a very precarious position in terms of finances. They are just cutting every programme as it is. And to initiate another shared-cost programme with the municipalities just seems ludicrous to me.

If we are really serious about cutting down the diseased elm trees in the Province of Ontario, I think the costs ought to be ours as a province, as opposed to the municipalities.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Same kind of leadership! It starts at Ottawa.

Mr. Spence: There is considerable interest among a lot of people. What is an elm tree? I have had a number of telephone calls. Is it two inches in diameter, four inches or six inches and what is the difference between a sapling and an elm tree?

Mr. Lewis: And its nationality is not Dutch, in spite of the name of the disease.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Only the disease.

Mr. Lewis: Precisely.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Any size is a tree.

Mr. Spence: Even if it is only two inches?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Even if it is only two inches.

Mr. Nixon: That is quite a policy statement.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): In the Dutch elm disease programme, how many board feet of merchantable material was recovered?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: As I mentioned earlier, The Department of Highways looked after this programme. I would be pleased to get that information for the hon. member.

Mr. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, many publications have come out of the department in the last few months, and there really have been many—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. Nixon: In one of them, I remember reading some reference to the elm difficulties and that a certain spray protection was going to preserve trees in some areas. Has there been some effort made to be sure that some growth of elm trees will be carefully protected and preserved so that we can show the kids what they used to be like?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, Mr. Chairman,—

Mr. Nixon: I do not think the minister is going to be able to save one tree.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We never give up, and there is a lot of research on this matter, not only by our department, but the federal department as well.

Mr. Nixon: Is it the minister's department that thought of the zinc nails?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I do not believe so. I appreciate the member's suggestion. We are trying to find a way to preserve some of the existing elms. This is research continuing on at the moment. There has been, to my knowledge, no known cure.

Mr. Lewis: It is the whole—

Mr. Chairman: Anything else on item 2?

Mr. Lewis: Does the minister mean all Ontario elms are destined for doom? Is that it as it now stands? He is simply setting up the programme to take them all down?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Also, what is important, Mr. Chairman, is the replacement programme. As the trees are being removed we should replace them.

Mr. Lewis: I want to add just one little footnote and then leave it. I was rather encouraged by what the minister said because one of his other cabinet colleagues—the House leader for today, Mr. Chairman—has just thrown $125 million down the drain by way of a rebate in a programme which may not create one additional physical job.

The hon. minister has just indicated to us that the government can create what obviously amounts to several thousands of jobs. The hon. minister is nodding his head in assent. Why does the hon. minister not cast his eye quietly over to the part of the House where a minister sits and creates several thousands of jobs; admittedly, not the most permanent jobs in the world, but jobs that will give people employment.

All he needs, in that sense, are some millions of dollars to do it. The government has got a programme which is tossing $125 million away. The minister can go back to the Treasury Board and ask for a five per cent rebate on the $125 million programme and put a few thousand people to work in Ontario.

Mr. Chairman: Item 2? Carried.

Anything on item 3?

Mr. R. S. Smith: I would just like to ask the minister what percentage of the air service is used in protection and for departmental work as opposed to the air service that is provided for the rest of the government?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Between 25 to 50 per cent of our aircraft are used for fire protection.

Mr. R. S. Smith: But what percentage is used for departmental work as compared to what is provided to other departments of the government?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The majority of our planes are used for departmental purposes, such as wintertime surveys of deer and moose. We only have fewer than five planes available specifically for transportation purposes.

Mr. Nixon: Are they all Twin Otters?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes, an Executive Twin Otter, a Kingair and a Beechcraft Duke—those are the three executive ones.

Mr. Sopha: At one time the minister had more than the Americans had in Vietnam.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We are reducing our—

Mr. R. S. Smith: There are only three planes then, and these are used—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: These are the three planes strictly for passenger service. We also have, I believe, 27 turbo Beavers and 10 Otters; these are the planes that are used for management purposes. At the same time, we can use them for the—

An hon. member: This is the first time they have admitted they had three planes.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: —transportation of personnel.

Mr. Sopha: He offered me a ride one time and then cancelled it.

Mr. R. S. Smith: What the minister is saying is—

Mr. Sopha: He wrote me a letter.

Mr. R. S. Smith: What the minister is saying is that he has three planes that are in the continual service of the government, but not particularly The Department of Lands and Forests; their particular service is to the needs of the ministry and the government.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Maybe this would answer the member's question—90 per cent of our flying by our aircraft is for management purposes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Yes, but I think the hon. minister has said, for the first time, that there are three planes that are used—

Mr. Nixon: I did not know he had use for them.

Mr. R. S. Smith: —for the transportation—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes, transportation.

Mr. R. S. Smith: —mostly perhaps of government officials.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: That is right. I hope that we have the hon. member for Nipissing—

Mr. R. S. Smith: Pardon?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I hope the member has been on our planes.

Mr. R. S. Smith: I have not been on the executive ones; just the ones the hon. minister is using for management of the programmes.

Mr. Chairman, I have some questions on the next part.

Mr. Chairman: Are we finished with item 2? Carried.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the committee rise and report progress and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply begs to report that it has come to a certain resolution and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Minister of Revenue) Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of the members, on Monday we will reserve the right to call numbers 1, 3 or 15. I would think we will probably begin with number 15 and return to the discussion that was on the floor today.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 1:00 o'clock, p.m.
